

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

THE design of the present work is to rescue from oblivion some remembrance of one of the most interesting of our monastic structures.

Amongst the numerous works of local history, of which England has reason to boast, but few have been devoted to the illustration of her monastic houses, their memorials having usually been dismissed in a summary manner. The parish of Isleworth and chapelry of Hounslow have hitherto been but superficially noticed by writers on the general topography of Middlesex; and the concise and abbreviated accounts by the Rev. Daniel Lysons, in his "Environs of London," are the best at present extant.

In the prosecution of the present work, the Author has availed himself of every attainable source of information; and from the numerous records, scarce and curious manuscripts, charters, and parochial documents, which have been assiduously examined, he feels assured that, with all its defects, the present history will be found to contain a considerable portion of original and interesting matter.

It cannot, however, be expected that every topic discussed should be of interest to all; but it must be borne in mind, that the portions distasteful to some, may to others be most acceptable and useful.

In the topographical account of Isleworth, the Author's object has been to notice its antiquities, its schools, and charitable institutions, with their endowments, the customs of the manors comprised in the parish, its more distinguished residents, the principal mansions of the nobility and gentry, and such other miscellaneous subjects as are usually introduced into similar works; and he trusts, that nothing either generally or locally interesting has been omitted. The same remarks are also applicable to the chapelry of Hounslow.

It is a pleasing duty to record the liberal assistance and polite attentions received from the various gentlemen to whom the Author has had occasion to apply, during the progress of the Work.

To the Lord Bishop of Llandaff, Dean of St. Paul's, he has to express his obligations for permitting him to transcribe the MS. containing the "Additions" (in English) to the rules for the government of Syon Monastery, preserved in the Cathedral Library of St. Paul. To the Rev. R. H. Barham, also, for the politeness with which he assisted him whilst availing himself of his Lordship's liberality.

The "Additions" here alluded to exist in duplicate: one copy relates to the Nuns, the other to the Monks; both verbally alike, excepting a few regulations peculiar to each class. The copy in the British Museum relating to the Nuns is defective, and in part obliterated, and no other was known to exist until the Rev. R. H. Barham recently discovered, in the Cathedral Library, one entire copy of that relating to the Monks. These have been collated, the one transcribed, and the variations, as respect sex, found in the other, inserted between brackets, forming, as the Author believes, the most complete account of the internal economy of an English Monastery that has yet been presented to the public. A table of signs, intended as the medium of communication during the enjoined period of silence, is appended, by the use of which the inmates of the Monastery were enable to avoid incurring the penance attendant on breach of that regulation.

To the Principals of the various public depositories of records he has great pleasure in acknowledging the liberty and facility granted by them in the transcription of MSS. preserved in their respective offices.

To the Rev. Henry Lea, of the Bavarian Chapel, London, the Author has to return his grateful thanks for his kindness in procuring for him, through the medium of the Rev. Joseph Hsley, Vice-President of the English College at Lisbon, the loan of a curious and interesting MS. from the present community of Syon House Monastery, Lisbon, containing a recital of the peregrinations and personal treatment of the Bridgetine Nuns on the Continent from the period of their second dissolution by Queen Elizabeth to their settlement at Lisbon in 1594, together with a list of the Abbesses and General Confessors from the foundation of the Monastery to the present time, as also the names of the present community at Lisbon—to John Gage Rokewode, Esq. Fellow and Director of the Antiquarian Society, and Marlow Sidney, Esq. of Cowpen Hall, Northumberland, for an account of the arrival of the Nuns in England in 1809, on their seeking refuge from the calamities of the Continent, and of their stay in England; and to the Rev. Dr. Rock, who kindly furnished him with impressions of five seals, together with an account of the MSS. books, and other curious relics which formerly belonged to the same community, and are now in the possession of the Earl of Shrewsbury at Alton Towers, Staffordshire.

For the drawing of the ancient door-way discovered at Syon House some years ago, the Author is indebted to Charles Fowler Esq., Secretary to the Royal Institute of British Architects; and for the ancient woodcut of St. Bridget, to John Jackson, Esq. who very obligingly allowed him to have a cast taken from a block in his possession.<sup>1</sup>

"The figure writing is that of St. Bridget, of Sweden, who was born in 1302, and died in 1372. From the figure of the Virgin with the infant Christ in her arms we may suppose that the artist intended to represent the pious widow writing an account of her visions or revelations, in which she was frequently favoured with the appearance of the Blessed Virgin. The pilgrim's hat, staff, and scrip probably allude to her pilgrimage to Jerusalem, which she was induced to make in consequence of a vision. The letters S P Q R in a shield, may perhaps be intended to denote the place Rome, where she saw the vision, and where she died. The lion, the arms of Sweden, and the crown at her feet, are most likely intended to denote

The Author is also under many obligations to Charles George Young, Esq. F.S.A. York Herald, for his kindness in allowing him access to the MSS. in the College of Arms, and for the interest he has evinced during the progress of the work; as also to James Orchard Halliwell, Esq. F.R.S. and S.A. of Jesus College, Cambridge, for his valuable communications respecting MSS. formerly belonging to Syon Monastery, and which are now preserved in the libraries of Cambridge and Oxford.

For an account of the charitable institutions of Isleworth, and much local information, he returns his best thanks to the Rev. Henry Glossop, Vicar; to Horatio G. Day, Esq. and to Mr. M. Adams, of that she was a princess of the blood royal of that kingdom. The words above the figure of the saint are a brief invocation in the German language, 'O Brigida bit Got fur uns!' 'O Bridget, pray to God for us!' At the foot of the desk at which St. Bridget is writing are certain letters which I cannot very well make out. They are meant perhaps for M. J. CHRI. and intended to denote the name of the Virgin and of Christ.

"It is coarsely coloured, and apparently by the hand, unassisted with the stencil. The face and hands are of a flesh colour. Her gown, as well as the pilgrim's hat and scrip, are of a dark gray; her veil, which she wears hoodwise, is partly black and partly white; and the wimple which she wears round her neck is also white. The bench and desk, the pilgrim's staff, the letters M P Q R, the lion, the crown, and the nimbus surrounding the head of St. Bridget, and that of the Virgin, are yellow. The ground is green, and the whole cut is surrounded with a border of a shining mulberry or lake colour."

Isleworth, as also to the Rev. Joseph Benson, D.D. Perpetual Curate of Hounslow Chapel, and John Willesford, Esq. of Chelsea, for information of the like nature respecting the chapelry of Hounslow.

The Author, likewise, takes this opportunity of returning his most grateful thanks to John Gough Nichols, Esq. F.S.A. for the zealous co-operation and numerous important suggestions, together with other communications of the highest value, which he afforded whilst the following pages were passing through the press.

And, finally, concludes the gratifying duty of returning thanks by acknowledging the kindness and readiness with which, in every quarter, his researches have been facilitated, and his inquiries answered.

HISTORY

INTRODUCTION.

It may be neither inapplicable nor uninteresting, before we enter upon the history which forms the subject of the present work, to prefix a short account of the rise and progress of monachism, and of the life of St. Bridget, the foundress of the order of St. Saviour and St. Bridget of Syon.

All ecclesiastical writers agree that Egypt was the country which afforded the first example of the monastic life; but it is difficult to ascertain rightly who were the first promoters of it.

We are, however, informed, that as early as the days of our Saviour, and probably much earlier, the deserts of Egypt and Syria were inhabited by a Jewish sect, called Essenes in Syria, and Therapeutæ in Egypt. The austerities which they appear to have practiced to heighten the merit of their retirement already offered a very lively image of the primitive monastic discipline.<sup>1</sup> called by the Greeks "μοναχοι," solitaires.' Their example gave so much reputation to retirement, that the practice was continued when the reason of its commencement had ceased. And, indeed, in a hot climate, and a plentiful luxuriant soil, there was something inviting to this kind of peaceful repose besides motives of religion.

It was during this persecution that Paul, a native of the Lower Thebais in Egypt, fearing to be declared Christian by his brother-in-law, who sought to enjoy his estate, fled into the desert and hid himself in a cave at the foot of a rock, where he is said to have lived for 88 years, and to have died at the age of 113 years.<sup>1</sup>

To St. Anthony is ascribed the first institution of persons living in common for religious purposes, and therefore called Cœnobites, to whom he prescribed rules for the direction of their conduct.<sup>2</sup> Another Egyptian, named Pachomius, divides with St. Anthony the fame of this enterprise, in as far, at least, as he immediately extended to the Upper Thebais the work which Anthony commenced in the Lower.<sup>4</sup> According to Cassian, the recluses of Egypt were divided into three classes: the Cœnobites, the Anchorites, and the Sarabaites. The two first, it appears, were nearly equal in number, and formed the genuine portion of the profession.

<sup>3</sup> It is true that certain heretical orders, Maronites, Jacobites, Nestorians, &c. professed to follow the rules of St. Anthony; but St. Anthony delivered, in fact, no rule. When solicited to impose some code upon his disciples, he is said to have presented them the Bible—an eternal and universal rule. Waddington, Hist. Ch. c. xix. after Hospin. lib. ii. c. 4.

<sup>4</sup> Helyot's Hist. des Ord. Mon. Dissert. Prelim. p. 42 and c. xiv. p. 154. For an account of these monks see Sozomen, Hist. Eccl. lib. iii. c. xiv. The rule of Pachomius is printed in Fosbroke's Brit. Mon. p. 38, edit. 4to. We do not find at this time any monastery which followed this ancient rule. Pachomius was the first who governed by a code of rules (Summè des Devoirs de la Vie Monast. b. i. p. 11); but according to Dogdale (Pref. Mon. vol. i.) both St. Fructuosus and St. Basil claim precedence of this Saint.

The last were regarded as spurious brethren, being independent, and having no fixed rule or residence.*

From the deserts of the Thebais, the monastic, and also the military life spread into Ethiopia. The Abyssinian monks observed great austerities. They were very strict in their vows, many of them eating but once in two days; and others never but upon Sundays.

During the sixth century, (the epoch from which the monastic system may be properly dated,) the number of the monks and nuns of Egypt alone, according to Fleury,† amounted to more than twenty-six thousand. The primitive monks of Egypt were thronged by the multitudes who emulated their manner of life. "The Egyptians," says Gibbon, "were gladdened in this marvellous revolution, were disposed to dispute and to believe that the number of the monks was equal to the remainder of the people; and possibly might repeat the saying, which had formerly been applied to the sacred animals of the same country, that in Egypt a man was as common as a bird, and a god than a man."

The regulations which Anthony made in Egypt, were soon introduced into Palestine and Syria by his disciple Helianus. According to Jerome, "there was neither monk nor nun who did not know him; but he was the prince in that and in the other provinces."

From Syria the pygmalion monasticism was transmitted to Pontus and the shores of the Black Sea, and there it found a principal person the most eminent among its primitive practitioners, the bishopric of Cæsarea, who was called the patriarch of the Black Sea monks.

In the East this monastic discipline was introduced by the monks of the Thebais, during his sojourn at Rome in the year 430. It is believed that he carried in his train certain monks and anchorets, representatives of the Egyptian commonwealth, whose devout demeanour engaged the reverence of the Romans, and induced many to follow their example. According to Jerome,<sup>1</sup> "Marcella was the first of the noble ladies who embraced the monastic life at Rome, and that she was instructed by Athanasius and Peter his successor, who fled to Rome for shelter against the Arian persecution."<sup>2</sup> Thence the monastic practice was instantly diffused throughout Italy, and at Milan especially, it obtained a powerful support in the patronage of Ambrose.<sup>3</sup> Some time after, St. Martin of Tours fixed his cell in France, and his example, it appears, was followed by eighty other monks.<sup>4</sup>

The rule commonly professed by the original Western monks, was that of St. Basil. There appears to have been no distinction in order or dignity; all were united by one common appellation, extending from the deserts of Pontus to the green valleys of Ireland; the austerity of the institution, however, becoming more mitigated as it travelled further West. No large territorial endowments had yet been attached to religious houses, and their support was chiefly derived from individual charity or superstition.<sup>5</sup>

During the course of the fifth century, the number, credit, and influence of the monks augmented daily in all parts of the Christian world, especially in the East, where whole armies might have been raised out of the monastic order, without perceptibly diminishing that enormous body.

about the year 529, instituted an entirely new order. He, probably, bore in mind the hermits of Egypt, and the monks of the Eastern church, in the institution of his order. His objects were, however, more useful; and the means he made choice of better adapted to human nature, and to secure the benefit of civil society.

Of the numerous branches which sprang from the stem of St. Benedict, and overshadowed Europe,—the Clugniacs, the Carthusians, the learned congregation of St. Maur, the Carmelites, the Celestines, the Camaldules, the Grandmontines, and the order of Cisteaux or Cisterrians, to which last belonged the order of La Trappe, were the most celebrated; all of whom, though they lived under the rule of St. Benedict, yet differed in many of their own peculiar and subordinate observances.

The four grand orders of the Latin church are the Augustinian,<sup>1</sup> the Dominican, the Franciscan, and the Benedictine. Of these, the latter is by far the most celebrated. The three first of these religious orders are friars: the latter only are monks. The friars (fratres or brethren) may be termed societies, formed of religious men, whose object is to withdraw from the world, in order to enjoy religious fellowship, and reap spiritual instruction together. The monks (monachi or solitaires) may be defined, men whose object is to worship God in solitude apart from all human society; men who, whilst they reside in one house, from the necessity of providing mutual subsistence, are yet as much separated from each other's intercourse, as though the antipodes divided them. The houses of the first are termed convents, those of the latter monasteries. The first, as the name imports, implies a society of brethren coming together, whilst the latter denotes a cluster of independent and isolated recluses.

<sup>1</sup> The canons of the order of St. Augustine (whose rule was followed by the order of St. Bridget), are said to have been founded by St. Augustine, bishop of Hippo, A.D. 395, but they are undoubtedly of later date. We have good authority for believing, that it was not till about the twelfth century that these canons had the title of St. Augustine conferred on them. (See Hist. des Ord. Mon. vol. ii. p. 15.) According to Reyner, Apostol. Benedict. tr. i. p. 137, they were first brought into England by Athelwulphus or Adulphus, confessor to Henry I., and had their first house at Nostell in Yorkshire; but they seem not to have been settled there till Thurstan was Archbishop of York, and that was not till 1114. Thurstan was elected 15 Aug. 1114, but not consecrated until Oct. 1119. (Wilkin's Cathedrals, vol. i. p. 34.)

It is very justly observed by Waddington,<sup>1</sup> that "the original principles of monachism were entirely genuine of the evils which flowed from it in later ages. In the East, it was the passion for retirement and contemplation which chiefly contributed to people the mountains and wildernesses with holy recluses. In the West, it was rather a desire of association for useful purposes, which caused the construction of so many monasteries. Schools were connected with their establishment, and whatever impulse was given to the human understanding proceeded from them. In both they were effectual in drawing off from the virtual exercise of paganism those nominal proselytes, extremely numerous in all ranks of the laity, who concealed, under the profession of Christianity, a lingering affection for the hereditary superstition. It is, indeed, true, that such an institution could not have originated, except in a very peculiar and unhappy condition of society; that it took root and flourished in general demoralization, and public and private misery. But on the other hand it is equally true, that it operated for some ages with great efficacy in abating the evils out of which it sprang."

Having thus giving a short account of the first institution and progress of monachism, we shall now proceed to a similar account of the first establishment of Nuns, as bearing a more immediate relation to our present work.

It appears that in the primitive church, certain matrons or widows of eminent sanctity, were chosen for the purpose of ministering to the necessities of the poor, and the performance of several other offices that tended to the maintenance of order and decency in the church, and were called deaconesses.' They had a place allotted to them called the Almonry,<sup>1</sup> and were clothed in one uniform dress called a black mantle. They were not bound by any irrevocable vow, but merely observed certain times for rest and for silence, for the offices of the house, and for going abroad. In process of time they were called nuns,<sup>2</sup> or holy women.<sup>3</sup>

St. Syncletica is generally supposed to have been the first foundress of nunneries, or religious women living in community, as St. Anthony was of monasteries.<sup>4</sup> She was the descendant of a Macedonian family, settled in Alexandria. Her parents, at their death, left her heiress to their opulent estate, which she soon distributed among the poor, and retired into a lonesome monument, on a relation's estate, where, having sent for a priest, she cut off her hair in his presence, as a sign whereby she renounced the world, and consecrated herself to God.<sup>5</sup> It is, however, certain, that about the middle of the fourth century many such establishments were founded in the East.<sup>6</sup> During the fifth century, according to Theodoret, there were a great number of vir-gins consecrated to God, not only in the East, but in every province where the name of Christ was known, who either lived in common, or by themselves, practising the exercises of a monastic life.<sup>1</sup>

The establishment of nunneries in the West is ascribed to a noble Roman lady, named Marcella, who, having lost her husband in the seventh month of her marriage, resolved to imitate the lives of the Ascetics of the East.<sup>2</sup> Her example, it appears, found many imitators, and Rome was, in a short time, filled with monasteries.<sup>3</sup> It is, however, recorded, that while St. Benedict was inventing his new institution for the brothers of his obedience, his sister Scholastica was raising the standard round which holy virgins might collect with greater regularity and discipline. It is observed, however, that the rule of her disciples was rather given in restoration of a prior observance, than on any new principle of religious seclusion. Certain obligations were ordained as in the primitive establishments; and the first Benedictine nuns were, in fact, rather reformed nuns of St. Basil, than a distinct order. Nevertheless, they flourished so rapidly, that, according to the assertion of Pope Gregory the Great, Rome contained three thousand "handmaids of God" (Ancillæ Dei), who followed the Benedictine rule.<sup>4</sup>

From the Lives of the Saints in these early periods, and innumerable authorities, it also appears, that it was customary with devotees to migrate from country to country, until a situation for settlement was found suitable to inclination and convenience; and the site desired was to be solitary and yet pleasant. The rules to which the convents of nuns were subject, are said to have been formed, for the most part, upon those which bound the monks. The following constitution of Cardinal Ottoboni will, however, show that the nuns were under greater restrictions. By the Canon orders they were not allowed to go beyond particular places, the church, dormitory, refectory, chapter-house and cloister—the church surrounded on all sides by walls; the chapter house for penitential exercises, the cloister at vacant hours for spiritual meditation, the dormitory and refectory for temperate refreshments at stated times. Seculars were not to be admitted to their cloister. The nuns were not to converse with men, either religious or secular, unless in public or unsuspected places, and then with serious or compendious conversation, not intermixed with tales or stories, and attended by an old nun; the times of confession were excepted. They were not to eat in company (when out of their monastery) with any of the other sex, who was not so allied to them by consanguinity, that no evil suspicions could ensue; they were not allowed to go to the infirmary, except when they themselves were sick, or to the offices (not even those whose duty it was to inspect them), without companions. The abbess or prioress herself was not to leave the house, but on necessary occasions, and then in respectable company; no leave of absence<sup>1</sup> was to be granted to the inferior nuns, but on just and necessary causes, nor without the company of one of a character which excluded suspicion.<sup>2</sup> towards the end of the fourth century, at Verona, by Zeno, bishop of that city. The first convent for females established in England, was that of Folkestone in Kent, founded by Eanswitha, daughter of Eadbald, king of Kent, A.D. 630. It was, in process of time, according to Capgrave (in Vita S. Eanswide, p. 97.) swallowed up by the sea, or, according to others, destroyed by the Danes; and after that, granted by king Atholstan, in the year 927, to Christ Church in Canterbury. In the language of monastic discipline, the chief of those virtues which are not absolutely imposed on every christian, is obedience. To obedience was added the strictest attention to chastity. It appears, however, that in the very early ages, the virgins who were dedicated to religious purposes could enter without any scandal into the state of marriage.<sup>1</sup> Yet this breach of discipline was loudly declared against by that patriarch of monasticism, St. Basil, who did not hesitate to pronounce it to be incest, prostitution, and adultery; and the same sacred obedience to the irrevocable vow was exacted by Ambrose and Augustine. Pope Leo I.<sup>2</sup> particularly condemns the nuns who married after they had voluntarily taken the vow of chastity, although they had not been consecrated. By the sixteenth canon of the council of Chalcedon, they were made liable, together with their husbands, to the sentence of excommunication. Should they elude the execution of this regulation, another law deprived them of dower after the death of their husbands, pronounced their children illegitimate, and rendered them incapable of inheritance. Penance was likewise imposed upon those who violated their vow. In subsequent ages imprisonment, tortures, and death were finally resorted to, as the punishments for monastic incontinence.<sup>3</sup>

The ceremony of consecration and the imposition of the veil were of very early origin.<sup>4</sup> Monks and nuns might profess their obedience to a particular monastic rule in the hands of the abbat or abbess; but the consecration of a virgin was considered of greater importance; it was exclusively reserved to the ministry of the bishop, and attached by a decree of Gelasius I. in the fifth century, except in cases of extreme sickness, to the principal festivals of the year; and at Easter, the Epiphany, and on the feasts of the Apostles, in the presence of the people, before the altar, and at the feet of the chief pastor, the voluntary victim, who by this ceremony was said in the language of the time to have been wedded to Christ, renounced the pleasures of the world, that she might obtain a future but immortal crown.' The words "aspice, filia, et intuere; et obliviscere populum tuum et domum patris tui, ut concupiscat rex decorum tuum," pronounced on this occasion, were prescribed by the fourth council of Carthage; but they varied, or were entirely changed, in subsequent times. The age at which the novice might be consecrated was equally variable, and seems to have been left, at least in early times, to the discretion of the prelate. An age as advanced as sixty years, appears at first to have been usual; but St. Ambrose gives reasons for permitting the veil to be sooner assumed; and the age of twenty-five was afterwards (generally, though by no means universally) established as the earliest, at which the recluse was permitted to place the indelible seal upon her resolution.*

During the Saxon period the retirement of the cloister appears to have possessed peculiar attractions. The Saxon ladies refused to await the erection of convents in their native country, but resorted to the foreign establishments of Faremoutier, Chelles, and Andeli; and the former of these houses was successively governed by abbesses of the royal race of Hengist. However, before the close of the seventh century, the southern Saxons possessed several communities of nuns under the guidance of certain princesses. In Northumbria, at the same period, the abbess Heiu, the first lady among the Northerns who put on the monastic veil, governed, under the patronage of the Bishop Aidan, a small and obscure convent at Hereteu, or the isle of the hart.†

In the succeeding reigns the number of convents continually increased. The deportment of the nuns was regular and edifying: but the abbesses assumed a pomp which ill accorded with the ideas of those who admired the poverty of ancient recluses.<sup>2</sup> When Ethelwold, bishop of Winchester, was labouring to revive the original discipline of the Benedictine institute, he saw at court the abbess Editha, daughter of king Edgar. Her dress was splendid, and shocked the austere notions of the prelate. "Daughter," he observed to her, "the spouse whom you have chosen, delights not in external pomp. It is the heart that he demands." "True, father," replied the abbess, "and my heart I have given him. While he possesses it, he will not be offended with external pomp."

The dress of the Anglo-Saxon nuns was not uniform. Many of them retained a great part of the dress which they had worn in a secular life. The following is the dress of one of these noble or royal nuns, as described by St. Aldhelm. "Her under vest was of fine linen, of a violet colour; above this she wore a scarlet tunic, with wide sleeves, and a hood striped with silk; her sleeves were of red leather; the locks on her forehead and temples were curled with irons; and a veil was tied to her head with ribands, crossed over her breast, and permitted to fall behind to the ground." He adds, "that her nails were pared to a point, that they might resemble the talons of the falcon." However, by the Synod of

<sup>2</sup> In the Anglo-Saxon æra abbesses attended councils and subscribed their signatures, no less than abbats and other ecclesiastics. Hutchinson's Hist. of Durham, vol. i. p. 51. The first instance of such assumption of equality is said to have been at the council of Beconfeld in Kent.

Cloveshoc, works of ornament were discouraged in nunneries, a greater attention to prayer and reading was recommended, and such habits ordered to be worn as became those who had renounced for ever the pleasures and the vanities of the world. In the Synod of Calcuith, the papal legates severely condemned the use of garments dyed with Indian colours.<sup>1</sup>

The dress of an Abbess of the 12th century, consisted of a long white tunic, with close sleeves, probably made of linen, and a black surcoat of equal length with the tunic, the sleeves of the surcoat being large and close, and the hood drawn up so as to cover the head completely.<sup>2</sup>

Nunneries were oftentimes places of refuge for females in time of war. At the time of the Norman Conquest, many of the Saxon women took the black veil of the nuns as a safeguard from the licentiousness of the conquerors.<sup>3</sup> When they afterwards wished to return to society, a council was held to deliberate on the question of setting at liberty such women as had taken the veil against their wish. Archbishop Lanfranc presided at this council, which was attended by many bishops and other persons of high rank. The primate's opinion was, that such of them as had taken refuge in the convents in order to save their chastity, ought not to be punished for obeying the sacred precepts, but that the doors of the cloisters should be opened to all that requested it. This opinion prevailed, and such of the female refugees as had still a family, a home, and protectors, recovered their liberty.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>3</sup> This licentiousness was so great, that the princess Matilda, daughter of Malcolm Canmore, King of Scotland, and niece to Edgar Atheling, who had been brought to England, and educated under her aunt Christina, in the nunnery of Rumsey in Hampshire, and was afterwards married to Hen. I. thought it necessary to wear the religious habit, in order to preserve her person from violation. Before a great council of the Anglo-Norman clergy which was summoned at Lambeth, she herself declared, that she had been induced by no other motive to put on the veil. And the council admitted her plea, in the following memorable words:—"When the great King William conquered this land, many of his followers, elated with their extraordinary success, and thinking that all things ought to be subservient to their will and pleasure, not only seized the possessions of the vanquished, but invaded the honour of their matrons and virgins. Hence many young ladies, who dreaded such violence, were induced to seek shelter in convents, and even to take the veil as a further security to their virtue." Eadmer, Hist. lib. iii.

The suppression of the nunneries by Henry the Eighth excited much disapprobation; for, whatever the prejudices, or just charges against the monks, the same did not exist against the nuns in general. They were in fact places of education for the young females in their vicinity, who boarded with the nuns, and were instructed by them in needle-work, and other useful accomplishments. It appears that such was the desire of the English nobility to have their daughters educated in a nunnery, that they obliged the nuns to receive more sisters than they could support, which was afterwards prohibited by Gregory X.<sup>2</sup>

It has been observed that, in many of the monasteries, a society of men were subject to the spiritual government of a woman. Such being the case with Syon Monastery, the following account of the origin of Double Monasteries is given on the authority of Dr. Lingard.<sup>3</sup>

In a learned disquisition on Double Monasteries, he says, "This scheme of monastic polity, singular as it may now appear, was once adopted in most christian countries. Its origin may be ascribed to the severity, with which the founders of religious orders have always prohibited every species of unnecessary intercourse, between their female disciples and persons of the other sex. To prevent it entirely was impracticable. The functions of the sacred ministry had always been the exclusive privilege of the men; and they alone were able to support the fatigues of hushandry, and conduct the extensive estates, which many convents had received from the piety of their benefactors. But it was conceived that the difficulty might be diminished, if it could not be removed; and with this view some monastic legislators devised the plan of establishing double monasteries. In the vicinity of the edifice, destined to receive the virgins who had dedicated their chastity to God, was erected a building for the residence of a society of monks or canons, whose duty it was to officiate at the altar, and superintend the external economy of the community. The mortified and religious life, to which they had bound themselves by the most solemn engagements, was supposed to render them superior to temptation; and to remove even the suspicion of evil, they were strictly forbidden to enter the inclosure of the women, except on particular occasions, with the permission of the superior, and in the presence of witnesses. But the abbess retained the supreme controul over the monks, as well as the nuns; their prior depended on her choice, and was bound to regulate his conduct by her instructions.

"During the two first centuries after the conversion of our ancestors, the principal monasteries were established on this plan; nor are we certain that there existed any others of a different description. They were held in the highest estimation; the most distinguished of the Saxon female Saints, and many of the most eminent prelates, were educated in them; and so edifying was the deportment of the greatest part of these communities, that the breath of slander never presumed to tarnish their character. The monastery of Coldingham alone forms an exception."

"To St. Columban this institute was indebted for its propagation in France; and from the houses of his order, which were long the favourite resort of the Saxon ladies, it was probably introduced into England."

<sup>1</sup> Notwithstanding the above assertion, it is well known that the Anglo-Saxon Kings were famous (or rather infamous) for the constupration of nuns.

LIFE OF ST. BRIDGET.

HE rule of discipline followed in Syon Monastery was composed by St. Birgit, more commonly called Bridget, or Brigit. She was the daughter of Birger, a prince of the royal blood of Sweden, and legislator of Upland,<sup>1</sup> and of Ingeburgis, daughter to Sigridis, a lady descended from the Kings of the Goths. Ingeburgis died soon after the birth of our saint, which happened in the year 1304, and Bridget was brought up by an aunt. In obedience to her father, when she was only sixteen years of age, she married Ulpho, Prince of Nericia, in Sweden. They passed the first year after their marriage in continence; and, having enrolled themselves in the third order of St. Francis, lived in their own house as if they had been in a regular and austere monastery. They afterwards had eight children, four boys and four girls. Two of her sons died in the holy war in Palestine; and one of her two daughters, who became nuns, Catharine, was honoured as a saint.<sup>2</sup> After the birth of these children, St. Bridget and her husband built a hospital, in which they served the sick with their own hands.

After her husband's death, which took place in Sweden in 1344, at the monastery of Alvastre, of the Cistercian order, Bridget renounced the rank of princess, divided her property among her children, and from that day seemed to forget what she had been in the world. She changed her habit, using no linen except a veil to cover her head, wearing a rough hair shirt, and a girdle of knotted cords. The austerities which she practised are astonishing; it is said that she dropped scalding wax on herself, to impress more vividly on her memory the sufferings of the Son of God in his Passion.' On Fridays she redoubled her mortifications and exercises, allowing herself no food but a little bread and water. About the time of her husband's death, she built the great monastery of Wastein, in the diocess of Lincopen, in Sweden, for nuns, and monks.*

Upsal, twelve leagues to the north-west, was then, and long after, the capital of Upland and of all Sweden. In the vast cathedral which is covered with brass, like many other places in Sweden, among the tombs of ancient Kings and Archbishops, is shewn that of St. Bridget's father.

After having spent two years in this monastery, she undertook a pilgrimage to Rome to visit the relics of the saints. At a later period of her life, she made a second pilgrimage to Palestine, visiting in her journey the most renowned churches in Italy and Sicily. On her return to Rome, she obtained a confirmation of the new religious order which she had instituted from Pope Urban V.†

Trithemius‡ says of her—"Bridget, a most holy widow, accustomed to divine discourse, and united to God by the perfection of the most strict charity, of a prophetic spirit also, and celebrated for miracles, at the command of Christ, instituted the new religion called by her name; and wrote a distinguished work concerning her prophecies and revelations, highly edifying for all orders of the church, and contemporaneous in all things with the Catholic dogmas."

St. Bridget died on the 23rd July 1372, in her 70th year, and was buried in the monastery of St. Laurence in Paris Perna; but her body was afterwards translated to her monastery of Wastein in Sweden. She was canonized by Boniface IX. in 1391, on the 7th Oct. and her festival is appointed on the day following. At the petition of the clergy and nobility of Sweden, the general council of Constance examined again

† This monastery was the chief house of the order, and was destroyed at the Reformation, with most of the great or double monasteries which were situated in the North. According to Alban Butler, there are two rich convents of nuns of this order at Genoa, into one of which only ladies of quality can be admitted. The greatest part of the monasteries of Bridgetines, or of the Order of St. Saviour, which now subsist, are single, and observe not the rule as to the number of the religious, or the subjection of the friars to the nuns. There are still some double monasteries in Flanders, one at Dantzic, about ten in Germany, and some few others.

HISTORY OF SYON MONASTERY.

IN the year 1415, Henry the Fifth founded within his manor of Isleworth, in the county of Middlesex, a convent of Bridgettines, giving it the name of Syon, in reference to the holy mount.<sup>1</sup> It was the only religious house in England which professed the modified order of St. Augustine, as reformed by St. Bridget, and consisted of eighty-five persons, answering to our Saviour's thirteen apostles (St. Paul included), and seventy-two disciples; viz. of sixty nuns or sisters, whereof one was to be lady abbess, thirteen priests, one of whom was to preside over the men as confessor general, four deacons represent<sup>1</sup> Norden (Spec. Brit. p. 32) and other authorities state that it was founded upon a piece of ground whence Hen. V. had expelled some alien monks. This circumstance however, is neither mentioned in the foundation charter, nor by Thomas of Elmham in his life of that prince. Moreover, in the Inquisition taken of Hen. V. the dimensions as well as the value of the site are there stated. It is, therefore, highly probable, that Norden was led to suppose the ground belonged to alien monks, by the fact of the king granting the possessions of certain alien priories which he had suppressed towards the maintenance of this monastery.

About the same time Hen. V. also founded two other monasteries at his manor of Sheen, now called Richmond, viz. one for monks of the Celestine order, which the king soon after suppressed, because they would not pray for him, since he made war upon their country, they being French monks; (Walingham Hist. Angl. p. 432. Goodwin's Hist. of the Reign of Hen. V. p. 341.) and the other for monks of the Carthusian order, dedicated to Jesus of Bethlehem. Thomas of Elmham (Vita et Gesta Henrici Quinti, p. 25,) supposes the king's motive for placing the last-mentioned monastery so close to Syon, to have been, "that future devout men might intermingle the desired consolations of devotion with the holy men of the Carthusian order; and devout women with the professed women of the religion of St. Bridget." On the suppression of Sheen monastery in 1559, the site was granted by Hen. VIII. to Edward, earl of Hertford, afterwards duke of Somerset; after his attainder it was given to the duke of Suffolk, father of Lady Jane Grey. Queen Mary restored the convent, but it was dissolved again at her death. An ancient gateway, the last remains of the monastery of Sheen, was taken down about 1769. Syon Monastery was sometimes called Sheen, and so confounded with that monastery.

ing the four doctors of the church, Ambrose, Augustine, Gregory, and Jerome, and eight lay brethren, in all twenty-five men, which number was not to be extended. It was dedicated to our Saviour, the Blessed Virgin Mary, and St. Bridget, of the order of St. Augustine, whose rules were observed by this class of religious, with certain particular constitutions, said to have been dictated to St. Bridget by our Saviour in a vision. The chief objects of the particular devotions prescribed by them were the Passion of Christ, and the honour of his holy mother. All monasteries of this order were under the jurisdiction of the bishop in whose diocese they were situated; but no new convent could be founded without an express licence and confirmation of the pope.

It is said that St. Bridget originally intended that the brothers and sisters should live together; but, to avoid the suspicions of the world, she made a complete separation between the upper part of the convent allotted to the nuns and the lower part allotted to the monks. The abbess was the principal over both, and had the management of the revenues, derived from their endowments and the industry of the nuns.

The following description of the costume of the sisters and brethren of this order, is derived from a MS. (Addit. MS. No. 5208), preserved in the British Museum.

The clothing of the sisters consisted of two chemises of white flannel,<sup>1</sup> one for daily use, the other for washing. One gown of grey cloth, and one hood, the sleeves of which did not extend further than to the middle finger, the folds hanging round the hand, when they performed their manual services, were bound to the arms with a clasp. Also one mantle of grey cloth, like the gown and hood, not plaited or finely made, but tight and plain, the whole being for use, not vanity; single in summer, but in winter lined, not with delicate skins, but with those of lambs or sheep.<sup>1</sup> Also a pilch, made of the same skins, for the winter, which was not to reach the earth by a palm's breadth, and to be fastened at the breast by a wooden clasp. For the covering of the feet in summer, they had shoes reaching to their ancles, and stockings reaching to their knees; but in winter, boots as high as their knees, lined with cloth, and stockings equally high. A fillet was the ornament of their head, by which the forehead and chin were surrounded, and the face partly opened, the extremities being fastened by a pin at the back of the head. Upon this was placed a black linen veil, which, that it might not fall down, was also fastened by three pins, one at the forehead, and two for the ears. Upon the veil was placed a cap of white linen, to which were sewn five pieces of red cloth, like five drops, allusive to the five wounds of our Saviour; the first piece on the forehead, the second on the back of the head, the third and fourth about the ears, and the fifth in the middle of the head, in the form of a cross. One pin in the middle fastened this cap, and adapted it to the head. Widows as well as virgins might wear this cap as a sign of continence and chastity.

The clothing of the priests and brethren consisted of two under-tunics of white woollen cloth, one tunic of grey woollen cloth, and a frock of the same, to which was sewn a hood, and upon the frock a mantle of grey woollen cloth. They also had, if necessary, a pilch under the mantle, of the skins of sheep or lambs. To the end that the brethren might be distinguished from one another, the thirteen priests wore on the left side of their mantles a red cross of cloth, edged round with narrow white cloth, emblematic of the mystery of the body of Christ. The four deacons wore on their mantles a white circle emblematic of the incomprehensible wisdom of the four doctors whom they represented, upon which circle were sewn four red pieces fashioned after the manner of tongues, because the Holy Spirit inflamed them with the excellence of the Deity, with the mystery of the incarnation of Christ, with the vanity and contempt of the world, with the rewards of the just, and the punishments of the wicked. The lay brothers wore on their mantles a white cross emblematic of innocence, on which cross were five red pieces, in commemoration of the five wounds of our Saviour. In summer they had shoes reaching to their ankles, and stockings, but in winter boots lined with woollen cloth, and stockings.

Their bedding was of straw, upon which they had two blankets of grey cloth or linen, and mattresses. Under their heads they had a cushion covered with a web, and a pillow covered in the same manner.

The duty of silence was very generally enjoined in monastic institutions. In the fifth chapter of the Rule of this order, strict silence was to be kept by the sisters and brethren (except those who were deputed to such offices as could not be fitly executed without speaking) during certain specified portions of the day; but as their wants could not be supplied without some means of communication, a table of signs was compiled for their use.<sup>1</sup>

Conversation with seculars was permitted only in company, and with the license of the abbess, from noon to vespers, and this only on Sundays, and the great feasts of the Saints, not however by going out of the house, but by sitting at the appointed windows; for to none was it permitted after their entrance to leave the cloisters of the monastery. If any sister desired to be seen by her parents or honest and dear friends, she might with the permission of the abbess open the window occasionally during the year; but if she did not open it, a more abundant reward was assured to her hereafter.

No sister was admitted into the monastery before the age of eighteen, nor any of the brethren before twenty-five years of age.<sup>1</sup>

The first religious of this order were introduced into England from the original monastery of Wastein in Sweden by Henry Lord Fitz-Hugh, who endowed the foundation with £20 a year;<sup>2</sup> and at his suggestion, Hen. V. determined that the monastery which he had resolved upon founding within his manor of Isleworth should be of the Bridgetine order. Thereupon, on the 3rd March 1415, in the second year of his reign, the King founded and endowed the said monastery by his royal charter, of which the following is a translation:

"The King to the archbishops, bishops, abbats, priors, dukes, earls, barons, justices, bailiffs, sheriffs, reeves, ministers, and other his faithful people, greeting. The most illustrious gradation of the manifold spiritual orders of the Heavenly Hierarchy, continually singing together their joyful songs in grateful harmony, doth clearly by its example show to all the worshippers of Christ, zealous as is meet for the honour of the church militant, how pleasing to the supreme Father, grateful alike and welcome to the most holy Mother of God and all the Saints, and consonant with the due order of the triumphant church, it is to raise the glory of the church militant, whether it be by the building of holy temples, or by the variety of establishments of religious orders, or the multiplying of ecclesiastical ministers, for the continuance of divine worship and the increase of devout servants of God. For truly it is by such means we firmly trust, both for ourselves and our progenitors and all our successors, our whole kingdom, and every one of our subjects, healthfully to consult the salvation of our souls, and that we and our realm may happily be directed to do God's will in prosperity, and be piously protected from our adversaries, and by participation in the aforesaid merits, be finally led and conveyed as it were by undoubted passports to everlasting happiness. We, bringing all these things to the test of a careful examination, through the inspiration of his heavenly grace, in whose hands are the hearts of kings, and the Scriptures testifying 'that He inclines them as He wills,' and calling to mind how kings and princes and our most renowned progenitors have been distinguished for the said meritorious excellencies, whose blessed steps in humbleness of heart, through the favour of divine mercy, we are earnestly desirous of imitating, do, therefore, to the praise, honour, and glory of the most high Trinity, and the glorious Virgin Mary, as also of the apostles and disciples of God and all the saints, and especially in honour of the most holy St. Bridget, who, as is acknowledged by sufficient evidence, by divine inspiration founded a religious order under her name, and obtained from heaven that in whatsoever kingdom a monastery of the same religious order should be founded, there peace and tranquillity, by the mediation of the same, should be perpetually established.

" We, as a true son of the God of peace, who gave peace, taught peace, and finally left it to his wellbeloved disciples, as a thing in the highest degree to be desired, for the final and effectual fulfillment of all the aforesaid, by the consent and authority of all of whom it is legally required in this behalf, do found, ordain, and for ever establish a certain monastery of the order of St. Augustine, called of St. Saviour, of sixty nuns or sisters, (of whom one, included in the number of sixty, shall be abbess,) also of twenty-five religious men, of whom thirteen shall be priests, four deacons, and eight laymen, (from which same priests one, included in this number of twenty-five, shall be confessor, who shall preside over the said men in spirituals, by which same priests also, the abbess and nuns or sisters of the monastery aforesaid, for the time being, are to be refreshed and fed with the hearing divine services and wholesome preaching and erudition, and to be assisted in the perils and difficulties of their spiritual necessities,) to dwell in separate habitations, (to wit, the said abbess and sisters within one court by themselves, and the said confessor and brothers in a separate court by themselves,') within the said monastery, and serve the Deity in a regular habit, according to the distinction of sex as in their state is required, with sincere and pure minds and chaste bodies, according to the regular institutes of the religious order by the aforesaid Bridget of heaven inspired, founded and instituted, and by the apostolic see approved, and to celebrate divine service daily for ever, for our healthful estate whilst we live, and for our soul when we shall have departed this life, and for the souls of our most dear lord and father Henry, late king of England, and Mary his late wife, our most dear mother; also for the souls of John late duke of Lancaster our grandfather, and Blanch his late wife our grandmother, and of other our progenitors, and of all the faithful deceased: according to our ordinance in this behalf to be made, in a certain parcel of land of our demesne of our manor of Isleworth, within the parish of Twickenham in the county of Middlesex: containing, namely, in length near the field towards Twickenham from a stone placed on the north side unto another stone placed on the south side 1938 feet: and in breadth towards the south from that stone placed on the south side, unto the water of Thames, 960 feet: and in length by the bank of the Thames, from a stone likewise placed by the aforesaid bank at the north side, to another like stone placed on the south side by the bank aforesaid, 2820 feet, and in breadth from the north side from the aforesaid stone placed on the north side unto the water of the Thames 960 feet, like as by metes and bounds it is included, under the name of the Monastery of St. Saviour and St. Bridget of Syon, of the order of St. Augustine: And we will and decree that it shall be called 'The Monastery of St. Saviour and St. Bridget of Syon, of the order of St. Augustine,' through all successive ages.

" Also we will, ordain and grant for us our heirs and successors that the abbess and nuns or sisters aforesaid, and the said confessor and other the religious men aforesaid, shall be one convent distinct by themselves as is aforesaid; and be commonly called 'the abbess and convent of the monastery of St. Saviour and St. Bridget of Syon, of the order of St. Augustine;' and that they and their successors, the abbess and convent of the aforesaid place, shall have one seal to be kept for ever for the business and transactions of the aforesaid place; and that they be persons competent and able, as a corporate monastery of an abbess and convent distinctly by themselves as is aforesaid, to acquire, receive and purchase, in the name of the abbess and convent of the monastery of St. Saviour and St. Bridget of Syon, of the order of St. Augustine, from all persons whomsoever, as well ecclesiastical as lay, lands, tenements, things, rents, advowsons, and possessions of whatsoever kind or nature they may be, and in whatsoever manner they may be holden, whether it be of us or of others in chief, or in free burgage, or by any other service whatsoever, or whether they shall happen in future to be holden of us, our heirs or successors, or of any other persons whomsoever, to be possessed in proprietary by the same abbess and convent, and by their successors the abbesses and convent of the aforesaid place for ever, our royal licence being hereunto obtained.

" And also that the abbess of the aforesaid place and her successors shall be persons able to prosecute all manner of causes, and actions real and personal and mixed, of whatsoever nature or kind they may be, and to answer and defend the same as well in courts spiritual as temporal before all judges ecclesiastical and secular whatsoever. And that this our present foundation may obtain due effect, we prefer, create and ordain for this turn, sister Matilda Newton, professed nun of the aforesaid order, as abbess of the aforesaid monastery, and brother William Alnewyk, ordained in priest's orders, likewise professed of the aforesaid order, as confessor of the aforesaid place; we being willing that he and his successors shall preside over the aforesaid men in spirituals as is premised; and that the same Matilda shall be abbess of the aforesaid place, and the same abbess and her successors shall preside over the nuns or sisters aforesaid, and take upon themselves the whole government of the aforesaid monastery, as well in spirituals as temporals, and that they shall do and execute those things which in anywise do or may belong to the abbess of the said place, (excepting only that the same confessor shall preside over the aforesaid religious men in spirituals as is aforesaid,) so that the same abbess resigning or deceasing, the convent of the place aforesaid shall have full and free power of choosing another abbess in the room of the said abbess, and thus from time to time as often as that monastery shall happen in future to be vacant; and that the nuns of the aforesaid place for the time being on each vacancy of the aforesaid monastery shall have the custody and administration of all lands, tenements, rents, profits, and emoluments of the same monastery whatsoever to the use of the said convent, without the interference of us, our heirs or successors, and without any account thereof to be rendered to others or to us, our heirs or successors.

“ Moreover we grant to the same abbess and convent, that they and their successors, the abbesses and convent of the aforesaid place shall for ever have and hold as well all lands, tenements and possessions, with their appurtenances, to the said abbess and convent, at the endowment, foundation, and ordination of the aforesaid monastery, by us, or those deputed by us, given, granted, or assigned, as other the lands, tenements, and possessions to the same abbess and convent, or to their successors, abbesses, and convent of the aforesaid place, by us, our heirs, or successors or other persons whomsoever, to be given, granted, or assigned in future, in free, pure, and perpetual alms for ever; we being willing that they or their successors the abbesses and convent of the aforesaid place, by reason of a new creation of the abbess of the same place, who for the time shall be, or by any other cause or occasion whatsoever, shall not be charged in future with the giving, granting, or assigning of any pension, portion or maintenance for any person or any persons at the request or demand of us, our heirs or successors, or with the supporting or paying of any charge whatsoever to us, our heirs or successors, or to any the ministers of us, our heirs or successors whomsoever; but that the same abbesses and convent of the aforesaid place shall be quit and exonerated thereof for ever, notwithstanding the aforesaid monastery is of our foundation.

“ And further, of our more abundant grace, we have granted for us and our heirs as much as in us is, to the aforesaid abbess and convent and their successors one thousand marks, to be received annually at the exchequer of us and our heirs, at the terms of Easter and Michaelmas by equal portions, until their spiritual and temporal revenues shall be fully made up by us, our heirs, or executors, to the amount of one thousand marks per annum. Provided always, that whensoever we, our heirs, or executors, shall provide the said abbess and convent or their successors with any spiritual or temporal revenues, then so much of the aforesaid one thousand marks as such revenues shall be worth yearly, shall be deducted for ever. And, in order that the said abbess and convent shall not in future suffer loss or damage whatsoever by default of due payment of the said one thousand marks yearly at the terms aforesaid; we will and firmly command that henceforth nothing whatever shall be delivered or paid at the receipt of our Exchequer aforesaid, for the use and behoof of us, our heirs or successors aforesaid, or of others whomsoever, until the aforesaid abbess and convent shall be fully paid in each year the said sum of one thousand marks in manner as is aforesaid. And it shall not be lawful for any one to obstruct or disturb the said abbess and convent, or their successors, of this payment, by any pretence contrary to the form of this our charter, but they shall have and receive the same one thousand marks from this time annually in form abovesaid, and shall enjoy and use them as their goods spiritual and ecclesiastical, any preferment by us made in former time, or any statutes or ordinances to the contrary published, or any other cause, thing, or matter whatsoever notwithstanding. These being witnesses, the venerable fathers, H. Bishop of Winchester, our chancellor, our dearest uncle; R. Bishop of London, and R. Bishop of Norwich; our most dear brothers, Thomas Duke of Clarence, John Duke of Bedford, and Humphrey Duke of Gloucester; and Edward Duke of York, our cousin; Edmund Earl of March, Thomas Earl of Arundel, treasurer of England, and Richard Earl of Warwick, our most dear cousins; Sir Richard Gray, Sir Gilbert Talbot; Sir Henry Fitz Hugh, our chamberlain, and Sir Thomas Erpyngham, steward of our household, knights; and Master John Prophete, keeper of our privy seal, and others. Besides the above endowment, the King shortly afterwards gave them the vicarage of Felstead in Essex, through which the abbess and convent became patrons, and continued so until their suppression by Henry the Eighth. Nevertheless, according to Newcourt,<sup>1</sup> the provost and scholars of King's College, Cambridge, within two years afterwards, presented twice to it, but by what right does not appear.

The first stone of Syon Monastery was laid by Henry the Fifth, Feb. 22nd, A.D. 1415, in the presence of Richard Clifford, Bishop of London.<sup>2</sup> The King also by his first will, dated at Southampton on the 24th July following, just before his embarkation for the French expedition, bequeathed to the nuns the sum of 1000 marks of gold to be expended in the building of their house;<sup>3</sup> and by an inquisition taken in the fourth year of his reign, we find that the value of the land appropriated out of the royal demesnes for the site, is there estimated at 1*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* per annum.<sup>4</sup>

In the fourth year of his reign, the King by the following charter further granted to certain persons in trust, for the use of the convent, divers lands, &c. chiefly taken from the Alien Priories then lately suppressed.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Rep. vol. ii. p. 236 The vicarage of Felstead (written in Domesday Phensted), was given by William the Conqueror to the Church of the Holy Trinity of Caen, in Normandy. It appears to have been confirmed by Hen. III. under the name of Felstehda, and also by Edw. I. but the precise period of either is not known. The abbess and nuns of the Holy Trinity of Caen were patrons until Edw. III. and Richard II. by reason of their wars with France, seized all the possessions of the alien priories, and so became lords of the premises, which continued in the crown until the reign of Hen. V. who granted it as above.

<sup>5</sup> Alien Priories were cells in England, which were supported by estates belonging to foreign monasteries. For when manors or tithes were given to foreign convents, the monks, either to increase their own rule, or rather to have faithful stewards of their revenues, built a small convent here for the reception of such a number as they thought proper, and constituted priors over them. Within these cells there was the same distinction as in those priories which were cells subordinate to some great abbey; some of these were conventual,

"The King to all to whom, &c. greeting. Know ye, that of our special grace, and of our certain knowledge and mere motion, we have given and granted to the venerable Father Thomas Bishop of Durham, Sir Henry Fitz Hugh, knight, Sir John Rodenale, knight, and Thomas Fishburn, clerk, a certain parcel of our pasture within the parish of Twickenham, in our lordship of Isleworth, in the county of Middlesex, containing, viz. in length, near the field against Twickenham, from a stone placed on the north side unto another stone placed on the south side, 1,938 feet; and in breadth, towards the south from that stone placed on the south side unto the water of Thames, 960 feet; and in length, by the bank of the Thames from a stone likewise placed by the aforesaid bank at the north side to another like stone placed on the south side by the bank aforesaid, and, having priors of their own choosing, thereby became entire societies within themselves, and received the revenues belonging to their several houses for their own use and benefit, paying only the ancient apport,* acknowledgment, or obvention, at first the surplussage, to the foreign house; but others depended entirely on the foreign houses, who appointed and removed their priors at pleasure. These transmitted all their revenues to the foreign head houses; for which reason their estates were generally seized during the reigns of Edward I. II. and III. to carry on the wars between England and France, and restored to them again on return of peace. These Alien Priors were most of them founded by such as had foreign abbeys founded by themselves or by some of their family. Richard II. and Henry IV. not only detained their revenues in time of peace, but bestowed them on their lay-servants.

In 1 Hen. V. all Alien Priories, as were not conventual, were dissolved by Act of Parliament, and bestowed on the King, (who, as is shewn by the above Charter, gave lands belonging to them, to his newly founded monastery of Syon,) except some that were granted to the college of Fotheringhay. In general these lands were appropriated to religious uses. Henry VI. endowed his foundations at Eton and Cambridge with the lands of the Alien Priories, in pursuance of his father's design to appropriate them all to a noble college at Oxford, others were granted in fee to the prelates, nobility, or private persons. Such as remained in the Crown were granted by Henry VI. A.D. 1440, to Archbishop Chicheley, &c. and thus became part of his and the royal foundations. —Preface to Wathurton's Account of the Alien Priories. —Barnes's Hist. of Edward the Third, p. 113. —See Fuller's Church History, B. vi. p. 303.

"When," says Weever,<sup>1</sup> "this godly and glorious King had bestowed on them sufficient living, he provided by a law, that, contenting themselves therewith, they should take no more of any man, but what overplus soever remained of their yearly revenue, they should bestow it upon the poor." "Conceiving otherwise," observes Fuller,<sup>2</sup> "it would putrify and corrupt if treasured up, and be as heinous an offence, as the Jews when preserving mannâ longer than the continuance of one day."

In 1418 (6 Hen. V.) Pope Martin V. received the monastery of Syon under the protection of the apostolic see, and by the following bull approved of the donation of two churches, which the King intended making to this monastery:

"Martin Bishop, servant of the servants of God, to his well-beloved son in Christ, Henry, the illustrious King of England, greeting and apostolic benediction. The exceeding devotion, and sincere affection, which thou bearest to us and the Roman Church, deserves that we should grant our gracious assent to thy pious desires, and that we may afford the aid of the apostolic see by benevolent favours, both for them and those things which regard our holy religion, and the increase of divine worship, that they may continually advance with votive increase. Whereas for this cause (as it was contained in a petition lately exhibited to us on thy behalf), thou, among other monasteries and religious places founded by thee, in thy kingdom, solemnly, magnificently, hast founded and caused to be erected the venerable monastery of Syon, of the order of St. Augustine, and St. Saviour called, in the diocess of London, for one abbess who ought to preside for the time being in that monastery of Syon, and one confessor, and other persons of either sex, in that place religiously for the time being, under the rule and according to the institute of St. Bridget, for the perpetual serving of God, in praise of the omnipotent God, increase of divine worship, and the propagation of religion, and for the health of the souls of thee and thy progenitors of divine memory, Kings of England; also, thou proposest, God favouring thee, to found and endow some other monasteries and places of the same order: We were humbly supplicated on your behalf that we would vouchsafe of our apostolic benignity to ratify and approve the aforesaid foundation and building by apostolic authority, and to grant thee a licence for founding and endowing other the like monasteries and places of the same order, and also to appropriate and for ever to incorporate, annex, and unite the parish churches of Yevele and Croston, in the diocese of Wells and Lichfield (whereof the right of patronage which is known to belong to thee, thou art freely prepared to give for this purpose), with all their rights and appurtenances, in aid and part of the endowment to the said monastery of Syon, which is not as yet endowed, and which thou, God permitting, further intendest sufficiently to endow with thy goods. We, therefore (commending in the Lord thy most pious and laudable proposition), being inclined to your supplications, do ratify and approve, by apostolic authority, the foundation and building aforesaid, and we extend to thee full licence, by authority of these presents, for founding and endowing the like monasteries and other places of the said order. And nevertheless concerning Yevele (which is known of old time to have been a perpetual vicarage), and also concerning Croston (whereof the fruits, rents, and revenues, according to common estimation, as it is asserted, do not exceed the annual value as regards Yevele of 200, and as regards Croston 140 marks sterling), we, by the same authority, do appropriate and incorporate, annex and unite, the aforesaid parish churches, with all their rights and appurtenances, to the same monastery of Syon, in aid and part of the like endowment, so that the abbess of the same monastery, who then shall be, when (the rectors of the same churches resigning or deceasing, or in any manner otherwise leaving the same) the said churches shall become vacant, or at present are vacant, may of her own authority take corporal possession (the license of the diocesana of the places, and of others whomsoever upon this not being in the least required), and the same perpetually retain to her and the said monastery's uses; notwithstanding if any persons shall have obtained letters special or general from the aforesaid see, or its legates, upon the pro-

9 Hen. V. the following item occurs, showing that either the whole or part of the 1000 marks granted to the abbess and convent was at this time received by them :

"Also to divers Dukes, Earls, Knights, Esquires, the abbess of Shene (Syon), and other persons, for their annuities, to be annually received at the receipt of the Exchequer, 7,751*l.* 12*s.* 7½*d.*"

In the last year of his reign, the King procured an Act of Parliament, by which he was enabled to separate the manor of Isleworth from the Duchy of Cornwall, and give it to the abbess and convent of Syon.*

Henry the Sixth, of whom it has been observed, that "he professed qualities more befitting a priest than a King," appears by his subsequent grants and confirmations, which are made in rapid succession, to have been particularly favourable to this monastery.

In the second year of his reign, the abbess and convent of Syon petitioned the King to confirm the grant made by his father; which he did by the following charter, in which the various possessions belonging to the monastery are specified at length.

"The King, to all to whom, &c. greeting. Know ye, that whereas our dear lord and father Henry, late King of England, deceased, purposing to constitute, found, and establish a certain house of religious persons within his manor of Isleworth, in the county of Middlesex, and to endow it with certain manors, lands, tenements, and possessions, of his special grace, gave and granted to the venerable fathers, Thomas Bishop of Durham, and Edmund Bishop of Exeter, afterwards Bishop of Hereford, and his beloved Thomas Duke of Exeter, Sir Henry Fitz-Hugh, knight, Roger Flore, and other persons now deceased, a certain parcel of land of his demesne of his manor of Isleworth, William Burnell terminated; 30 marks which Sir William Bourchier, knight, receives annually by his own hands or term of his life, if the war between our aforesaid father and others of France should for so long time continue;) out of these 140 marks 6s. 8d. which he by the name of Sir William Bourchier, knight, was bound to render to our aforesaid father for the custody of the manor and rectory of Felstede, with the appurtenances in the county of Essex, which were taken in the booty of Caen, at the feasts of Easter and Michaelmas, wherof our said father pardoned the same William Bourchier 40 marks per annum,—to be received annually after the death of the aforesaid William Bourchier; 20l. 6s. 8d. wherof our queen of England receives annually for term of her life from the aforesaid custody, to be received annually after the death of the same person, if the same queen should happen to die during the lifetime of the aforesaid William Bourchier; 13l. 6s. 8d. wherof the aforesaid queen which the aforesaid William Bourchier hath rendered yearly to the Exchequer of our aforesaid father and also the manor and rectory aforesaid, after the death of the aforesaid William Bourchier; 90l. which the same queen receiveth annually for term of her life from the custody of the manor, messuages, and possessions which belongeth to the church of St. Nicholas of Apyon in England, in the county of Essex, and a Sackling in the county of Lincoln, wherof the same queen receiveth from the church of Cosham, to be received yearly after the death of the aforesaid queen, if the same queen should happen to die during the life-time of the aforesaid William Bourchier; John Lutterell, and the same lands, messuages, and possessions to have after the estate of the aforesaid William Bourchier terminated; a certain portion of the manor of Merton in the county of Somerset, to the use of the manor of Potendo Mars late pertaining; and the manor of Merton, to be received each year by the aforesaid queen and her aforesaid father and of his heirs in the county of London by the hands of his chief butler or his deputy there for the time being. To have, receive, and hold all the aforesaid priories, manors, lands, tenements, possessions, meadows, dove-cots, portion, farms, annuities, pool, fisheries, and advowson of the aforesaid church of Yevele to the aforesaid bishops, duke, Henry Fitz-Hugh, Roger, and other persons aforesaid deceased, and their heirs, in form abovesaid, for ever; together with all manner of hundreds, leets, towns, wapentakes, views of frankpledge, manors, lands, tenements, possessions, rents, services, suits, villans, churches, portions, pensions, alms, knights'-free, advowson of churches, vicarages, chapels, priories, hospitals, charities and other ecclesiastical benefices whatsoever, to the liberties, franchises and other commodities and profits whatsoever to the aforesaid priories, manors, lands, tenements, possessions, meadow, dove-cots, portion, farms, annuities, pool and fisheries of what kind soever pertaining, appending, or belonging, as fully and entirely as any person before this time had, or our same father could have or ought to have them, if he had held them in his hands, without apport, farm, account, arrearage, or any other profit whatsoever, to our aforesaid father or his heirs, to be therefore rendered or paid, to the effect that the same bishops, duke, Henry Fitz-Hugh, Roger, and other persons aforesaid, deceased, should grant and assign the aforesaid priories, manors, lands, tenements, possessions, meadows, dove-cots, portion, farms, annuities, pool and fisheries, with the appurtenances, and the advowson of the said church of Yevele, to the aforesaid religious persons, according to the ordinance of our father aforesaid thereof made, after the house aforesaid should be founded and established, to have to them and their successors in endowment for the aforesaid house for ever. And further our same father did will and grant for himself and his heirs that if any of the priories, manors, lands, tenements, and possessions aforesaid, or any parcel of the same, for non-payment of the farms by restitution of the letters patent of our same father or his progenitors in this behalf made, or by the death of the occupiers of the same, or inability of any farmer in this behalf, or by resumption general or special of the same, or of any of the same by authority of parliament, or by any other course or cause whatsoever, to the hands of our said father or his heirs did or ought to have come that they should remain immediately to the same bishops, duke, Henry Fitz-Hugh, Roger, and other persons aforesaid, deceased, and their heirs to have in form aforesaid for ever, although the priories, manors, lands, tenements and possessions aforesaid, or any parcel of the same should have been given and granted by gift or collation of the progenitors of our aforesaid father or by them, for charging, sustaining and supporting churches, hospitals, or other works of piety, notwithstanding express mention of the true value of all the things aforesaid in the said letters patent according to the form of the statute thereof published be not made, or any right, title and interest which to our aforesaid father in this behalf did pertain, or to our said father or his heirs could in future pertain. And moreover our aforesaid father granted and gave licence for himself and his heirs as much as in him was to the aforesaid bishops, duke, Henry Fitz-Hugh, Roger, and other persons aforesaid deceased, that they might grant and assign the priories, manors, lands, tenements, possessions, meadows, dove-cots, portion, farms, annuities, pool and fisheries, with the appurtenances, and the advowson of the said church of Yevole to the aforesaid religious persons, after the house aforesaid shall be made, founded, and established, to have to them and their heirs for ever, and to the same religious persons, that they might receive and hold the priory, manors, lands, tenements, possessions, meadow, dove-cots, portion, farms, annuities, pool and fisheries aforesaid, with appurtenances, and the advowson of the said church of Yevole of the aforesaid bishops, duke, Henry Fitz-Hugh, and Roger, and of the aforesaid other persons deceased, to them and their successors as is aforesaid for ever, the statute published concerning lands and tenements not to be bestowed in mortmain notwithstanding. And further, our said father of his more ample grace granted to the aforesaid bishops, duke, Henry Fitz-Hugh, Roger, and the aforesaid other persons deceased, that the priories, manors, lands, tenements, possessions, meadow, dove-cots, portion, farms, annuities, pool and fisheries aforesaid, with the appurtenances after they had come to the hands of the aforesaid bishops, duke, Henry Fitz-Hugh, and Roger, and the aforesaid other persons deceased, should in no wise be taxed, nor anything of tenths, fifteenths, subsidies, impositions, and other quota or tallages then granted, or to be granted, or in any manner to be levied to the use of our aforesaid father or his heirs, nor that the same bishops, duke, Henry Fitz-Hugh, Roger, and the aforesaid other persons deceased, should be distrained, molested, or in any way aggrieved by the aforesaid causes in the priories, manors, lands, tenements, possessions, meadows, dovecots, portion, farms, annuities, pool and fisheries aforesaid, but for ever be quit of tenths, fifteenth, subsidies, impositions and other quota and tallages of this kind, as in the letters patent more fully is contained. And also our said father by other his letters patent gave and granted to the aforesaid bishops, duke, Henry Fitz-Hugh, Roger and other persons aforesaid deceased, and to his most dear brother John, duke of Bedford, all the manors, lands, tenements and possessions of the alien abbey of Fiscamp in Normandy, in the county of Sussex and elsewhere within our realm of England, which Sir John Cornewaill, knight, and Elizabeth his wife, held for term of their lives of the grant of our aforesaid father, the reversion thereof, after the death of the same John Cornewaill and Elizabeth to our aforesaid father belonging; to have and to hold the aforesaid manors, lands, tenements, and possessions of the aforesaid abbey of Fiscamp, after the estate of the aforesaid John Cornewaill and Elizabeth terminated, to the aforesaid bishops, duke, Henry Fitz-Hugh, Roger and other persons aforesaid deceased, and their heirs for ever, together with all manner of hundreds, leets, courts, wapentakes, views of frankpledge, rents, services, suits, villains, churches, portions, pensions, alms, knights'-fees, advowsons of churches, vicarages, chapels, priories, hospitals, chantries and other ecclesiastical benefices whatsoever to the liberties, franchises and other commodities and profits whatsoever to the aforesaid manors, lands, tenements and possessions of the aforesaid abbey of Fiscamp, in any manner pertaining, appending, or belonging, as fully and entirely as any person before them had or our said father had or ought to have them if he had held them in his hands without apport, farm, account, arrearage, or other profit whatsoever to our same father or his heirs thereof, to be rendered or paid to the same effect as in those letters patent is mentioned, with a certain clause in the same letters of acquittance from tenths and fifteenth and other quota and tallages whatsoever, as in the same letters patent more fully is contained.' And also our aforesaid father by his letters patent gave and granted to the aforesaid duke of Exeter, by name of Thomas Earl of Dorset, and to the aforesaid Henry Fitz-Hugh, Robert Morton, esquire, and Sir John Rodenale, knight, now deceased, the manors, rectories and churches of Chilham, Molessh (Moldash), and Trowlegh, with all the appurtenances which lately belonged to the abbey of St. Bertin in parts beyond the sea, with the knights'-frees, advowsons of churches, fairs, markets, liberties and franchises, and all other profits and emoluments to the aforesaid manors, rectories, or churches of what kind soever belonging or pertaining, with a certain clause in those letters of acquittance from tenths and fifteenth and other quota and tallages whatsoever, as in the same letters patent more fully is contained. And also whereas Thomas, bishop of Durham, John Stafford, treasurer of England, late keeper of the privy seal of our aforesaid father, William Sevenok, late mayor of London, and Henry Chaderton, were seised in the manor of Gammones, with the appurtenances in the county of Essex, one messuage, one carucate, and two virgates of land, 24 acres of meadow, four acres of wood, 20 acres of pasture, 18s. rent, and pasture for 100 sheep in Isotelworth, Twykenham, Worton, and Uxton, in the county of Middlesex, purposing according to the will of our aforesaid father to give the same manor, lands, rent and services to the abbess and convent of the monastery of St. Saviour and of the Holy Virgin Mary and St. Bridget of Syon, of the order of St. Augustine, of St. Saviour called, and to their successors, in perpetual alms for ever, whereof they have not as yet obtained our royal licence. We, at the supplication of the aforesaid abbess and convent, by the assent of the lords spiritual and temporal and the commonalty of our realm of England in our present parliament assembled, approve, ratify and confirm the aforesaid letters patent, and all that which in the same is contained, the said clauses of acquittance from tenths, fifteenth and other quota and tallages whatsoever only excepted, and also the estate and possession which the aforesaid bishops, duke of Exeter, Henry Fitz-Hugh and Roger now have by virtue of the aforesaid letters patent, in all the priories, manors, lands, tenements, possessions, reversions, meadows, dove-cots, portion, farms, annuities, pool, fisheries, advowsons and tuns of wine, with all the appurtenances aforesaid to them and those other persons aforesaid now deceased thereof made; also the estate and possession which the aforesaid bishops, duke of Bedford, duke of Exeter, Henry Fitz-Hugh and Roger now have by force of the said letters patent, in all the manors of the abbey of Fiscamp, the lands, tenements, possessions and farms aforesaid, with the appurtenances, to them and the said other persons now deceased thereof made. And also the estate and possession which the aforesaid Henry Fitz-Hugh and Robert now have, by force of the said letters patent, in the manors, rectories or churches of Chilham, Molessh and Trewlegh, with the appurtenances aforesaid, to them and the aforesaid John Rodenale thereof made, by authority of the aforesaid parliament. And further, we have granted and given licence for us and our heirs, as much as in us is, to the aforesaid bishops, duke of Exeter, Henry Fitz-Hugh, and Roger, that they or either of them who shall survive may grant and assign the aforesaid fisheries, pool, dove-cots, land, meadow; the priory of Oterton; the priory of Mount St. Michael; 110*l.* of the priory of Lancaster; the possessions of the abbey of Seerz; the manor of Michelhampton; the manor of Tyleshide; 87*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* from the priory of Lodres; the manor and rectory of Felstede; the portion and lands, tenements and possessions of the aforesaid abbey of St. Nicholas, with their appurtenances, together with all hundreds, places, towns, wapentakes, views of frank-pledge, manors, lands, tenements, possessions, rents, services, suits, villans, churches, portions, pensions, alms, knights'-fees, advowsons of churches, vicarages, chapels, priories, hospitals, chantries, and other ecclesiastical benefices whatsoever, to the liberties, franchises, and other commodities and profits whatsoever, to the aforesaid priories, manors, lands, tenements, meadows, dove-cots, portion, annuities, pool and fisheries howsoever pertaining, appending, or belonging, as fully and entirely as any persons before this time had them, and the tuns of wine and the advowson of the church of Yerele, to the aforesaid abbess and convent, to have, receive, and hold to them and their successors for ever. And to the same bishops, duke of Exeter, Henry Fitz-Hugh, and Roger, that they or either of them who survive may grant the aforesaid manor of Worton, which William Loveney holds for term of his life of the aforesaid bishops, duke of Exeter, Henry Fitz-Hugh, and Roger, and which after the death of the aforesaid William Loveney to the aforesaid bishops, duke of Exeter, Henry Fitz-Hugh and Roger ought to revert.<sup>1</sup> The priory of Lancaster, which Giles Lovell holds for term of his life of the aforesaid bishops, duke of Exeter, Henry Fitz-Hugh, and Roger, and which after the death of the aforesaid Giles, to the same bishops, duke of Exeter, Henry Fitz-Hugh and Roger ought to revert; 100 marks which John Cornewaill and Elizabeth his wife receive for the term of their lives from the possessions of the abbey of Seez, and which after the death of the aforesaid John Cornewaill and Elizabeth, to the aforesaid bishops, duke of Exeter, Henry Fitz-Hugh and Roger ought to revert; 93*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* which Joan, queen of England receives for the term of her life from the manor of Michelhampton, and which after the death of the same queen, to the aforesaid bishops, duke of Exeter, Henry Fitz-Hugh, and Roger ought to revert; the priory of Lodres, which William Burnell holds for term of his life of the aforesaid bishops, duke of Exeter, Henry Fitz-Hugh and Roger, and which after the death of the aforesaid William Burnell to the aforesaid bishops, duke of Exeter, Henry Fitz-Hugh, and Roger ought to revert; 20*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* which the aforesaid queen receives for the term of her life from the aforesaid manor and rectory of Felstede, and which, after the death of the aforesaid queen, to the aforesaid bishops, duke of Exeter, Henry Fitz-Hugh and Roger, ought to revert; 90*l.* which the same queen receives for the term of her life from the custody of all the lands, tenements, and possessions which belonged to the abbey of St. Nicholas of Anjou, and which, after the death of the aforesaid queen, to the aforesaid bishops, duke of Exeter, Henry Fitz-Hugh and Roger ought to revert, shall remain to the aforesaid abbess and convent, to have and to hold to them and their successors for ever. And to the aforesaid duke of Exeter, Henry Fitz-Hugh and Robert Morton, that they or either of them who shall survive, may give and assign the aforesaid manors, rectories or churches of Chilham, Molessh and Trowleggh, with the appurtenances, to the aforesaid abbess and convent to have, receive, and hold to them and their successors for ever. And also to the aforesaid bishop of Durham, John Stafford, William Sevenok and Henry de Chadirton, that they or either of them who shall survive may give and assign the aforesaid manor of Grauncortes, the messuage, land, meadow, wood, pasture and rent in Istelworth, Twykenham, Worton, and Heston, to the same abbess and convent, to have, receive and hold to them and their successors for ever. Also to the aforesaid bishops, duke of Bedford, duke of Exeter, Henry Fitz-Hugh and Roger, that they or either of them who shall survive, may grant that all the manors, lands, tenements and possessions of the abbey of Fiscamp, with all the appurtenances aforesaid, which the aforesaid John Cornewaill and Elizabeth hold for term of their lives from the aforesaid bishops, dukes, Henry Fitz-Hugh and Roger, and which, after the death of the aforesaid John Cornewaill and Elizabeth, to the aforesaid bishops, dukes, Henry Fitz-Hugh and Roger ought to revert, shall remain to the aforesaid abbess and convent, to have and to hold to them and their successors for ever. And to the same abbess and convent and their successors, that they may receive and hold the fisheries, pool, dove-cots, land, meadow; the priory of Oterton; the priory of Mount St. Michael; 110*l.* from the priory of Lancaster; the possessions of the abbey of Seez; the manor of Michelhampton; the manor of Tyleshide; 87*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* from the priory of Lodres; the manor and rectory of Felstede; the portion and lands, tenements and possessions of the abbey of St. Nicholas, with all appurtenances appending or belonging aforesaid; the advowson of the aforesaid church of Yevele; the four tuns of wine aforesaid from the aforesaid bishops, duke of Exeter, Henry Fitz-Hugh and Roger, or from them or either of them who shall survive; and the aforesaid manors, rectories and churches of Chilham, Molessh and Trewlegh, with the appurtenances aforesaid, from the aforesaid duke of Exeter, Henry Fitz-Hugh and Robert Morton, or from them or either of them who shall survive; also the aforesaid manor of Grauncortes; the messuage, land, meadow, wood, pasture and rent in Istelworth, Twykenham, Worton and Heston from the aforesaid bishop of Durham, John Stafford, William Sevenok and Henry de Chaderton, or from them or either of them who shall survive, to them and their successors for ever. And also to the same abbess and convent and their successors that they may receive and hold the aforesaid manor of Worton, after the death of the aforesaid William Loveney; the priory of Lancaster after the death of the aforesaid Giles; the priory of Lodres after the death of the aforesaid William Burnell; to enter upon the aforesaid manors, lands, tenements and possessions of the abbey of Fiscamp, with all the appurtenances appending or belonging aforesaid; and the aforesaid 100 marks after the death of the aforesaid John Cornewaill and Elizabeth; and 203*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* after the death of the aforesaid queen, to them and their successors, together with the aforesaid fisheries, pool, dove-cots, land, meadow; the priory of Oterton; the priory of Mount St. Michael; 110*l.* from the priory of Lancaster; the possessions of the abbey of Secz; the manor of Michelhampton, the manor of Tyleshide; 87*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* from the priory of Lodres; the manor and rectory of Felstede; the portion, lands, tenements and possessions of the aforesaid abbey of St. Nicholas; the aforesaid manors, rectories or churches of Chillham, Molesb and Trewlegh; the manor of Grauncortes; the messuage, land, meadow, wood, pasture and rent in Istelworth, Twykenham, Worton and Heston, with their appurtenances aforesaid in free, pure and perpetual alms for ever as is aforesaid by the tenor of these presents; in like manner we have given special licence, because the aforesaid licenses of our aforesaid father in his life-time were in no wise executed, or the statute of lands and tenements not bestowed at mortmain published, or any other statute, grant, gift, matter or cause whatsoever to the contrary made notwithstanding. Saving always to the mayor of London and his successors, and to every other person and their heirs whomsoever, their search, survey and correction in the water of Thames to them formerly granted, or of right had and used. And also to every person and their heirs, all title, right, action and common claim to the rents, services, liberties and franchises of and in the said manors of Worton and Grauncortes; the messuage, land, meadow, wood, pasture and rent in Istelworth, Twykenham, Worton and Heston; and in the pool and dove-cots aforesaid, with the appurtenances, and in each parcel of the same, by action, entry, distress and other legal means, and to each English person born in England, liege of our lord the king which now is, and to their heirs, all right, title, action, entry, common claim and demands to the franchises and liberties which they at present have in the lands, tenements, rents and services, by any farmers, bailiffs or other occupiers whatsoever of the aforesaid priories, manors or possessions wrongfully had, occupied, approved or assumed. Provided always that all abbots and alien priors and their successors claiming the said priories, manors or possessions, or any parcel of the same (conventual priories, if any there be alone excepted), be precluded and excluded from their claim, action, and demand by authority aforesaid for ever. Witness the king at Westminster, the 20th day of October."<sup>1</sup>

This charter was further confirmed by Edward IV. in the first year of his reign.<sup>2</sup>

In 1426 the first stone of the new church of the monastery was laid by the regent John duke of Bedford, in the presence of the bishops of London and Winchester.<sup>3</sup>

In 1428 a dispute arose between the abbess and convent of Syon, and Henry Bolbet, archdeacon of Richmond, concerning the revenues and tithes of the priory of Lancaster, granted to this monastery by Henry the Fifth, and which was referred to the arbitration of John Kemp, cardinal archbishop of York and lord chancellor, and others. It was decided that the archdeacon should have the greater tithes, and the convent the lesser tithes.<sup>4</sup>

On the 30th September in the same year, Robert Bell was elected confessor general of this monastery on the death of Thomas Fishbourne, the last confessor general. At that time the names of the sisters, priests, and lay-brethren, were as follow:—

The original site of Syon Monastery was in the parish of Twickenham, and is said to have been in the meadows now the property of the Marquis of Ailsa, formerly called Isleworth or Twickenham Park. In the year 1431, Henry the Sixth granted permission to the abbess and convent to remove to a more spacious edifice which they had built upon their demesnes within the parish of Isleworth. The following is a translation of their petition and the King's answer.

“To our most sovereign lord the King, the humble supplication of your poor and continual orators the abbess and convent of the monastery of St. Saviour, and the Saints Mary the Virgin and Bridget of Syon, of the order of St. Augustine, and of St. Saviour called, sheweth, that whereas your highness, by your gracious letters patent, with the advice and assent of your most dear uncle Humphrey duke of Gloucester, and your council, granted licence to your said suppliants, that they for certain causes in your said letters specified, might remove and pass from the place where they then dwelled to another place by them chosen, there perpetually to remain agreeable to the effect of the said letters patent, the tenor of which are to this petition annexed. In consequence of which they have removed to such their place and monastery, where they now dwell. May it please your royal Majesty, for the worship of God, and the greater ease and surety of your said suppliants, by the authority of this present Parliament, to authorize, approve, ratify, and confirm your said letters patent, &c."

The letters patent here referred to, after noticing the particulars of the original foundation of Henry the Fifth, proceed to state, that "The said abbess and convent had presented their humble petition, setting forth, that their aforesaid monastery was so small and confined in its dimensions, that the numerous persons therein, dedicated to the service of God (under certain regulations), were not only incommodiously but dangerously situated, being sixty nuns or sisters, besides twenty-five men of religion, (the latter of whom, however, dwelled by themselves in a separate convent, conformably to the apostolical decree and revelation, and the constitutions of the blessed St. Bridget, and only officiated as chaplains or clerks to the said nuns, in the celebration of divine service, and the administration of the sacraments;) that in consequence thereof the said abbess and convent had chosen out a spot in the neighbourhood of their said priory, within the said lordship of Isleworth, more meet, healthful and salubrious for them to inhabit, and had begun, and with great cost completed, the erection of a certain edifice more spacious and convenient, as well for the habitation of themselves as of the said religious brethren, which monastery, so built anew and enlarged, they have earnestly requested licence of us, and of all concerned, to consecrate and set apart, as a habitation for them, the said abbess and nuns, and men of religion, and that they may remove to the same, and there perpetually abide in the service of God, and agreeable to the rules and institutions of their order. Know ye, we therefore of our

pity (the premises duly considered, and such intention and proposition as aforesaid) have vouchsafed, confirmed, and by our licence permitted them the said religious of the monastery of St. Saviour and St. Mary the Virgin, and St. Bridget of Syon, professing the rule of St. Augustine, and of St. Saviour's commonly called, to the said mansion so chosen, and by the said abbess and convent erected, edified, built and enlarged as aforesaid, to migrate, pass, and remove immediately, or when most convenient and expedient to themselves, and have likewise granted them permission there perpetually to abide without any prejudice, loss, let, or diminution whatsoever of them the said abbess and convent, or their successors, in regard to any their possessions, goods, immunities, liberties, franchises, or rights, now or at any time heretofore possessed, or to them or their monastery in any manner belonging by purchase, gift, or otherwise, which might happen by such migration or removal; and of our devotion, and from a desire to promote with our grace, favour, and help, the just, pious, and reasonable desires of the said abbess and convent, to such more healthful and salubrious spot as aforesaid, with the advice and assent of our most dear uncle Humphrey duke of Gloucester, protector of our kingdom of England, and of our own free motion, do grant, &c. for us and our heirs, to the said abbess and convent, and their successors, and to them afford special licence to remove and pass from their present dwelling to such place above mentioned, so by them newly chosen, edified, constructed and enlarged, there perpetually to abide agreeable to such their regulations and orders without any let of us or our heirs, and that thenceforth no prejudice, loss, or diminution to them or their successors be made or done, &c. but that they be suffered to hold the same premises, and all and singular their possessions, manors, lordships, &c. peaceably, pleasantly and quietly in all things as heretofore, such migration, translation, refoundation, or any statutes thereof to the contrary notwithstanding. In witness, &c.<sup>1</sup>

In the same year (1431) by common consent of the brethren, the following six offices of the dead were appointed to be celebrated every year for ever.

1. For King Henry the Fifth, who founded this monastery and zealously perfected the order. This obit was to be celebrated with all solemnity on the anniversary of his death.

2. For Lord Henry Fitz-Hugh, who first brought this order into this Kingdom, and gave to this monastery in part of an endowment £20 annually. This obit was to be celebrated within the octaves of the Epiphany, viz. on the fourth day, unless it should happen on a Sunday. This office was to be observed not only for the said Lord Henry Fitz-Hugh, but for all the founders and foundresses of alien priories to this monastery pertaining.<sup>1</sup>

3. For Father Thomas Fishborne, the first confessor general of this monastery.<sup>2</sup> This obit was to be celebrated on the anniversary of his death. For he, having been counsellor and confessor of the aforesaid King, did greatly promote his benevolence and favour towards the foundation and more ample endowment of this monastery. Also he laboured strenuously for the continuous increase, spiritual and temporal, of this order and monastery, as well at the court of Rome as in this kingdom and monastery. If, however, either of these three should happen on a Sunday, or on a Tuesday, it was to be anticipated by the nearest day that the chanter most conveniently could appoint. This office was to be observed not only for the said Thomas Fishborne, but for all abbesses and confessors of this monastery for ever.

4. For the professed sisters and brothers of this monastery. This obit was to be celebrated in the first week of the Advent of our Lord, the day to be assigned by the chanter.

5. For their parents and benefactors. This was to take place on the Wednesday after Quinquagesima Sunday, if the feast of the nine lessons should not occur on that day. But, if so, on any holiday of the preceding week.

6. For the brothers and sisters of the chapter. This was to be observed within the Octaves of Relics, when the feast of the place was performed, or of the commemoration of the most glorious Virgin, or when it might be more convenient. Also, in the same year, the brothers granted to Richard Scot, chaplain, that, living or dead, he should be accounted in the suffrages of the monastery, as though he had been a professed brother; and that for him an office should be celebrated after his death, on the 31st and anniversary day, as was accustomed to be done for the professed, because he gave 200 marks in money and value to this monastery.<sup>1</sup>

In 1433 (5th Oct.) Matilda Muston was elected abbess, and confirmed therein by the Bishop of London, on the 13th of the same month.<sup>2</sup>

It would appear that, although Henry the Sixth had granted the abbess and convent permission to remove to their new house, the building itself was as yet incomplete, as, in 1442, the King, by his letters patent, granted to them and their successors the following privileges; viz.:

“That they shall not be molested by land nor by water by any of his purveyors or other officers whomsoever. And that none of the masons, carpenters, and tilers, or any of their workmen, or any of their materials to be employed towards the construction of the new Monastery of Syon, should be taken away by any his officers against their will; but that they shall have full and free power to carry and take them away in and through the highways generally used in his warren, called ‘le counyng-yerd,’ within his manor of Sheen, and to and from the wharf ‘de le Bricke ooste,’ unto and upon the water of Thames, and to exercise the said carrying without let or hinderance whithersoever. He further granted ‘that they shall not be distrained by any his ministers or officers upon their goods, chattels, and other materials or necessities, which they now possess or hereafter may possess; nor that any the ministers of him or his heirs shall take, lead, or carry away, any the said goods and chattels against the force, form and effect of this present grant. And that the aforesaid abbess and convent, and their successors and ministers may resist them. Nevertheless, that the abbess and convent, and their successors or said ministers, shall not on that account incur any contempt or fine, loss, or damage in their person or goods; that this present charter shall be exhibited by the abbess and convent, and their successors, or any one in their name, before any judges, justices, and ministers of the King, or his heirs, throughout the whole realm of England, and upon that exhibition it shall be allowed to the said abbess and convent and their successors, without any writ, mandate or process thereof, further to be prosecuted or proclamation to be made. So nevertheless, that this whole aforesaid grant shall remain in force and effect for ten years henceforth only. And, therefore, it is commanded that the aforesaid abbess and convent, and their successors, shall not be molested or oppressed contrary to this grant."

In 1443 (12 Nov.) the King confirmed his father's grant of all the possessions belonging to the alien abbey of Fiscamp, viz. the vills of Brede and Steyning, with their appurtenances, and the manors of Brede, Steyning, Charlton, Warminghurst, Wiggenholt, Gitleston, Basset's-Fee, Angmering, Soumting, Langenhurst, Bargham-Wyke, and Billinghamurst, with their appurtenances, and of the advowsons of the churches of Steyning, Angmering and Ashurst, in the county of Sussex; and of the manors of Cheltenham, Salmondeshury and Slaughter, with their appurtenances, and of the hundreds of Cheltenham, Salmondeshury and Slaughter, in the county of Gloucester. These possessions were originally vested in Sir John Cornewaill, knight, and Elizabeth his wife, for the term of their lives respectively; and at their death reverted to the crown; by virtue of which reversion,

On the 29th November following, the King further confirmed, by letters patent, to the abbess and convent of Syon, the manors, rectories, or churches of Chillham, Moldash and Trewleigh, in the county of Kent, as granted by Henry the Fifth. By which same confirmation, the tenants of the manor of Isleworth were released for ever from a payment of £20 tallage, theretofore accustomed to be paid to the abbess and convent. It would appear that a condition was implied that the said tenants should augment the books of the library belonging to the brothers of the aforesaid house in recompense for the release of this tallage.<sup>2</sup>

In 1444 the King granted in frank-almoigne,<sup>3</sup> to the abbess and convent, the manor of Minchinghampton in the county of Gloucester, parcel of the possessions of the alien abbey of Caen in Normandy. This manor was formerly held by William de la Pole, earl of Suffolk, and Alice his wife, for term of their lives respectively, and which at their decease reverted to the Crown.<sup>4</sup>

On the 16th of July, in the same year, the abbess and convent obtained the King's licence of exemption from apostolic jurisdiction and other immunities, they having been previously aggrieved by, and cited before, the official court of Canterbury; and on the 18th of the same month

the king confirmed the grant made to them in frank-almoigne, by Henry Fitz-Hugh, lord of Ravensworth, of the manor of Hinton, with the appurtenances called Uphalle, in the county of Cambridge; as also the lands, tenements, &c. which the same Henry had in the towns of Hinton, Wilbraham-Magna, and Wilbraham-Parva, in the same county.<sup>1</sup>

In the same year also the king pardoned the abbess and convent all manner ingresses, intrusions, occupations and offences committed by them or by their officers, proctors, servants or ministers in the priory of Mount St. Michael in Cornwall, and in all the lands and tenements which belonged to the abbey of St. Nicholas of Anjou in England, in Spalding, in the county of Lincoln; also all manner of issues, profits, fines, amerciaments, rents, fruits and other emoluments had and received by the aforesaid abbess and convent or their attornies, proctors, or other ministers or servants belonging to the places aforesaid.<sup>2</sup>

It appears, however, that, notwithstanding the foregoing letters of pardon, the abbess and convent in the following year complain that, although they have shown the said letters to all sheriffs, &c. yet they have been charged with certain arrears of the issues of the profits of the above-named priory, to the amount of 67*l.* 10*s.* 4*d.* as appears on the pipe roll of the 21st and 22nd of Henry the Sixth. And the said abbess and convent are pardoned and released from the said sum claimed as arrears. The king further pardoned them all ingresses, &c. in all the lands and tenements in Spalding and Pinchbeck, in the county of Lincoln, parcel of the possessions of the alien priory of Cosham and of the alien abbey of St. Nicholas of Anjou.<sup>3</sup>

In 1447, the king by his charter, dated at Maidstone 8th January, granted to the abbess (Margaret Ashby) and convent, certain important liberties. As it contains too many ancient terms of privilege to be passed over by a mere incidental notice, a translation is given.

" The king to the archbishops, bishops, &c. greeting. Know ye, that of our special grace we have granted for us, our heirs and successors, and by this our present charter have confirmed, to Margaret, abbess of the monastery of St. Saviour and Sts. Mary the Virgin and Bridget of Syon, of the order of St. Augustine, and of St. Saviour called, and to the convent of the same place and their successors, and all and singular the people, tenants resiant and non-resiant, and other resiants who for the time may be of and in all and singular the lordships, lands, tenements, fees and possessions of the same abbess and convent and their successors to them now bestowed or hereafter to be bestowed, that the aforesaid abbess and convent and their successors, and the people, tenants resiant and non-resiant, and other resiants aforesaid, shall for ever have and hold, and every one of them shall have and hold all and singular their houses and buildings which now they have or are to have free from the charge of the steward, marshal, herberger, and of other the officers and ministers of us, our heirs and successors, and of all the other officers and ministers of our consort the queen of England and her successors, and our sons and the sons of our heirs, and of all peers and magnates and of all others whomsoever. And that the aforesaid abbess and convent and their successors, and the people, tenants resiant and non-resiant, and other resiants aforesaid, and all the goods, chattels and merchandise of them or either of them shall be free throughout our whole realm of England from all manner of pannage, passage, lestage, stallage, carriage, picage, terrage, tronage, pontage, chiminage, anchorage, wharfage, tallage, and from other toll whatsoever, and from all scot and geld, hidage, scutage, danegeld, hornegeld and carucage and wapentake, and shewing, muskenning, awainmotes, and from carrying treasure, and ward-peny, ward-corn, aver-peny, hundred-peny, borthal-peny and trithing-peny; and from kaiage, murage, paage, barbicanege, girthbreche, forstal, homesoken, blodewyte, hengwyte, fightwyte, lamewyte (! lairewyte), and from all like custom; also from all aids for the first born sons of kings to be made knights, and for the first born daughters of kings to be married; and from all aids of sheriffs; and from expenses of knights and burgesses to the parliament of us, our heirs or successors coming; and from amerciaments, and from fines and issues of the county and sheriff's-tourn; and from suits of county and sheriff's tourn and hundreds: Although the same people, tenants resiant and non-resiant, and other resiants, or either of them, shall happen to be officers or ministers of us, our heirs or successors, or although the same people, tenants resiant and non-resiant, or other resiants, or either of them, shall hold any tenements of us, our heirs or successors, or of others. We have also granted for us, our heirs or successors, and by this our present charter confirmed to the aforesaid abbess and convent and their successors, that they shall for ever have view of frank-pledge, leets, lawe-dayes and wapentakes for all people, tenants resiant, and other resiants aforesaid, in whatsoever places, by the same abbess or her successors to be limited, where to them it shall seem most expedient within the lordships, lands, rents, fees and possessions aforesaid, to be holden by the steward or other officers; also whatsoever to view of frank-pledge, leets, lawe-dayes and wapentakes do belong, together with the assay correction and assise of bread, wine and ale, and of all other victuals and measures and weights whatsoever, and whatsoever to the office of clerk of the market of the household of us our heirs or successors do belong, to do and execute, with fines, amerciaments and other profits thence arising, and with soc, sac, infangentheof, outfangentheof, waif, estray, treasure-trove, wreck of the sea, deodands, chattels of felons and fugitives, of outlaws, of waive, of persons condemned, and of felons of themselves, escapes of felons, year day waste and estrepement, and all other commodities, forfeitures and profits whatsoever, with all and singular the things to all and singular the premises belonging or pertaining within the lordships, lands, tenements, fees, and possessions aforesaid now and in future arising, happening or occurring. And also that they may erect and have gallows, pillory and tumbrel<sup>1</sup> in whatsoever place to them shall seem most expedient within the lordships, lands, tenements, fees and possessions aforesaid, for the punishment and judgment of malefactors who may happen to be apprehended and found, according to their liberties aforesaid granted and to be executed. And that the aforesaid abbess and convent and their successors shall have all fines as well for license of agreeing (pos fines) as all other fines; also issues and amerciaments, redemptions and forfeitures, as well before us our heirs and successors as before the chancellor, treasurer, and barons of our exchequer, the justices and commissioners of us, our heirs or successors whomsoever, made forfeited or adjudged, or to be made forfeited or adjudged, of all the people, tenants resiant and non-resiant, and all other resiants of and in the lordships, lands, tenements, fees and possessions aforesaid, and also of the pledges and manucaptors of them and of every one of them, although the same people, tenants resiant and non-resiant, and other resiants, pledges or manucaptors or any of them, may hold lands or tenements of us, our heirs or successors, or of others; or although they or any of them be officer or minister of us, our heirs or successors, or although the same pledges or manucaptors or any of them be tenants or non-tenants of the same abbess and her successors, or resiants or non-resiants upon or within the lordships, lands, tenements, fees and possessions aforesaid. And that the aforesaid abbess and convent and their successors shall have free warren of and in the lordships, lands, tenements, fees and possessions, with all things which to warren do belong. And that the aforesaid abbess and her successors in every county where any parcel of the lordships, lands, tenements, fees and possessions aforesaid are, or in future may happen to be, may have and hold within the lordships, lands, tenements, fees and possessions aforesaid, in some certain place by the same abbess or her successors to be limited, before their steward or bailiffs for the time being, their three-week courts for complaints to be made before the steward or the bailiffs of the courts aforesaid or of any of them, and likewise may hold there all manner of pleas of account, debt, detention of charters, writings, muniments and chattels, and of the taking and detaining of beasts or other chattels, trespasses 'vi et armis' or otherwise, in contempt of us, our heirs or successors, against the form of any statutes of us or of our illustrious progenitors made, agreements, contracts and personal actions arising and happening, or in future happening to arise within the lordships, lands, tenements, fees and possessions aforesaid, to whatsoever sums the aforesaid accounts, debts, chattels or damages of trespasses or agreements, or other like pleas, actions, or contracts, shall amount, and to cause the persons against whom the like complaints in the courts aforesaid or in any of them shall happen to be prosecuted or moved to be attached by their bodies, and to commit and retain them in prison ; also in their courts aforesaid and in each of them to hear all the aforesaid pleas, and to decide and terminate them by similar processes, considerations, judgments and executions of sentences in the same manner as the like pleas in our courts are decided, terminated and executed. And that the aforesaid abbess and convent and their successors shall have cognizance of all pleas of all contracts and actions real and personal and mixed, and of all other pleas within the lordships, lands, tenements, fees and possessions aforesaid which now are and shall be, and of other quarrels, contracts, and of all other matters, as well of pleas of assize, as of unlawful distresses within the same lordships, lands, tenements, fees and possessions happening, done and arising, and that there in future shall happen to be done and arise, moved and to be moved, as well before us, our heirs and successors as before the chancellor, treasurer and barons of the exchequer, justices assigned to hold pleas before us, justices of the common bench and justices of assize, as well general as special, of us, our heirs or successors ; and that the same pleas before the aforesaid steward or bailiffs in the aforesaid courts and in each of them shall be had, holden, decided and terminated, and judgment thereof rendered and executed in manner and form abovesaid. And that the aforesaid abbess and convent and their successors shall for ever have ward and custody of the lands and tenements of all and singular their tenants held of them by knights'-service during the minority of their heirs ; together with reliefs, escheats, forfeitures, and other profits, issues and emoluments whatsoever, although the same tenants may hold of us, our heirs or successors in chief or of the crown, or otherwise, or of others in any manner. We have granted also to the same abbess and convent and her successors, if any subject, servant or minister of the aforesaid abbess and her successors within the limits or enclosures of the said monastery or of their habitation shall lay violent hands upon another, so that it be not maim, the same abbess and her successors or their deputy shall have full cognizance, correction and punishment thereof, so that no officer or minister of us, our heirs or successors, shall therein in anywise interfere. And that the aforesaid abbess and convent and their successors shall have the return of all writs, precepts, bills or mandates whatsoever of us, our heirs and successors, as well of those which concern us, our heirs or successors, or shall be at the suit of us, our heirs or successors, as of other writs, precepts, bills and mandates, writs of assize and appeal, citation and distress of the exchequer, of us, our heirs and successors, and of all justices, commissioners and ministers of us, our heirs and successors: And also the return of bills and precepts returnable before the admiral of England or before any of his officers and ministers for the time being, and before the steward and marshal of the household of us, our heirs and successors; also the execution of all and singular the premises whatsoever within the lordships, lands, tenements, fees and possessions aforesaid. And further, that no sheriff or other officer or minister of us, our heirs or successors, or any of them, shall attach, arrest, or take any of the people, tenants resiant, or any of the resiants aforesaid by writ, precept, warrant, mandate or cause whatsoever within the county where they are or shall be resiant, although they or any of them may be found without the lordships, lands, tenements, fees and possessions aforesaid: but the same shall be sent to the said abbess and her successors or their ministers, to cause execution thereof. And that neither the aforesaid abbess and convent nor their successors shall be in any wise bound to grant, administer or find, at the request or command of us, our heirs and successors, any pension, corrody or maintenance for any one, but be exonerated and quit thereof for ever. And further, we have granted to the aforesaid abbess and convent and their successors and all the tenants resiant and non-resiant, and other resiants aforesaid, that the purveyors and captors or purchasers of our household, nor the purveyors, captors or purchasers of the household of our heirs and successors, nor any other, shall take any goods or chattels of the aforesaid abbess and convent and their successors, tenants resiant and non-resiant, or any other resiants aforesaid, for the provision of the household of us or our heirs or successors, nor of any other; but that the aforesaid abbess and convent and their successors and tenants resiant and non-resiant, and other resiants aforesaid, and also their farmers, of the like provision shall be quit and altogether exonerated for ever. And further, of our more abundant grace, we have granted, and by this our present charter confirmed, to the aforesaid abbess and convent and their successors, that they for ever shall have, enjoy, hold, and possess all and singular the lordships, lands, tenements, fees, and possessions to them or to any of their predecessors now bestowed, or hereafter to be bestowed, with all and singular the liberties, immunities, privileges, and acquittances of, for, or in, or to the same belonging, pertaining, accruing, happening, arising, or occurring, as freely, entirely, and peaceably as any of our progenitors or any other before this time held the lordships, lands, tenements, fees, and possessions aforesaid, or any parcel of the same, and as entirely, freely, and peaceably, with all and singular the liberties, immunities, and acquittances, as we to them most freely and peaceably can give, grant or confirm, although the lordships, lands, tenements, fees, and possessions aforesaid, or any parcel thereof, or the liberties, immunities, privileges, and acquittances there, be not expressed by special words in these presents; and although the lordships, lands, tenements, fees, and possessions aforesaid, or any parcel of the same, did exist in the hands of us or of any of our progenitors from time immemorial; although also the aforesaid abbess or her successors have abused or disused those liberties, immunities, privileges, and acquittances, or any of the same. So that no escheator, sheriff, bailiff, or any other officer or minister of us or of our heirs or successors, may enter upon and in the lordships, lands, tenements, fees, and possessions aforesaid, nor in any parcel of the same, nor interfere in any wise to do or exercise any thing within the lordships, lands, tenements, fees and possessions aforesaid, nor any parcel of the same. And that the aforesaid abbess and her successors be exonerated for ever and quit from all fines, as well for the charter of confirmation of this our present charter, as for other charters, letters patent and writs of us our heirs and successors whatsoever to be had in the courts of us, our heirs and successors, and from all manner of fees of seals of us, our heirs, and successors whomsoever. We have also granted by these presents, that it shall be lawful for the aforesaid abbess and convent and their successors to take full seisin and possession of and in all and singular the fines, issues, amerciaments, redemptions, forfeitures, commodities, and emoluments whatsoever, by us in these presents to them granted, when and so often as they shall happen, and to receive, levy, and collect them to the use and profit of the aforesaid abbess and convent and their successors ; and that it shall also be lawful for the aforesaid abbess and convent and their successors, the people, tenants resident, and other residents aforesaid, and every of their servants whomsoever, to resist the officers or ministers of us, our heirs or successors, or others, doing or purposing or presuming to do to the contrary, and to make rescue from them or any of them without let or impediment of us, our heirs or successors, or of other the officers and ministers and liege men of us, our heirs and successors, whomsoever. And that the same abbess and her successors shall for ever have and hold all and singular the lordships, lands, tenements, fees, and possessions aforesaid, free, quit and exonerated from all and all manner of charges, rents, services, annuities, apports, farms, and arrearages of farms and apports, exactions and demands to us or our heirs and successors in any wise pertaining or belonging, and which by reason or cause of the same lordships, lands, tenements, fees, and possessions, do or may belong to us, our heirs or successors, from them, without rendering or doing any thing, for or from the same lordships, lands, tenements, fees, and possessions to us, our heirs or successors. Although the charges, rents, services, exactions, annuities, apports, arrearages of farms and demands aforesaid, be not fully expressed by special words in these presents, or although the lordships, lands, tenements, fees, and possessions aforesaid, or any parcel thereof, did or do exist as part of any former alien priory or possessions ; although, also, it was ordained by authority of Parliament holden at Leicester, in the time of our father the Lord Henry, the late King of England, that all possessions of the alien priories excepting the conventual priories, and others in a certain Act of the same Parliament excepted, should remain to himself and his heirs under a certain form contained in the same Act ; or, although the peace between the kingdoms of England and France be or may be renewed ; or because that in these presents no mention be made of the true value of all and singular the premises or of any parcel of the same, or of the other gifts or grants by us or any of our progenitors to the now abbess and convent aforesaid, and their successors, or to any of their predecessors formerly made, does not exist in this deed ; or whatsoever omission, variation, or superfluity of name or recitation of priories, lordships, lands, tenements, fees, and possessions aforesaid, or any of them, in any wise made or hereafter to be made, or any other right, title or interest which to us in this behalf may belong, or to us, our heirs or successors, might in future belong, or the publishing of the statute concerning the putting of lands and tenements in mortmain, or any other statutes, ordinances, acts, restrictions, or mandates to the contrary of the premises, or any of them, made or to be made, notwithstanding. These being witnesses, the venerable fathers J. Archbishop of Canterbury, primate of all England, our chancellor; W. Bishop of Lincoln; Marmaduke Bishop of Carlisle, our treasurer of England; and A. Bishop of Chichester, keeper of our privy seal; our well-beloved cousins Richard Duke of York and Humphrey Duke of Buckingham; our well-beloved cousins Edmund Marquis of Dorset, and William Marquis of Suffolk, our chamberlain of England; and our well-beloved cousins, Richard Earl of Salisbury, and John Earl of Shrewsbury; also our beloved and faithful Ralph lord of Sudley, steward of our household, and Sir John Stourton, treasurer of the same our household, knights, and others. Given under our hand at Maidstone on the 8th January."<sup>1</sup>

About this period a controversy took place between the abbess and convent of Syon and the dean and chapter of Chichester, respecting certain tithes in the parish of Ovyng, in the diocese of Chichester. It appears, by a return to a writ of 13 Edward II. to the Court of Exchequer from the dean and chapter of Chichester, that the abbat of Sees, and the bailiff of Adryngton, held certain spirituals and temporals in Ovyng up to that time. But, upon a claim being now made for the same by the said abbess and convent, as parcel of the possessions of the alien abbey of Sees granted to them by Henry the Fifth, an ordinance was cited of the ecclesiastical court of Canterbury in 1223, that all the lesser tithes did entirely belong to the vicar there. Moreover, as a proof that the same tithes did not belong to the abbess and convent, the dean and chapter state, "that in the year 1414, in the time of Henry the Fifth, certain persons in the name of the bailiff of Adryngton, in the time of autumn, with swords, bows, and arrows, entered a field called Abelond, in the parish of Ovyng, and there sold certain tithes of land of the manors of Eastcourt and Westcourt of Drayton, which same tithes John Blounham, then precentor of Chichester, claimed as belonging to him; and a dispute thereupon arising, he procured the said tithes to be taken to his house, with this agreement, that, if they could hereafter exhibit letters of evidence that they belonged to the bailiff of Adryngton, he would then make restitution of the same." And it is a fact that no exhibition was afterwards made on behalf of the said bailiff from the year 1439 to 1461.<sup>1</sup>

In the first year of Edward the Fourth, the provost and scholars of King's College, Cambridge, by their charter dated 26th Feb. released and quitclaimed to abbes [Elizabeth Gybbes,]<sup>2</sup> and convent of Syon and their successors, all their right, title, and claim, which they then had or might hereafter have of and in the priory of Mount St. Michael in Cornwall, with its appurtenances; the manor of Tilshead, with appurtenances, in the county of Wilts, which formerly were parcel of the alien abbey of Caen; the manor and rectory of Felsted, with their appurtenances, in the county of Essex, which formerly were parcel of the aforesaid abbey of Caen; all the lands, tenements and possessions which formerly belonged to the abbey of St. Nicholas of Anjou in Spalding, in the county of Lincoln, with their appurtenances; and all kinds of revenues arising from the church of Cosham, in the county of Wilts, with their appurtenances; together with all manner of hundreds, leets, courts, wapentakes, views of frankpledge, &c. to the same priory, manors, lands, &c. in any manner pertaining or belonging.<sup>3</sup> This charter was further confirmed to Syon Monastery in the same year,<sup>4</sup> and exemplified under the great seal of England in the following year.<sup>5</sup>

Notwithstanding the previous grant of this priory to the abbess and convent of Syon, it was granted, with the lands above mentioned, by Henry the Sixth to King's College, Cambridge, which he had newly founded.<sup>1</sup> This grant was, however, repealed by Edward the Fourth, and confirmed by him to Syon monastery as just stated.<sup>2</sup>

In 1462, (26 Oct.) the King, for the sincere devotion he had towards the convent of Syon, granted a charter of protection of all their possessions; and by his decree therein contained, exempted them from all actions of distress or grievances of any kind by land or by water, through his victuallers, purveyors, and other his officers or ministers whomsoever. He further granted them the same liberties as were granted by Hen. VI. in the 21st year of his reign;<sup>3</sup> and, moreover, on the second November following, pardoned them all and all manner of fines adjudged, issues, forfeitures, amerciaments, &c. which were by them due, pertaining or belonging to him.<sup>4</sup>

In 1465, the King confirmed to the abbess and convent the charter of liberties granted by Henry VI. in the 25th year of his reign;<sup>5</sup> and, upon a petition of the same abbess and convent, also confirmed former letters patent granted by him in the first year of his reign;<sup>6</sup> as well as an enrolment

<sup>2</sup> The Priory of Mount St. Michael received the name of St. Michael Stow, St. Michael in Monte, and St. Michael de Magno Monte, as early as the 6th century. Previous to 1044, a priory of Benedictine Monks had been established on the island; in that year Edward the Confessor gave to the monks the Mount with all its appendages. After the Conquest, Robert Earl of Mortaigne and Cornwall, gave this monastery to the Abbey of St. Michael in Periculo Maris, like this situated on a mount near the sea-coast of Normandy. In the reign of Edw. III it was seized by the Crown as an alien priory, and given by Henry VI. to King's College, Cambridge, and then by Edw. IV. to Syon Monastery as stated in the text. At the dissolution, the lands belonging to this house, as parcel of Syon, were valued at 110*l.* 1*2s.* 0*½d.* Henry the Eighth gave it to Humphrey Arundell of Lanherne. The family of St. Aubyn are the present possessors. See Borlase's Cornwall p. 386, fol. ed. Lysous's Magn. Brit. vol. iii. p. 317. of a certain Act of Parliament of the ninth of Henry the Fifth, disuniting the manor of Isleworth from the duchy of Cornwall, and granting it to this monastery. He further granted and gave licence to the same abbess and convent, to use and enjoy all and singular the constitutions, privileges, exemptions, immunities, &c. to them granted by the bull of Pope Martin V. This charter was confirmed by Parliament in the same year, the convent paying five marks into the hanaper.<sup>1</sup>

In 1468 the King, upon another petition of the abbess and convent, granted his royal letters of protection and safe conduct to a certain vessel called the "Mary of Caen," of 80 ton weight more or less, Peter Mansel, master, laden with stones from Caen for the building, constructing and completing of their monastery, together with other lawful goods and merchandize, and that the vessel and all its crew and cargo should have safe conduct by land as well as by sea or rivers in all parts inland or foreign subject to his dominion, for the safe embarking and disembarking, selling, and buying goods and merchandize whatsoever to and for their use, according to the King's staple at Calais. He, moreover, granted that the master, mariners, &c. with their goods aforesaid, should be free from all hinderance and grievance in coming, going, and returning to and from foreign parts, any letters of marque or reprisal granted or to be granted notwithstanding. It was, however, provided that if any of the said merchants, or any of their company, should infringe this present safe conduct of the King, that he or they should be answerable for any loss or damage occasioned thereby.<sup>2</sup>

During the short period that Henry the Sixth was restored to the throne, through the influence of the Earl of Warwick, a Parliament was summoned to meet at Westminster on the 7th of November, A.D. 1470, wherein Edward the Fourth was declared an usurper, and almost every statute made dur-

At which Parliament the abbess and convent of Syon, apprehensive that the King would re-grant the priory of Mount St. Michael, &c. to King's College, Cambridge, presented the following petition, praying that no statute or ordinance made therein might in any way be hurtful or prejudicial to them and their successors :

To this petition the Parliament assented; and it was forthwith exemplified under the Great Seal of England.*

In 1474 a deed of composition was made between the abbess (Elizabeth Gybbis) and convent, on the one part, and Thomas Bishop of London, as ordinary of the diocess; the wardens and scholars of Winchester College, proprietaries of the church of Isleworth, and the vicar, on the other part; relative to tithes and other ecclesiastical matters.<sup>1</sup>

About this period, Anne, daughter of Cicily duchess of York, wife of Richard duke of York, and mother to king Edward the Fourth, was prioress of this monastery, as appears from the will of the said Cicily, dated 1st April, 1495, "wherby she leaves her daughter" "a book of Bonaventure."

And the great tithes of the church of Olney, in the county of Bucks, were appropriated to the abbesse and convent.

And, by indenture dated 15th July, made between Henry the Seventh and John Lappe, abbot of the monastery of St. Peter of Westminster, and the prior and convent of the same monastery, the said abbot and his convent were obliged to pay the abbesse and convent of Westminster, for an anniversary to be solemnly kept in the last-mentioned monastery, for the king, his queen and family "whille the worlde shall endure."

In 1513 (19th May), John Trowell was elected confessor-general.<sup>1</sup>

In 1518 (31st August), Constancia Browne was elected abbess in the room of Elizabeth Gybbes, deceased, and confirmed therein by the bishop of London, on the 2nd September following. At that time the names of the sisters and brethren were as follow :

In 1521, Thomas Stanley, second Earl of Derby, who died at his manor house at Colham, in the parish of Hillingdon, was buried in this monastery.<sup>2</sup>

In 1531, Nicholas Tufton released to Agnes [Jordan]<sup>3</sup> abbess (in full possession then being), all right and title to his six acres of marsh, in the marsh called Gatebarowe, and to three acres of marsh in the marsh called Syon, or Rye.

In 1537, the same Agnes obtained the king's special license to alienate to Sir Richard Rich, chancellor of the court of augmentation, (inter alia) the manors of Felsted alias Felsted-Bury, and Graunt-Courts, and one messuage in Felsted, in the county of Essex, in the tenure of Roger Wentworth, esq. to have and to hold to him and his heirs for ever, of the king, by fealty only.<sup>4</sup>

In the following year, by indenture dated 1st December, 30 Hen. VIII. she demised the manor of Charlton cum Ashurst, in the county of Sussex, to William Pellett and his assigns, for the term of 99 years, at the yearly rent of 22*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.*<sup>5</sup>

And subsequently, in 1539, she demised the manor and rectory of Sidmouth, parcel of the possessions of the alien priory of Otterton, in the county of Devon, annexed to Syon Monastery temp. Hen. V., to John Coswell, gent., for the same term, at the yearly rent of 5*l.* 17*s.* 7*d.* The lease dated 5th May, 30 Hen. VIII. was allowed by the Court of Augmentations.

We have now arrived at the period when monastic institutions were declining in popular estimation.

In the year 1534, Henry the Eighth, having thrown off the papal yoke, caused a general visitation to be made of the monasteries by Cromwell, secretary of state, who was appointed vicar-general, or vicegerent; a new office, by which the king's supremacy, or the absolute uncontrollable power assumed over the church, was delegated to him.

The commissioners whom he employed were armed with ample, not to say dangerous powers, and were ordered to make the most minute inquiries into the condition and affairs of every monastery in their particular district. They were to demand an account of the endowment attached to each house, and of the manner in which such revenues were applied; they were to inquire into the moral conduct of the monks, friars, or nuns; into the degree of strictness with which they observed the rules of their particular order; into their manner of electing a superior; into the peculiar regulations of every society; and into the number of its members. In case of resistance, they were to collect from every quarter such information as might justify the suppression of the refractory brotherhood.<sup>1</sup>

These visitors, having discovered a great many disorders in several religious houses, took an exact survey of all their revenues and goods, and prepared the way for a final disso-

<sup>1</sup> The articles of inquiry are eighty-six in number. Bishop Burnet has printed them in the Collection of Records, vol. i. p. 191. See also Harl. MS. No. 791, fol. 18, et seq. and Fosbroke's Brit. Mon. p. 215. Among the Cotton MSS. Cleop. leton. They duly sent to the lord privy seal (Cromwell) accounts of what they did, and now they took their surrenders, with the endowments and revenues thereof, taking into their hands all the convent seals, evidences and ornaments.

Although in many monasteries it was found difficult to extract from the monks an approval of the king's second marriage, and also an acknowledgment of his title as supreme head of the church, it would appear from several letters preserved among the Cotton MSS. that the inmates of Syon Monastery (with the exception of one or two of the brethren) were not only favourable to the king's supremacy, but that also John Fewterer, then confessor-general, and two other discreet brethren, were employed to persuade certain monks belonging to the Charter-house, near London, (who had worked themselves up into a belief that an abdication of the papal supremacy was necessary to salvation, and fastened the same into the minds of those who came to them as penitents,) to yield themselves to the king. They, however, still continuing refractory, and the king being both to go to the utmost extremity, recourse was had to constrain them by separating them from each other; whereupon several were sent to this Monastery, that they might there be induced to submit themselves to the measures of the government. This arrangement appears to have had the desired effect, as many of them soon after, though with reluctance, took the oath, and a letter was sent to the confessor-general from two of the brethren who had returned to their monastery, thanking him for his good counsel and advice. In 1517, Henry Man and John Michel, appointed by the king to visit the monasteries of the Carthusian Order, sent to John Coppinger, then confessor-general, to endeavour to remove the scruples of two brethren of the Charter-house of Beauvale, touching the king's supremacy.

that was suppressed by Henry the Eighth. It is said that the king selected this convent as an object of especial vengeance, as it was accused of affording an asylum to his enemies. The monks were also deemed coadjutors of Elizabeth Barton, the holy maid of Kent, with whom, by means of one Richard Reynold,<sup>1</sup> a priest of this house, Sir Thomas More condescended to hold two conferences in a little chapel at this place,* "concerning such secrets as had been revealed unto her, some part thereof touching deeply the matter of the king's supremacy, which shortly after this followed, and about the unlawfulness of the king's marriage."<sup>2</sup>

The following report of lord Cromwell's agent, on the eve of the Reformation, contains, as might be expected, imputations on the morals of the community, which of course it was the object of the commissioners to exaggerate as much as possible.

"Hit may please your goodness to understonde that Bisshope this day prechede and declaredde the Kings title varawelle, and had a grete audience, the churche fulle of people, one of the focares in his saide declaracion openly callede hym fals knave, with other foliashe wordes; bit was that foliashe felowe with the curlede hede that knelyde in your way whun ye came forth of the confessors chambre. "Right worshipful, after my moost hertie commendations, plesce it you to understand that maister Leightone and I have had much busines with this house sythens your departing hens. And as for the bretherne, they stand stif in thaire obstinacy as you left thaim. Copynger and Lache were sent to my lord of London on Monday. Here were on tuesday Doctor Buttes and the Queen's amner to convert Wytford<sup>2</sup> and Litelle. And on Wensday here were Doctor Aldrigge, Doctor Curvene, Doctor Rawghe, and doctor Morgan, sent by the Kinges grace for that purpose, but they no thing proficted. I hameried Whitford after that in the garden bothe with faire wordes and with foule, and shewed him that throughe his obstinacy he shuld be brought to the greate shame of the world for his irreligious life, and for his using of bawdy wordes to diverse ladys at the tymes of thaire confession, whereby (I seyed) he myghte be the occasion that Frost shalbe layed downe throughe England, but he hathe a brasyn forehed, which shameth at no thing. One Mathew, a lay brother, upon hope of liberte, is reformed. We wold fayne knowe your advise what we shal do with Whitford and Litelle, and a lay brother, one Turyngtone, whiche is very sturly against the Kinges title. We have sequestered Whitford and Litelle from hering of the lady's confessions. And we think it best that the place where thes frires haue beene wont to hire uttward confessiouns of al commers at certen tymes of the yere, be walled up, and that use to be foredoon for euer, for that hering of uttward confessions hath beene the cause of muche evyl, and of much treson, whiche hath beene sowed abroad in this mater of the Kinges title, and also in the Kinges grace mater of his succession and mariage. sent for by maister Leighton and me. And labored muche that day for the converting of his suster [Margaret Wyndesore] and some other of his kynneswomen here; and yesterday we had my lord of London here in the chapter house of women, and the confessor also, which bothe take it upon thaire consciences and upon the perill of thair soules, that the ladyes oughte by Goddes law to consent to the Kinges title, wherewith they were muche comforted, and where we wylded al such as consented to the Kinges title to syt styll, and al such as wold not consent there unto to depart out of the charter house. There was founde none among them which departed. Albeit I was informed this nyght that one Agnes Smyth, a sturdy dame and a wyfel, hath labored divorce of her susters, to stope that we should not have thaire convent seale; but we trust we shal have it thus unworship, with the subscriptions of thabbes for her self and al her susters, which is the best fasshion that we can bring it to. The person which ye speke with at the grate envyethe very much to speke with you, saying she hath suche thinges which she wold utter to no man but to you, and what they be I cannot conject. We purpose this after none, or els tomorrow morning, to awaite on the Kinges grace to know his pleasure in every thing, and specially touching the murring up of the howses of utterward confessions. Maister Leighton hath written certene compeets unto you, and therfore I further to speke any thing thereof. The ladyes of Sion beseeche you to be good maister unto them and to thaire house, as thaire special trust is in you, and that they alle run not into obloquy and slander for the mysbehavior of one person. A greate number of the ladyes desired me to speke unto you that Bishop and Parker myght be discharged from the house of Sion, and Bishope and Parkere desire the same. I mervaile that they desire not likewise to be discharged of the persone with whome ye talked at the grate, seing Bishopes caus and that is one. From Sion the xviith day of December.

The fate of this community is singular and interesting. Upon their dissolution they did not separate, like most of the other communities, but retired into the Low Countries, and continued to live together in a conventual way, until they were recalled to England by Queen Mary.*

After the suppression of this house, the conventual buildings were not sold or given to any court favourite, but, on account of its fine situation, continued in the King's hands during the remainder of his reign; John Gates, esq. being appointed keeper.*

In the year 1544, the gloomy and desecrated walls of Syon were selected for the prison of the unfortunate Katharine Howard. This Princess was confined here from the 14th Nov. 1544 till the 10th February in the ensuing year. Three days after, she perished on the scaffold. She was kept very strict, but served as Queen.<sup>1</sup>

In 1542, by indenture bearing date 14th March, made between Hen. VIII. and Sir Andrew Windsor, knt. Lord Windsor, the same Lord Windsor sold to the King his lordship or manor of Stanwell in the county of Middlesex, with its members and appurtenances in Stanwell aforesaid, Isleworth, Heston, and other places in divers counties, the whole being (besides the woods, which were valued at 1,111*l.* 4*s.* 3*d.*) of the clear yearly value of 225*l.* 16*s.* 10½*d.* In consideration whereof, and also for the sum of 2,197*l.* 5*s.* 8*d.* paid into the Exchequer, the King sold to Lord Windsor the manors and advowsons of Minchinhampton and Avering, the manors and farms of Pynbourne and Loosemere, in the county of Gloucester, with their appurtenances there, or in Rodborough, Bury-mere, Brinckscombe-Frith, Mailsworth, and Wagenhill, in the same county, and in Somerford, in the county of Wilts, lately belonging to the late Monastery of Syon, together with other places in various counties, the whole being of the clear yearly value of 307*l.* 14*s.* 1*d.* above all reprises, and also above the several yearly rents thereby reserved to the King, being 34*l.* 3*s.* 11*d.* to hold the same by the service of the 20th part of one knight's fee.<sup>2</sup>

In 1546, the office of keeper of the new park of Isleworth was granted to Robert Bouchier for life.<sup>3</sup>

On the 14th Feb. 1547, when the corpse of King Henry the Eighth, whose funeral procession appears to have been of a character unusually magnificent, was to be removed from Westminster to Windsor to be interred, it laid the first night, not at Richmond, as is commonly supposed, but at Syon, where divine service was duly celebrated for the repose of the deceased;<sup>4</sup> and which latter place by this means became the scene in which a prophecy was supposed to be fulfilled. Peto, a Franciscan friar, preaching before the King at Greenwich, in 1535, had the assurance to tell him, "that God's judgments were ready to fall upon his head; that he was always surrounded with a crowd of lying prophets, who foretold him good success; but for himself, like another Micaiah, he warned him that the dogs would lick his blood, as they had done Ahab's." Now as the King died of a dropsical disorder, and had been dead a fortnight before he was removed to Syon, it so happened that some corrupted matter of a bloody colour ran through the coffin at that place. This was misconstrued into a completion of Peto's pretended prophecy, and considered as a divine judgment upon the King, for having for ced the Bridgetines from their religious sanctuary.

Edward the Sixth, in the first year of his reign, granted this monastery with its appurtenances to his uncle Edward Seymour, Duke of Somerset, the Lord Protector,* who had before rented some premises at Isleworth under the abbess and convent,<sup>1</sup> and who began soon after to erect on its site the magnificent structure whose shell, though variously altered, still remains. The gardens were inclosed by high walls before the east and west fronts, and were laid out in a very grand manner, but being made at a time when extensive views were deemed inconsistent with the stately privacy affected by the great, they were so situated as to deprive the house of all prospect. To remedy that inconvenience, the Protector built a high triangular terrace in the angle between the walls of the two gardens; and the malevolence of those political accusers who brought him to the block, descended to so mean an extremity, as to represent this terrace as a fortification, and to insinuate that it was one proof, among others, of his having formed a design dangerous to the liberties of the King and people. On his attainder and execu-

The King made Sir Thomas Wroth keeper of the chief house and messuage of Syon, as also steward and bailiff of the manor of Isleworth, and all other lands, tenements, and hereditaments in Isleworth, Twickenham, Heston, Whitton, Sutton, Brentford, &c. in the county of Middlesex, for life; with all profits, and a fee as keeper of Syon House, &c. In September following the King gave him the rich furniture and bedding of the same house, which formerly belonged to the Duke of Somerset.'

In the following year, Syon House was granted to John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland,' and became the scene of some important transactions connected with his ambitious views. It was at this place that, as soon as the death of Edward the Sixth was made known, the Duke of Northumberland, accompanied by the Duke of Suffolk, and others of the nobility, and with all the forms of respect usually paid to the sovereign, approached Lady Jane Grey, and prevailed upon her to accept the fatal present of the crown, to which she had no legitimate claim. Here had she resided since her marriage, enjoying the society of her husband, to whom she was tenderly attached, and who well deserved her affection. Not only was Lady Jane totally ignorant of the schemes of her father-in-law, but also entirely unprepared with the design of his extensive intrigues, until her elevation was made known to her upon the death of Edward.

and at first she resolutely refused the proffered dignity, urging with no less good sense than justice the superior claims of her cousins the Princesses Mary and Elizabeth; and combating successfully every argument her relations advanced, she pleaded anxiously for leave to remain in the happy obscurity she then enjoyed; but Northumberland's ambition was not easily to be turned aside from the completion of what had cost him so much toil to accomplish, and his earnest remonstrances were seconded by the Duke of Suffolk her father; but all ineffectually, until the importunities of Lord Guildford Dudley, a husband she devotedly loved, were added: she thereupon yielded, but with the most heartfelt regret. The imminent danger in which those nearest her heart were placed, is supposed to have been the motive for her change of determination, and which nothing but her possession of the royal dignity could avert.

After receiving this calamitous ornament, she was conveyed from Syon House with great state to the Tower, which fortress, according to long-established etiquette, had been the accustomed residence of the Sovereign immediately subsequent to accession, and afterwards proclaimed Queen of England, with the usual formalities.<sup>1</sup> The Duke being beheaded in the same year, Syon House again reverted to the Crown.

On the accession of Queen Mary, the Pope's authority was restored in England; and, to prevent alarm, the Queen and the Pope gave repeated assurances that the church and abbey lands should remain in the hands of their present possessors. In confirmation of these promises, an Act of Parliament was passed in 1554,<sup>2</sup> which, while it restored the Pope's authority gave security to the proprietors of the ecclesiastical estates, maintained their title beyond the power of revocation, and exempted them from the danger of spiritual censures. This act was ratified by the Pope through his legate, Cardinal Fieschi, and, that the dispensation might be still more ample and effectual, the property of future acquisitions of church lands was assured to the present receivers; the nobility and gentry were settled in the quiet enjoyment of their estates, and the Pope was reinstated in his supremacy over the church, though he lost a portion of its wealth.<sup>1</sup>

Although Queen Mary, in the first year of her reign, made grants of the site of twenty religious houses, she retained this house in her possession, and made Sir Henry Sydney keeper of the park and woods.<sup>2</sup>

In 1557, 1st August, she was prevailed upon by the priests who acted as her counsellors to restore the convent of Syon, through which the tithes were received in England, and reinstated in their monastery by the Bishop of London, and the Abbot of Westminster. Certain of the monks and friars of that order being present. The Queen, by letters patent, re-incorporated them as before the dissolution, and also granted them in frank-almoigne the site and precinct of the said monastery, with the dairy-house and all the lands thereto belonging, and the church or chapel of Isleworth, formerly appertaining to the said monastery. On the 5th January following, she further granted them in frank-almoigne, Syon Park, the Lyon Inn, the Corn-mills, &c. and divers other lands parcel of the manor of Isleworth, the site of the chapel of All Angels, and the bede-houses adjoining, and divers messuages, lands, and tenements late belonging to the same chapel.<sup>3</sup>

Previously to this the nuns of Syon had resided for some years in a monastery of their own order at Dermond in Flanders, at which place Cardinal Pole, who was returning from Rome to England, found them. On his arrival in England, in the second year of the reign of Philip and Mary, he proposed to their Majesties that inasmuch as they were most zealous in the cause of the ancient religion, it would please them to restore the monastery of Syon to its first estate, which they commanded immediately to be put in execution.'

On the restoration of the monastery, sister Catharine Palmer (who had been chosen abbess,) gathered together several of the sisters and brethren dispersed in England, the names of whom were as follow :—

The following details of the peregrinations and personal treatment of the Brigetine nuns, from the time of their departure from England to their settlement at Lisbon, are taken from a very interesting MS. kindly lent the author by the religious community of Syon Monastery at Lisbon. It was composed by their chaplain, Mr. Foster.<sup>2</sup>

On their arrival in Flanders, they again joined the religious community of the same order in Flanders, where they remained in a quiet and secluded life, making, as it were, two monasteries of the same place. The mother of the English nuns, who was a very pious and virtuous woman, after being sustained by the charity of their friends in England, and by the sale of their goods, through many females who were in want, in this manner they lived for some years in Flanders, but becoming greatly impoverished by the sale of their goods, Philip the Second granted them a pension of 1000 crowns for their subsistence. At the death of Philip the Second, the Duchess of Parma, Regent in the name of his daughter, the Queen, in the territory of the same order, where some Flemish nuns had lived, received the English nuns, and gave them a house, where they lived in great plenty, and were not in want, the money being given them by the Duchess. On account of the unpopularity of the order, they remained there until the year

<sup>1</sup> Clementia Tresham, daughter of Sir John Tresham, knight, and of his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John de la Pole, knight, was born in 1510, and died in 1540. She was the only daughter of Sir John Tresham, knight, and of his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John de la Pole, knight. 1568, when, through the assistance of Dr. Nicholas Saunders,<sup>1</sup> they removed to Brabant, a more healthy and secure province, and bought a house and church a league from Antwerp, called Meshagan. Here they dwelt four or five years; but, the Protestants gaining ground in those parts, they were greatly annoyed by the Lutheran ministers, who daily preached in the woods that encompassed their monastery, and many of the people endeavoured to force open the gates, and to climb their walls by night. Becoming alarmed at these proceedings, and imagining their lives to be in danger, the unhappy fugitives again set forth to seek a shelter and a home, and they had scarce left the house ten hours when the populace came with carts, horses, and other preparations to take and carry them and their goods away. They fled in great fear to Antwerp, where they remained above a year, very ill accommodated; and then removed to Mechlin, where they hired another house by the favour and help of Sir Francis Englefield, who came from Spain to Flanders a short time previous to this occurrence. This noble knight had been counsellor to King Philip and Queen Mary in England, and had departed the realm for conscience sake as soon as Elizabeth began her reign, bringing with him nevertheless as much of his riches as he could, wherewith afterwards, so long as he was able, he maintained these religious women and other Catholics of his country also in exile for conscience sake. The nuns of Syon lived seven years in Mechlin,<sup>2</sup> until, by reason of their religion, together with the aversion which that people had against their King, they were deprived of all sustenance, and the alms which his Catholic Majesty had allowed them could not be recovered in consequence of those revolts. Their friend, also, Sir Francis Englefield, was then gone to Spain to obtain a pension of the King, not being able to sustain himself otherwise. They had now no other means left went up into a certain tower alone, where she set up a wax candle in honour of St. Bridget, burning it before her picture, and, pouring out her whole heart and desire with great earnestness, craved mercy and life. While she was thus praying, she plainly saw her candle before the picture extinguished, and all hope as it were cut off, when on a sudden she saw it re-lighted, and burning again; at this she was greatly astonished, but stayed to see if it would again go out, and finding it did not, she continued in prayer till it was all burnt out. She then went down joyfully to the Abbess and some sisters that were with her, saying their blessed saint had even now in yonder tower given them comfort and good news, relating to them the miracle of the candle, all which was soon after verified. For after the Confessor had received extreme unction, and was given over by the physicians and others, yet he recovered by a most strange medicine, procured by one Madame de Monts. Upon this his wonderful recovery he began to inspect into his charge; and, seeing the want both of spiritual help, being destitute of brothers, and also the temporal state, without house, church, maintenance, or any conveniences necessary for a community, he set himself with all diligence to repair and remedy these defects.

And first, for the spiritual state, he nominated for their preacher Mr. John Marsh, an approved confessor, then in Flanders, being with other priests banished England. He also professed Mr. Thomas Gore, in the order of a vocary, and not long after Mr. John Vivian (likewise banished for his faith) and Mr. David Kemp to the degree of preachers, with some others recorded in the register. Poverty, however, began now to oppress the community, by reason of the King of Spain's pension having ceased for the space of nine years, and likewise all aid from their own country being cut off. However, their Father laboured so much by his letters and friends with the King of Spain's governors and officers, that at last he drew back the pension to its destined channel. Nor were his endeavours wanting at home in Rouen, where he procured a new house for the convent called the Three Mallets, with a fair court and garden for the brothers, and for the sisters he built several handsome cells.

On the King of France coming to Rouen in 1587, their Father presented a petition to his Majesty on behalf of two of their convent, then prisoners in England, mentioned hereafter. Shortly after this the King visited their convent, and, finding their premises too limited, offered them another called the Filles de Dieu, which the Father declined, alleging that it would expose them to the hatred of the inhabitants. His refusal greatly displeased the King; who, however, subsequently visited the lady Abbess, but did not offer to enter their inclosure; but, in consideration of their poverty, gave alms amounting to £18 sterling.

Another trouble now arose to this community, viz. on the Sunday before St. Martin's day, A. D. 1587, forty-four of the common conduits being broken, and dried up, as frequently happened, a multitude of people with pails, pots, pitchers, &c. came into their court before the church door, and demanded water, in the presence of all the people who were there to hear mass, saying they had made a secret conduit in their cave, and dried up all the common conduits of the city; crying, "They are strangers, they are English, our old enemies; why should they be amongst us?" with other like speeches. This tumult was spread and maintained by the French, who had placed their confederates at every conduit, to incense the people who came for water, telling them that the Bridgetines were the cause of this, and sending them to the convent for water. Thus the community was made odious to the people, which was a most dangerous thing for strangers, as they experienced in other countries; for, at Mechlin, on a like report, the common people, despite of the magistrates who could not stop them, broke into the sisters' inclosure, entered their cells, refectory, and choir, searching and ransacking all places for armour and weapons, which was contrived against them, that they might be plundered, and banished the city. And though they found nothing of what they pretended to seek, yet every one took what they liked, and departed, leaving the poor sisters in great misery and confusion. The Lady Catharine Palmer was so frightened, that it was the occasion of her death, to the unspeakable discouragement and loss of the convent. In the present difficulty, the Father had no remedy left but to go to the pastors and preachers, it being Sunday, and desire them to publish and certify the contrary to the people. This method he adopted; and he also sent some of the brethren to stand by the conduits to notice and contradict the seditious inciters of the people; through which, this enterprise was divested of further bad consequence. A great lady, the principal of the whole city, named Madame de Burdenie, by forged reports, had been alienated from them; but, the matter being examined by her own son, the chancellor of the city, and Monsieur du Port, a judge of the Court of Parliament, and plainly proved to be false and untrue, the lady thereby understanding their innocence and integrity in all these troubles and afflictions, not long after went to the convent, and requested upon her knees to be received as a lay sister among them (not having ability in song for a higher degree), but, as she was too old and too honourable for that place, it was not convenient to grant her desire.

The tumults and wars in France now occasioning much sickness and death, the Bridgetines shared the sufferings. Thereupon, by advice of the Lord Cardinal Allen, their Father sent two of the brothers, viz. Brother John Marsh and Brother John Vivian, into Spain, to recover some arrears which the king's officers in Flanders had not paid them, and to procure succour and arms from that court; who, on their return were taken and robbed by the people of Rochelle, stripped of their habits and cloaks, and in great infamy led almost naked to prison, where they would have died if one or two secret catholics had not relieved them. This news

Father took another course, which was, to make use alone of the governor of Rouen, Mons. Carrage, desiring he would write to Secretary Walsingham (who was Carrage's especial friend,) in the King of France's behalf for the sending the brethren home. Through these means was obtained not only the enlargement of the two brethren, but also of another priest who came from Spain, and was imprisoned with them in Rochelle and the Marshalsea, and afterwards became a professed brother of Syon.

On the first besieging of the city of Rouen by Henry IV. poverty and famine daily increasing, and the Father not being able, with his utmost endeavours, to maintain the convent, and pay the rent of their house, procured another from the Duke de Mayne, Lieutenant of the Crown of France, and general of the Catholic army, so that they lived rent-free, and also prevailed so much with the principal inhabitants, that they freely bestowed upon them wood, timber, and as many square cut stones from a castle built by the English when they were Lords of Normandy, but now pulled down,<sup>1</sup> as sufficed to build a church; and for defraying the workmanship, he persuaded a devout lady to make a gathering or contribution of the whole city. He also caused a large and handsome dormitory to be built for the sisters, with several convenient partitions or cells, and windows on both sides; and in the church he erected a large high choir.

This work happily finished, to the great ease and comfort of the whole convent, there came upon them a new toil and trouble from the great famine occasioned by the long siege of the city. This storm, however, having been foreseen by their Father, he had provided for it by laying up in store sufficient maintenance for more than half a year's siege; thus, while other convents that were well endowed sent their religious to their own relations through want, this had plenty. The Father then proceeds to narrate, at considerable length, several minute occurrences; be dressed in white, each having a white taper in her hand, and they in this manner encircled the hearse. The reverend Father-in-God, John Lesly, Lord Bishop of Ross,<sup>1</sup> performed the service in his pontifical vestments; which ended, the theologian of the cathedral church preached a funeral sermon in her commendation.

The city of Rouen having surrendered to Henry of Navarre, the community had reason to expect that great troubles would arise about their faith and religion, and also about their house which was given them by the League, and belonged to one whose goods were confiscated for being of the contrary party, and who might now return and dispossess them; so that, friends, sustenance, and house being taken from them, they could not possibly live there any longer. Moreover, they doubted whether their pension would continue to be paid them in that place, which was opposed to the Catholic King. They therefore determined to leave Rouen; and first thought of retiring to Flanders; but, that country being embarrassed with wars, and offering no hope of alms, but only their bare pension, (which was not sufficient for their number, being little more than 400 crowns,) it was finally settled that they should go to Spain, to which place they could go by water, as being much better, cheaper, and with less toil for women, than to travel by land, and as they could also thus better convey the best of their church furniture, books, moveables, and all their relics. They engaged a ship to carry them to Newhaven; but upon going aboard, the master increased almost half the price they had agreed to pay him. However, two days after, on Good Friday, the whole community, consisting of twenty-two sisters and one servant, a Frenchwoman, with their Father and seven brothers, embarked, and proceeded on their voyage.

When their departure was known, many flocked to take leave of them; their friends and acquaintance were full of strictly searched by an officer, and afterwards another pretended that he would also search them, but it appears they were sent by the governor only to observe them, for what end they knew not.

The next day, being Easter Day, the Father, not unmindful of this holy time, solemnised the feast of the Resurrection of our Blessed Lord and Saviour, and, after hearing the Confessions of the Sisters and Brethren, made an exhortation to them. At the conclusion, he administered the Blessed Sacrament, receiving first himself, then his brethren, his priests, and afterwards the lady Abbess, and all the community.

After dinner they sailed towards Humfleet, and arrived there at night, where, for joy and thanksgiving to God and their blessed Lady, the lady Abbess and sisters sang the "Regina Cœli." Here they were most courteously saluted by the governor, Monsieur Grillion, and suffered to pass, though they had no passport, as all ought to have had; but, their time being so short at their departure from Rouen, they had not leisure to apply for passports. They sailed thence that night, and in the morning (Easter Monday,) arrived in the road of Newhaven. Here they were apprehensive that the new altered government of Rouen, and of course that of Newhaven, which depended thereon, might oppose their progress, and also lest they might not get a ship, and escape the English ships. The Father entered the town at the Port Onerant, and was conducted to Mr. Goodion's chamber, who was the governor and lieutenant of the cavalry, as well as brother to the admiral or governor of Rouen, to whom he presented the admiral's passport for Spain, as also a letter from Mr. Villars, with others from their friends in Rouen to the governor in their behalf. The sisters being very much indisposed, their friends in the city thought it most convenient for them to have a lodging on shore, whereupon the said Monsieur Goodion received them out of the ship, and conveyed them by torchlight to one of his own houses, where they had but two chambers for sisters, brothers, altar, them a visit, and ordered five ducats a day for their maintenance, till his Majesty should appoint otherwise. They were also hospitably received here by the Franciscan nuns of the monastery of our Lady la Esperança. Afterwards the Father began a journey on foot to Madrid the first Sunday in Advent, where, on his arrival, he was kindly entertained, and the second day after had audience of the King, young Prince, and Infanta, who all sat at one table to entertain and talk with him. After his Majesty had asked him many kind questions about the convent, he received their letters and petitions, and with great kindness dismissed him; yet by reason of the King's indisposition and their Father's sickness, the suit was prolonged, though the first business the King dispatched and signed was theirs, viz. the confirmation of their five ducats a day, with another grant of 700 crowns a year for six years.

Being thus settled in comfort upon the foundation before mentioned, and expecting peace and ease for the rest of their lives, and thinking they had left all their troubles and vexations behind them, they began with great confidence to set forward their spiritual building, and increase of their company, by the profession of a novice who came from France with them; little thinking that in so Catholic a country, their troubles and sorrows, which seemed to have been buried, would have been revived, as they were in the following manner:—viz. the noviceship of Sister Dorothy Shelley being expired, the Father acquainted the Archbishop of it, desiring him to celebrate the profession according to their rule, being their diocesan, which he promised to do. The Father showed him their professional, and the manner of their profession, and a month after waited on him to desire him to appoint the day he thought most convenient. He fixed upon Tuesday in Easter week, adding, "he had acquainted the King of it, and had his licence, the King signifying in it his special favour and love towards them." All things being now certain, they invited many principal persons and friends to fession, which of his own accord he limited and tied to the council of Trent, and thus gave them the victory over their enemies. The community continued to live with the Franciscan nuns until Isabel de Azeredo, a noble lady, made them a gift of some houses and grounds in the place called Sitio de Morambo, where they built their church and monastery.<sup>1</sup> The then reigning Sovereign, Philip the Second, also endowed them with a pension of two milres per diem (11 shillings 1 penny halfpenny), and twelve mayos of wheat yearly (36 English quarters), paid from the revenue of the fens belonging to the Crown at Santarem. This revenue they enjoy at present, and, besides that, several legacies of houses and lands.* Among others a Portuguese lady, on becoming a nun among them, conveyed to their house the whole of her inheritance, to the value of 400 milres a year.<sup>2</sup>

In a work entitled "The Anatomy of the English Nunnery at Lisbon," published in 1622, by Thomas Robinson, some time a younger brother there, the following list of persons belonging to the convent is given :

Seth, alias Joseph Foster, confessor.
John Vivian and Nicholas Barrowes, priests.
Peter Consul, a lay-brother.

Barbara Wiseman, abbess.
Anne Wiseman, prioress.
Elizabeth Hart, chauntress.
Anne Wharton, treasurer.
Anne alias Josepha Bingham, portress.
Lucy Johnson, notaress.

"We the underwritten, and company, having on the first of November last suffered such irreparable losses and damages by the dreadful earthquake and fire which destroyed this house and other parts of the kingdom, that we have neither house nor sanctuary left us wherein to retire; nor even the necessaries of life; it being out of the power of our friends and benefactors here to relieve us, they having all undergone the same misfortune and disaster; so that we see no other means of establishing ourselves here than by applying to the nobility, ladies, and gentlemen of our dear country, humbly imploring your tender compassion and pious charity, that, so being assisted and succoured from your bountiful hands, we may for the present subsist under our deplorable misfortunes, and in time retrieve so much of our losses as to be able to continue always to pray for the prosperity and conservation of all our benefactors.

It would appear, however, that the monastery was very soon rebuilt, as Baretti, in his work, entitled, "A Journey from London to Genoa," written in 1760, vol. i. p. 133, in describing it, says, "It is called The English Nunnery, because no girl is admitted in it but what is born a subject of England. Any such girl, either left destitute in this country by parents unsuccessful in trade, or willing to come from the British Isles to devote herself in this country to chastity and confinement, may make sure of a livelihood in that nunnery; and, the veil once taken, she needs not to fear the approaches of real want as long as her soul and body will keep each other company.

"The number of the nuns there amounts to little more than twenty, and it is the chief anxiety of this little community to keep the number full, that the government may not, in case of too many vacancies, take upon itself to fill them every body with this gentleness of language and blandishment of manners. They certainly give you no reason for harbouring the least suspicion to their disadvantage, and their virtue is to all appearance without the least alloy : but were they in reality quite different from what they appear (which I am thoroughly persuaded is not the case), still the strong appearance of their innocence and goodness is irresistibly attracting, and the holy simplicity of their behaviour can never fail of making a friend of every man who is once introduced to their acquaintance, though ever so much aware of their flattery.

“ The King allows them such a sum as enables them to find themselves in victuals, linen, and raiment. Thus they are freed from the anxiety of procuring the chief necessities of life. Yet life, even by recluse women, cannot be passed very comfortably with mere necessities, and some addition is wanting to keep it from stagnating. Those minute superfluities, which the French call douceurs, so indispensably required to render existence supportable, are left entirely to their industry : and these they procure partly by work and partly by making trifling presents, which are often returned with liberality. These are the two means by which they furnish themselves with that chocolate so plentifully distributed at their parlatory to their incessant visitors, and with those other pretty things that alleviate the natural hardness of their condition. Some of them have small pensions paid them by their relations and friends, and whatever is got by one, is kindly shared by the whole sisterhood.

“ As the reputation of this little community was never sullied in the least ever since their establishment (and I am told that this is not quite the case with the Portuguese nunneries), is it not astonishing that no Portuguese parent ever thinks of sending his daughter amongst them as a boarder, and by way of giving her a true maidenly education ? A daughter thus placed would, amongst other advantages, have that of learning a foreign language very well worth learning ; and nothing contributes so much to enlarge the spheres of

Mary Dorothy Halford resigning, Dr. Poynter, with the approbation of the other nuns, appointed Sister Elizabeth Farnes as Abbess. In 1811 they inhabited a small house at Walworth in Surrey; but subsequently a larger house was purchased, and properly fitted up for them at Peckham, called after the name of their convent, Syon House, where they received novices, professed three choir nuns, with one or two lay-sisters, and where also, with the assistance of their friends, they established a boarding-school for young ladies of the Roman Catholic religion, at first with success; but, their circumstances becoming afterwards embarrassed, they determined to break up the establishment, and sell most of their effects by public auction, to satisfy their creditors. Dr. Poynter placed the youngest amongst the ten, and also the surviving choir nuns who had been professed at Peckham, in different convents. Sister Bridget Ricketts went to her friends at Boulogne, and afterwards travelled into Russia and other places, in the capacity of governess; Sister Mary Winefride Hutchison retired to the nunnery at Hammersmith, and thence to Bishop's Home, Winchester, where she died. In the interim, three or four of the old nuns, and one of the new professed, had died. A house was procured near the Roman Catholic chapel, Clarendon-square, Somers-town, for the remaining nuns, where they lived for some time; but were subsequently placed in a house at Cobridge near Newcastle in Staffordshire by the late Dr. Milner, Catholic Vicar Apostolic of the Midland District. At this place Sister Mary Dorothy Halford died, and Sister Monica Slummell left them, and returned to Lisbon, where she died. By the munificence of the present Earl of Shrewsbury, the poor nuns were relieved from their distress, and the debt which they had unavoidably contracted; and not only did his lordship kindly purchase their vestments, church plate, and books<sup>1</sup> which had been left for the purpose of being sold for the liquidation of their debts, but by granting a pension to the surviving nuns and lay-sisters in Stafford-the third (now the fourth) quarter is composed of bleeding hearts. The two palm-branches, increased in size, fill up the place of the legend. The larger of these seals is engraved (No. 4); the smaller is a copy of it, but of the size of No. 3.

In a still smaller seal, No. 5, the various emblems of the Saviour's Passion are displayed heraldically. On the field of the shield are the five wounds; and on a voided cross are, in chief the whipping-post, on the dexter limb the rod and whip in saltire, on the sinister limb the hammer and pincers in saltire, and in base the cock and three nails. The crest is formed of a calvary cross between the spear and rod of hyssop.

The oval seal (No. 6.) was supposed by Dr. Milner to represent "the founder of the Monastery of Syon, Henry V. in a suit of plate armour, with his sword in his right hand, and a book, probably the Constitutions of the Monastery, in his left." The inscription, however, suggests a different interpretation: it is Sigillum conuentus de tgon sancti adriani in elteren. The figure is evidently intended for the Saint Adrian here mentioned; his head is surrounded with a nimbus, and stands on a lion as his symbol; and as neither the name of St. Adrian nor that of Elteren occur in the history of the English nuns, it seems not improbable that this is the seal of some monastery<sup>1</sup> not connected with their establishment, but that, having come into their possession, it was preserved by them, merely on account of its bearing the name of Syon.*

The nuns who remained at Lisbon underwent, for a time, many privations, their convent being converted into an hospital for the sick and maimed of Lord Wellington's army; but after the peace, recovering all or part of the landed pro-

The sisters of Syon House are in possession of a painted portrait of the founder King Henry V. seventy inches in length and fifty-nine in breadth. This picture is supposed to have been brought from England.

They have also a book, entitled a Catalogue of the Dead, both brothers, sisters, and benefactors in the Monastery of Syon of the holy order of St. Bridget, from its first foundation in England in the year of our Lord 1415 to this present year 1839, which is read every morning in the Chapter House.

On the second dissolution of this monastery by Queen Elizabeth, the nuns took away with them not only what treasure they could carry, but likewise, as we are informed, "the keys of Syon House and the iron cross from the top of the church, by way of keeping up their claim to this their ancient possession." These they conveyed with them in all their changes of habitation, and still retain at their present House of Syon in Lisbon."<sup>2</sup>

nity of religious women which has never been separated or extinct since the reign of Queen Mary. All the other English convents (with the exception of the monastery of Sheen), both of men and women, were revived much later.

We may now return to the history of Syon House in Isleworth. Having fallen by the second dissolution into the hands of the Crown, Queen Elizabeth appointed in 1560 Sir Francis Knowles keeper for life;<sup>1</sup> the reversion of which place she afterwards granted to his son Robert.<sup>2</sup>

In 1563, the plague then raging in London, the Marquis of Winchester, Lord High Treasurer, was sent to survey Syon House, it being intended that the Court of Exchequer should be held there. The following is a copy of the letter sent by him to Sir William Cecil, Secretary of State.<sup>3</sup>

"I commend me hartely to you. Upon the receipt of your letters for the survey of Sion and Sheane for placing of th'excheaquer, and of the duchy, and of the court of wards and lyveres, for this Mychaelmas Tearme, I made instruccions and sent Stanton and John Rogers my servant, to the keeper of the place of Sion, under Mr. fee (sic) Chamberlayne, by whom they sawe all the place and perused my bill with the lodgings.

In the year 1611, Syon House with the manor of Isleworth was granted by James I. to Henry Percy, ninth Earl of Northumberland, and his heirs for ever,* in whom were already united the various houses made by Queen Elizabeth of the numerous houses.† This nobleman, one of the most unfortunate, though it may be one of the most deserving of his illustrious race, expended large sums in the repairs and improvement of the mansion. During the decline of the Queen's health, he was distinguished by the warmth with which he embraced the interests of the King at Scotland, in regard to his accession to the Crown of England; and at that period was the first privy-councillor named by James. But the fate of his family seemed still to pursue him. On a groundless suspicion of being connected with the Gunpowder Plot, he was stripped of all his offices, adjudged by the court of Star Chamber to pay a fine of £40,000, and sentenced to imprisonment for life in the Tower. In a petition addressed to the King (14 April 1613),

the Earl offers this place as a compensation for the oppressive fine imposed on him. "Sion, and please your Majesty, is the only land I can put away, the rest being entayled. I had it before your Majesty's happy entry 48 years by lease, without paying any rent, but such as was given back again certain in other allowances. It hath cost me, since your Majesty bestowed it upon me, partly upon the house, partly upon the gardens, almost £9,000. The land, as it is now rented and rated, is worth, to be sold, £8,000, within a little more or lesse. If your Majesty had it in your hands, it would be better than £200 a year more, by the copyholders' estates, which now payeth but two years' old-rent fine; dealing with them as you do with all your copyholders in England, is worth at the least £3,000. The house itself, if it were to be pulled down and sold, by view of workmen, comes to 8,000 and odde pounds. If any man, the best husband in building, should raise such another in the same place, £20,000 would not do it; so as according to the work it may be reckoned at these rates, £31,000; and as it may be sold and pulled in pieces, £19,000 or thereabouts."

This proposal, it appears, was not accepted. At the end of fifteen years the tardy mercy of the King permitted the Earl's release, after he had paid £11,000, and he passed the remainder of his life in tranquil and honourable retirement. This unfortunate nobleman was a person of considerable talents. Wood calls him "a learned man himself, and the generous favourer of all good learning." During his imprisonment he allowed salaries for eminent scholars to attend upon him, and also enjoyed the converse of his illustrious fellow-prisoner Sir Walter Raleigh. The abundant leisure for intellectual pursuits afforded by his long captivity was chiefly employed by him in the study of the mathematics; and, on account of his love for the occult sciences, he was sometimes entitled Henry the Wizard.

The buildings of Syon were again thoroughly repaired, by Algernon Percy, his son, and tenth Earl of Northumberland, under the superintendence of Inigo Jones.

11, on account of the infection then spreading, the Duke of York and Gloucester and the Princess Elizabeth were lodged here by order of the Parliament,<sup>1</sup> and the royal manor created by the Earl and Countess of Northumberland in all respects suitably to their birth. Through the Earl's request, Charles I. then under confinement at Hampton Court was often permitted to see his children. Clarendon,<sup>2</sup> speaking of this circumstance, says, "The King enjoyed himself at Hampton Court, much more to his content than he had or had, but that which pleased his Majesty most, was that his children were permitted to come to him, in which he took great delight. They were all at the Earl of Northumberland's house, at Ston, from the time the King came to Hampton Court, and had liberty to attend his Majesty when he pleased, so that sometimes he sent for them to come to Hampton Court, and sometimes he went to them at Ston, which gave him great satisfaction."<sup>3</sup> The Duke of York was at this period about fourteen years of age, and Elizabeth about twelve. "Early," observes the above writer, "in wisdom, wit, great observation, and an early acquaintance with the world." The Duke of Gloucester was seven. In 1644 the Duke of Northumberland, being desirous of surmounting the reputation of the Duke of Gloucester, as Prince of Wales, procured his sister, the Princess Elizabeth, to have the government of them;

whereupon they were removed to Penshurst, a seat of the Earl of Leicester's, in Kent; and on the 11th June, in the same year, the Earl of Northumberland moved that she might have the allowance for their maintenance, which was referred to the committee of the revenue.<sup>1</sup>

In 1682, by a vicissitude which appears worthy of remark, the estate returned to the family which had founded the present mansion, through the marriage of Charles Seymour Duke of Somerset with Lady Elizabeth Percy, only surviving child and heiress of Josceline eleventh and last Earl of Northumberland in the direct line, by Lady Elizabeth Wriothesley, youngest daughter of the Earl of Southampton. Her ladyship, when only four years of age, succeeded to the honours and immense estates of the house of Percy, holding in her own right six of the oldest baronies in the kingdom, viz. Percy, Lucy, Poynings, Fitz-Payne, Bryan, and Latymer. Being so great an heiress, she was soon surrounded by suitors, who sighed, not for her immature charms, but for her broad lands and proud titles; and it was her peculiar fate, before she was sixteen, to be three times a wife and twice a widow. She was first married, at the age of thirteen, to Henry Cavendish, Earl of Ogle, only son and heir of Henry Duke of Newcastle, who, by agreement before marriage, assumed immediately the name and arms of Percy, for which he had the royal licence. Upon his death, which occurred within a few months after his marriage, in 1680, lovers, or rather suitors, again crowded round the youthful Countess, then in her fourteenth year. Among them were Thomas Thynne, of Longleat Hall, in the county of Wilts, Esquire; and the celebrated adventurer, Count Köningsmark. The Count's personal advantages possibly attracted her notice; but her relations hastened to prevent the effects of his captivating assiduities, by contracting her to Mr. Thynne. However, before the marriage could be actually solemnised, Thynne was assassinated on the 12th Feb. 1682, Somerset's offer of Syon House for a temporary residence, during a misunderstanding which she then had with her sister Queen Mary, occasioned by her warm attachment to the Duchess of Marlborough. The Princess falling in labour at Syon House, was visited in her illness by the Queen;<sup>1</sup> and a remarkable account of this visit is related by the Duchess.

"She came attended by the Ladies Derby and Scarborough. The Queen never asked the Princess how she did, nor expressed the least concern for her condition, nor so much as took her by the hand. The salutation was this:— 'I have made the first step by coming to you, and I now expect you should make the next by removing my Lady Marlborough.' The Princess answered, 'That she had never in all her life disobeyed her, except in that one particular, which she hoped would some time or other appear as unreasonable to her Majesty as it did to her.' Upon which the Queen rose up and went away, repeating to the Prince, as he led her to the coach, the same thing she had said to the Princess."<sup>2</sup>

Upon the death of Charles Duke of Somerset in 1748, Algernon Earl of Hertford, his only surviving son, who distinguished himself in the Duke of Marlborough's wars, and was in every respect one of the most accomplished noblemen of his time, succeeded to the title and estate, and soon after gave Syon to Sir Hugh and Lady Elizabeth Smithson, his son-in-law and daughter, afterwards Duke and Duchess of Northumberland, to whose fine taste are owing the many and great improvements in the house and gardens of Syon.

<sup>1</sup> The following passage is from the London Gazette, 1692, No. 3758. "Whitehall, April 17 Her Royal Highness was taken ill last night at Syon House, and fell in Labor this Morning, near two months before her Time, and about Eleven of the Clock was delivered of a Son, who was immediately Christed by the name of George, and Dyed about an Hour after. The Queen went in the Afternoon to see her Royal Highness, who is as well as can be expected."

seen even from the state apartments, which are on the ground floor. By this arrangement, the most beautiful piece of scenery imaginable is brought into view from two of the principal fronts; for the Thames seems to flow through the grounds, of which Kew Gardens appear to form a part. The house stands nearly in the middle point of that side of the lawn which is furthest from the river, and communicates with Isleworth and Brentford by a fine gravel walk.

The entrance to this magnificent mansion from the great western road is through an elegant gateway after a design of Robert Adam, consisting of a central arch, surmounted by the lion-passant, the crest of the noble house of Northumberland, and connected by colonnades with two lodges.<sup>1</sup>

The entrance to the mansion is protected by a porte cochère, from which a flight of steps leads to the great hall, a noble oblong room, 66 feet by 31, and 34 feet in height. The pavement is of white and black marble, and the sides are enriched with four antique marble colossal statues dug out of Herculanum and Pompeii, representing Scipio Africanus, Livia, Cicero, and a Priestess. Under a screen of columns is an extremely fine bronze of the Dying Gladiator, cast at Rome by Valadier. The hall opens into the Vestibule (34 feet 6 inches by 30 feet, and 21 feet 2 inches in height), which is most superb and unique. The floor is of scagliola, with Mosaic ornaments, in imitation of marble, and the walls are enriched with bassi relievi and gilt trophies; twelve columns of real verd-antique marble<sup>2</sup> supporting gilt statues, and sixteen pilasters of the same rare and costly material, finely polished, impart an air of sumptuous magnificence to this apartment, appropriately called the "room of many columns." Between the windows is a table of remarkable beauty brought from Egypt.

<sup>1</sup> According to Moule (English Counties, p. 59.) an exact counterpart of this gate of entrance was presented by the late Duke of Northumberland to the King of Portugal, and sent to Rio Janeiro, his Grace being at the whole expense including the freight, and of a person sent out to superintend the erection. It was erected at "The Chiacre," the country residence of the King, about three miles from Rio Janeiro.

<sup>2</sup> They were dug out of the Tiber about a century ago, and purchased for the present Duke's grandfather at a cost of a thousand pounds sterling each.

The dining-room (62 feet long, 21 feet 7 inches wide, and 21 feet 9 inches high), which is entered on quitting the vestibule, is characterised by a chaste simplicity of style, and ornamented with marble statuary and paintings in chiaroscuro after the antique. At each end is a recess, with Corinthian fluted columns, supporting an entablature delicately embellished according to that order. The ceiling is elegantly worked in stucco, and enriched with gilding.

The drawing-room (44 feet 6 inches by 21 feet 7 inches, and 21 feet 2 inches in height) is the chef-d'œuvre. The sides are hung with a rich tri-coloured satin, the first of the kind ever executed in England. The tables are of costly mosaic, found in the baths of Titus, and purchased from the Abbate Furietti's collection at Rome. The glasses are of very large dimensions, and the chimney-pieces of the finest statuary marble, inlaid and ornamented with or-moulu. The ceiling is carved, and divided into small compartments richly gilt, with designs, executed by Italian artists, from various antique paintings that have been found in Herculaneum and Pompeii.

The gallery (135 feet in length, 14 feet in width, and 14 feet high) ranging along the whole of the eastern side, contains the library and museum; and is said to present the first instance of stucco-work performed in England. The ceiling is embellished with paintings, and ornamented with various devices, harmonising with the general character of the whole. In the upper divisions of the sides and ends is a series of medallions, exhibiting portraits of Kings and Queens of England; with those of all the Earls of Northumberland and other eminent persons of the houses of Percy and Seymour.

Here are also preserved some rare antiques, and also the vase of Irish crystal, mounted in the most exquisite and splendid manner in a framework of chased gold,

(for the purchase of which several hundred pounds were subscribed,) presented by the Duchess of Leinster, in the name of the Ladies of Ireland, as a tribute to the Duchess of Northumberland on her departure from Ireland at the termination of his Grace's Viceregal office. On its pedestal is the simple but expressive inscription of "Hibernia Grata." The original design of this magnificent object of art was taken from a vase of Benvenuto Cellini, modified by the assistance of the Duchess of Leinster, and her sister Lady Caroline Stanhope, so as to become exclusively appropriate to the occasion. The chalice, which is of the purest rock crystal, set with the native gems of Ireland—pearls, diamonds, amethysts, and beryls—is supported on a pedestal formed by the head of an elk (copied from an unique specimen in the Dublin Museum), the antlers of which are curiously chased in gold. At the head of the chalice, which is of an oval form, is a figure in virgin silver, representing the Genius of Ireland seated in a triumphal car; and at the other extremity, resting on a trophy formed by the ancient Irish toga, sword, and shield, (also designed by the Duchess of Leinster, after the originals in the Dublin Museum,) is an exquisite representation of the Irish stag-hound, said to be the only dog capable of contending with so powerful an animal as the elk. These national emblems are interspersed with bunches of shamrock; and on the golden shield which forms the back of the car are inscribed the coronet and initials of the Duchess of Northumberland, adorned by a bouquet of Forget-me-not in precious stones. Over the car hangs a pear-shaped pearl of great beauty; at the foot is a very fine beryl; and the eyes of the silver dolphins grouped at the base are formed of opal. Surrounding the head of the elk, on the pedestal of the chalice, are two wolf dogs of the celebrated Irish race, modelled with unequalled grace and spirit. This interesting specimen of Irish products (for the materials are all Irish), and testimony of the urbanity called forth by kindly dealing in Irish hearts, trees and shrubs, required to have the latter wholly removed, to give room and effect to the former; and, to render this scenery complete, it was found requisite to introduce a great number of new exotics, procured since Syon was first designed.

The following is a list of some of the more remarkable trees at present flourishing in this beautiful domain.

1. Cedars of Lebanon, fine.
2. Cupressus disticha, deciduous Cypresses, among the finest in England.
3. Magnolia Acuminata, very large.
4. Magnolia Glauca (evergreen variety) perhaps the finest in England.
5. Liriodendron Tulipifera, Tulip trees, fine.
6. Acer Creticus, Cretan Maple, old and large.
7. Planera Reichardi, large.
8. Catalpas.
9. Gleditchias, large.
10. Acacias, large.
11. Gymnocladus Canadensis, superb specimen.
12. Judas Trees, fine.
13. Amelanchiera, fine.
14. Sorbus domestica.
15. Rhododendrons, fine.
16. Diospyros Lotos.
17. Halesia, Snow-drop tree, fine and trailing.
18. American Ashes, fine.
19. Ornus Europæa, fine.
20. Laurus Sarsafras, large.
21. Tupelo tree, large.
22. Poplars, large and fine.
23. Turkey Oaks, fine.
24. Scarlet Oaks, fine.
25. Quercus Palustris.
26. Purple Beeches.
27. Liquid Ambers, fine.

hundred feet long, containing the tropical plants which require the highest temperature; and, with the advantage of the lofty cupola, displays some magnificent specimens of the palm and other large-leaved trees, in all their native luxuriance. The circular wings are subdivided into compartments, appropriated to the reception of Botany Bay plants, heaths, geraniums, and other hardy exotics. One of the pavilions is devoted to camellias, and the other to orange trees.

The building is constructed of Bath stone, with iron roofs, columns, and arches, combining extreme lightness with strength and elegance of form; and, notwithstanding its architectural character, the arrangement is free from the usual and fatal objection of obscuring the light from the plants. The whole of the front is glazed with plate glass, as well as some parts of the roof where strength was most required. The warming is effected by means of steam, generated in a building erected for that purpose, at a little distance, so as to be quite out of view from the garden; and the heat is distributed by pipes laid underneath the floor, the aggregate length of which is nearly two miles. A raised terrace extends along the front, with wide flights of steps; on the pedestals of which are massive stone vases sculptured by the masterly hand of Grinling Gibbons. The parterre in front of the conservatory abounds in all the choicest beauties of the floral kingdom, disposed in ornamental beds of various forms. At the southern extremity the walks are concentrated in a circle, in the middle of which is a large basin bordered with marble, and containing a fountain.

The boundaries of this garden are skilfully concealed by mounds of artificial rock-work, which are made to screen some buildings of an inferior character in the immediate vicinity; at the same time that they serve for the growth of various flowers and shrubs peculiar to rocky soils.

In the rear of the conservatory are some remarkably fine specimens of exotic trees, particularly of the Ilex, forming a beautiful back ground of permanent dark tints, which, by Algernon, Duke of Somerset was created Baron Warkworth, of Warkworth Castle, and Earl of Northumberland, 2nd Oct. 1749, with remainder, failing his issue male, to his son-in-law Sir Hugh Smithson, Bart. and to the heirs male of his body by Lady Elizabeth his wife; in default of which the dignities of Baroness Warkworth and Countess of Northumberland to the said Lady Elizabeth, and of Baron Warkworth and Earl of Northumberland to the heirs male of her body. Agreeably to this remainder, Sir Hugh Smithson, on the death of his father-in-law, 7th February, 1750, became Baron Warkworth and Earl of Northumberland. By an act of parliament, 12th April, 1751, his lordship and Elizabeth Countess of Northumberland and Baroness Percy, his and their issue, were enabled to take and use the name of Percy, and to bear the arms of the Percys Earls of Northumberland. He was created Earl Percy and Duke of Northumberland, to him and the heirs male of his body, by patent dated 18th October, 1766. His Grace eminently distinguished himself by his love for the fine arts, and, besides the elegant improvements made at his paternal seat at Stanwick in Yorkshire, he restored three palaces in very different styles of architecture,—Northumberland House, Syon House, and Alwick Castle, the great baronial seat of the ancient Earls of Northumberland. Dr. Percy, Bishop of Dromore, writing about the year 1778, says, "Syon House, which was old, ruinous, and inconvenient, his Grace hath finely improved; and fitting it up, and finishing it, after the most perfect models of Greece and Rome, hath formed a villa, which for taste and elegance is scarce to be paralleled in Europe." He died June 6th, 1786, and was succeeded by his eldest son Hugh second Duke of Northumberland; who, by his second wife, Frances Julia, daughter of Peter Burrell, Esq. sister to Peter first Lord Gwydir, had nine children, and dying July 10, 1817, was succeeded by his eldest son Hugh the present and third Duke.

His Grace was born April 20th, 1785; was member for Westminster in the Parliament of 1806, and for Northumberland in that of 1807; in 1812 he was called up to the House of Lords, and placed, viâ patris, in the barony of Percy. In 1825 he was nominated Ambassador-extraordinary to Charles the Tenth, King of France, on the occasion of his coronation; and in 1829-30 he was Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland.

His Grace married 29th April, 1817, Charlotte Florentina Clive, youngest daughter of Edward first Earl Powis, who was governess to her present most gracious Majesty Victoria; they had a son still-born 27th February, 1818.

The Duke of Northumberland is a Knight of the Garter, and a Privy Councillor, High Steward of the University of Cambridge, Lord-Lieutenant, Custos Rotulorum, and Vice-Admiral of the county of Northumberland and Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Constable of Launceston Castle, High Steward of Launceston; and also, by appointment of the Queen, a Trustee of the British Museum; F.R.S. and F.S.A.

TOPOGRAPHICAL ACCOUNT

DESCRIPTION OF THE VILLAGE, &amp;c.

ISLEWORTH is pleasantly situated on the northern banks of the river Thames, in the county of Middlesex, at the distance of about nine miles west of London, and gives name to the hundred. It consists of one principal street, containing many good houses.

The derivation of its name is very uncertain. In Domesday it is called Gisteleworde. For some centuries in subsequent records it is called Islelworth, Yhistelworth, and afterwards occasionally Isleworth. In the time of Queen Elizabeth it was called Thistleworth, which name is said to have been much in use in the early part of the eighteenth century. In parochial and other writings, however, for more than a century, it has been uniformly spelt Isleworth.

<sup>2</sup> This map or survey on vellum is about three yards long and two broad, framed as a picture, and hung up in the evidence-room at Syon House. It was made temp. Jac. I. and points out every gentleman's house, with the name of the respective owner, in Isleworth, Twickenham, &c.

Syon Monastery were estimated at 162*a.* 2*r.* 20*p.*; and the lands belonging to the Duke of Northumberland, but out of the precinct, at 268*a.* 3*r.* 0*p.*

The whole parish of Isleworth contains 3113*a.* 8*r.* 35*p.* statute measure, viz.

The whole quantity of land subject to the payment of any kind of tithes is 2754*a.* 2*r.* 7*p.* statute measure, besides 65*a.* 1*r.* 33*p.* of rectorial glebe land, for which a stipend of 20*l.* has been invariably paid to the vicar, and 51*a.* 3*r.* 3*p.* of water, for which no regular composition has ever been charged, 140*a.* 0*r.* 36*p.* in small pieces of land attached to houses, 23*a.* 1*r.* 34*p.* of wood and plantation, and 78*a.* 2*r.* 2*p.* of roads and foot paths, making together a total of 3113*a.* 3*r.* 35*p.*

The quantity of land cultivated by market-gardeners for the raising of fruits for the London market, is 567*a.* 3*r.* 20*p.* Foot<sup>1</sup> observes, that Isleworth and the places adjacent are almost a garden, and orchards of apple trees, pears, plums, cherries, &c. and in rearing them nearly the same methods are followed. Isleworth is also celebrated for strawberries and raspberries, of which great quantities are carried to Covent Garden market; of the former, a new species called the scarlet emperor has within the last six years been grown here, which for beauty and flavour is unequalled.<sup>1</sup>

In 11 Edw. III. according to the Nona Rolls, this parish was taxed for the ninth of sheaves, fleeces, and lambs, to the value of 16*l.* including the portion of Philippa, Queen of England, amounting to 1*l.* 8*s.* Of the fifteenth there was no return here, nor in most of the parishes of Middlesex, because there were no parishioners living by merchandise, but all from agriculture. In 1794, the parish paid the sum of 880*l.* 7*s.* 10½*d.* to the land tax, which was at the rate of 1*s.* 4*d.* in the pound. In 1803, the money raised by the parish rates (including part of the hamlet of Hounslow) was 2927*l.* 0*s.* 1*d.* at 4*s.* in the pound.

The resident population of this parish in 1801 was 4346 persons; and in 1821 was 5269. By the census taken in 1831, the population then consisted of 5590 persons, 2725 males, and 2865 females; the number of families being 1207, and of inhabited houses 1014. The annual value of real property as then assessed was 23,051*l.* The present gross assessment is 20,482*l.* In 1813 this parish was inclosed by act of parliament.<sup>2</sup>

The following curious document respecting a dispute that arose between the parishes of Isleworth and Heston, on going their bounds, is preserved in the Augmentation Office. It has no date, but may be presumed to have been written not long before the Reformation, from the circumstance of John Gates, Esq. who is therein mentioned, having been appointed keeper of Syon House after the surrender of the monastery in 1539.

<sup>1</sup> For an account of the Isleworth mode of growing strawberries, see Horticultural Transactions, vol. II. pp. 101, 392. See also vol. V. p. 260, and vol. VI. pp. 180, 201. The Horticultural Society have presented Mr. John Wilmot, F.R.S. and Mr. M. Keens with the Banksian medal, for their various exhibitions of fruits from their gardens at Isleworth.

~~mandement~~ ~~lawe~~ agaynste them by John Bygge, constable of the hundred and lordship of Istyllworth, and the parisheners of Heston, for goynge so in Processionwaye, as hereafter folowith :

Firste, the sayde parishioners of Istyllworth say, that accordynge to the olde custom of the realme, and accordynge to the King's grace commaundement, on the sayde Mondaye departed from the parishe church of Istyllworth, in Godd's peace and the King's, intending no malyce nor gruge agaynste any other parishe, but only to goo with their processyon ; and so went forth on their wayes to divers crosseys within the parishe, as they have don of old tyme, and so retornynge hom-ward from Baker-bridg, where as they sayde a gospell, as they ever have don of old tyme, peseably, and intending noo malyce to any person ; but went along by their boundes and dyche-side tyll they kam nyghe unto the grete hawthorn standynge in the saide beth. Ther kam the parishe of Heston with their processyon ; and before all their banners and cross of Heston aforesayde, ther kam five or six of the parishioners of Heston, and badde one John Browne, our formoste bannerman, to avoide the dyche-side, he saide a wold not, he went upon their owne boundes. With that kam in John Bygg step-pinge yn, and swore an othe, ' Knave, would thou not avoide the waye ' thou shalte into the dyche ' with that threw hym into the dyche with his banner. And also, lykewyse, Thomas Archer and Thomas Dewell, ryotously blustryng and blowinge, he spake to the same, of old malyce and gruge, lyke tyraunts and traynly men, helpynge to shulderynge other of the crosse bannermen into the dyche, and puttyng by o'the banner-men, and they have putt more ynto the dyche, yff the vicar of Istyllworth, Thomas Yonge, &c. constables, and Hew Orton, and other honeste men of the seyd parishe of Istyllworth, hadd natte other moe of the sayde parishe, hadd natte the same apper in their hands, and intreteynge and de-fendynge the sayde John Bygge, &c. in Godd's name and the King's, and to suffer the sayde parishioners of Heston to passe and paxse homward to Istyllworth in their processyon, and to praye accordynge to their duty to God, and in Godd's pease and the Kyng's. And, further, if the sayde parishioners of Istyllworth hadd nat byn wyser and more dyscrete and sadder then the sayde parishioners of Heston, the sayde John Bygge, &c. had byn lyke to have made manslaughtre: for the wyfles of Heston, that ys to say, Thomas Chyld's wiffe, &c. &c. and other wiffes of the sayde parish of Heston, with malice seynge, ' Pull Istyllworth crosse, and take away the crosse of Istyllworth from the caytiffs, and a vagonis [vengeance] on all the parishe of Istyllworth, wretches and caytiffs of Istyllworth, for they have undon us, to dychen in and take in our comyn.'

" Item, furthermore, a soule preste ther beyng in Heston parishe, toke a banner in hand from a yonge ladde that bare the banner, and throwe hym in to the dychen also, contrarye to the Kyng's pease. And, furthermore, when the sayde John Bygge, &c. and the sayde sowll preste, and other the sayde parishioners, hade don their malyciously ryott, not intendynge to serve God, nor to goo further in processyon, accordynge to their dewty; when they sawe they colde not optayne their malycyous purpose, departyd towards their owne towne of Heston with lowde noyse, seying ' A vengyance on all the wretches of Istyllworth '"

" Item, further, where as the sayde John Bygge hath allegyd and sayde, that the saide parishioners of Istyllworth kam with stavis, bylls, and other wepyns; the paryshioners of Istyllworth sayeth that ys contrarye, for they bare small staves in their honds to lepe over the watery playshes; there were but few that bare any staves in ther honds; and as for bylls, they hadd 2 heggyng bylls, but they bare them not ryotously, but peaceably, for theyr own ease, to make wey over dyches, and to cut down bushes and hethe, to thentent that the processyon with all the people myght have passage wher as the ways were fowle, that they myght passe peaceably over, and as they have don of old tyme heretofore.

" Item, wher that it ys sayde that the ycar of Istyllworth toke down the crosse of the staff, and toke the banner-staff in his hande; he wyll depose for hymselfe that he kam nat nye unto the crosse, nor towchyd yt, nor profferyd to goo towards to take it downe to doo any such acte withall, to defend hymself or his parishioners, for he hadd noo such malyce nor gruge agaynst them; but mekely and gently desyringe as well his own punishment as the severe punishment of Hinton, for God's sake, and for the Kyng's sake, to passe on with their processions, and to do their duty to God, and to grace, as is before saide, for the Kyng's grace, accordingly to their duty.

"Item, further, the punishment of Ispylworth sayth, that the same John Bygg, of malice-personeyell, on Sundaye nyght since the same punishment Whosay, and on the sayde Mondaye unmercifully, spake and saide certain words for stopping of Ispylworth personage; and sayth, in a certain place in Hinton, that he would stopp the procession of Ispylworth personage; and that they should not com on procession withoute their eyes in the Kyng's highway in Hinton-beth; and that the same punishment of Ispylworth will bringe forthe the same to receive the same.

"All which matters the same punishment of Ispylworth referre to the women of their good Mr. John Gann, esquier, to be answered, and to see a redress thereof made, for the quietnes of the same punishment, by hym, or by such other of the Kyng's council as shall please hym to put yt to."

"As to the venue the jurisdiction of the county magistrates, as to the Act of Parliament passed in 1750,<sup>1</sup> it is inserted in the Statute of the County Court of Middlesex, and the persons are qualified to serve on juries on trial, in the County Court of Westminster, together with the county magistrates, for summary suits for debt under 40s. in a summary way, as to the Sheriff of Middlesex, by his county clerk, who shall cause to be done for that purpose "on the first Tuesday of every month in some convenient place within the hundred of Westminster." The court is held at Brentford during the summer half-year, and at Uxbridge during the winter half-year.

The Dean of Westminster holds courts leet and baron twice a year, April and October; and the Dean and Canons of St. Dunstons hold their courts baron (not leet) once in two years, unless some special business require it.

A court of the Bishop is held here on the first Monday in July.

Norden, in his "Speculum Britannie," written in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, mentions "a copper and brass-mill, situated between Thistleworth and Worton." He also says, that the ore was brought from Mendip Hills, and that "manie artificial devises were to be noted in the performance of the worke."<sup>1</sup> These copper-mills do not now exist. On the spot noticed by Norden is now a large flour-mill, and in the centre of the village there is a more capacious mill of the same description, the reparation of which cost Messrs. Leader, Attlee, and Co. of Wandsworth, the late proprietors, the sum of 29,999*l.* 19*s.* 9*d.* It is now leased to Mr. Kidd from the Duke of Northumberland.

Calico-printing was formerly carried on here to a considerable extent; but within the last ten years it has been discontinued, and the grounds converted into a farmyard, in the possession of Charles Stanbrough, Esq. In Brazil-Mill-lane is a large brewery belonging to Messrs. John and Charles Farnell.

The small river Crane, which takes its rise in the common fields between Pinner and Harrow, and then passes under Cranford bridge, and across Hounslow heath, falls into the Thames at Isleworth, having been augmented by an artificial cut from the Colne, which the Abbess and Convent of Syon caused to be made for supplying their water-mills.

A branch of the Paddington or Grand Junction Canal joins the Thames at the eastern extremity of the parish, near Brentford.

There is a ferry, called Church Ferry, for foot passengers, from the church over the river to West Sheen, Kew, &c. and another at the southern extremity of the village, called Rails-head Ferry.

THE PAROCHIAL CHURCH.

The Church of Isleworth, which occupies an elevated situation near the margin of the river, is dedicated to All Saints, and consists of a nave, chancel, and two aisles. At the west end is an ancient stone tower<sup>1</sup> of Gothic architecture, overgrown with ivy on the north, west, and south sides, above which is a small turret and cupola, erected with the remainder of the structure in 1705.

It has been before observed, that when Richard Earl of Cornwall built his house or palace here, he also erected a chapel. It would appear, however, from the mention of a priest as having three virgates of land in the Norman Survey, that a church existed here when that record was taken.*

In 1496, William de Lovensay, by his will dated 25th Aug. bequeathed the sum of 20*l.* towards the repairs of Isleworth Church.†

In 1701, the church being so far decayed as to demand renovation, a plan for rebuilding it was procured from Sir Christopher Wren, which, however, was not put in execution, being judged too expensive. In 1705, in consequence of a bequest of 100*l.* from Sir Orlando Gee, the parishioners determined to commence the work immediately, adopting in part Sir Christopher Wren's design. A subscription was set on foot in aid of their intention: but, as the funds raised for the purpose were not sufficient to defray the expenses, a grant of faculty was obtained to enable the parish to dispose of pews. The new building was begun May 12, 1705, * Church towers were formerly the parochial fortresses, and were fitted up with a garrison of the parishioners resorting to them in time of danger. (Giles's Ant. Hist. of Angl. vol. i. p. 100.) Mr. Bentham (Hist. of Ely Cath. fol. 11. col. 600) supposes them to have been introduced about the time of the Conquest, and improved by the Normans.

† Notes and Queries of Worcestershire, p. 90 says, "whenever we find a priest or a church, we may conclude there was a church."

and finished February 8, 1706. It was further repaired and beautified in 1829.<sup>1</sup>

The organ was built at the voluntary subscription of the parish in 1715.

The living is a vicarage within the diocese of London, and archdeaconry of Middlesex. It was appropriated at an early period to the abbey of St. Valery, or Waleric, in Picardy,<sup>2</sup> to which abbey it was confirmed, together with their other possessions, by Henry III. in the 54th year of his reign.<sup>3</sup> The prior of the alien priory of Takely in Essex, a cell to the abbey of St. Valery, who was procurator-general, and collector of the rents of all the lands held by the same abbey in England, usually presented to this vicarage.<sup>4</sup>

From an inquisition,<sup>5</sup> taken in the year 1367, it appears that the prior of St. Valery, rector of the church of Isleworth, was accustomed to distribute two bushels of rye every week in the year among the poor of Isleworth. He also delivered to two men of the town of Heston three quarters of beans and pease, to be distributed yearly on the first Sunday in Easter among the poor, for the souls of the King and Queen and their progenitors. He was also bound to send, at his own cost, from the town of Isleworth to the town of Twickenham, twelve bushels of beans and pease to two men of the said town of Twickenham, called "churchemen," to be divided among the poor as above. It further recites, that "the said alms had been given by the predecessors of the now Prior for time immemorial, until they were varied from 10*d.* to 16*d.* the former sum being paid for one behind the font, and the latter for one opposite the pulpit.—(Collect. Topog. vol. iii. p. 134.)

<sup>2</sup> The Abbey of St. Valery in Picardy is situated four leagues below Abbeville, at the mouth of the Somme, in the diocese of Amiens, and is said to have been founded by King Clothaire, A.D. 613. Warburton's Account of Alien Priories, vol. ii. p. 65. Dufresnoy (Chron. Tables, vol. ii. p. 210.) says that it was founded by St. Blinmond, a disciple of St. Valery, A.D. 627. It was from St. Valery that William the Conqueror set sail to invade England, A.D. 1066.

drawn by Prior John, and the predecessor of the said prior who now is. And that the said John some time gave the aforesaid alms, but that they had been withdrawn for the last twenty years."

In 1391, foreign patronage and possessions becoming daily more precarious, Edmund, abbot of St. Valery, obtained the King's license to transfer this vicarage among other of his possessions to William of Wykeham, who made it part of the endowment of his newly-founded college at Winchester.<sup>1</sup>

In 1474, 5 Oct. a deed of composition, entitled, "Compositio Vicarie de Isleworth," was made between Thomas Bishop of London, as ordinary of the diocese; the warden and scholars of Winchester College, proprietaries of the church; and the vicar of Isleworth, on the one part; and Elizabeth (Gybs), abbess of Syon Monastery, on the other part; relative to tithes and other ecclesiastical matters, of which the following are the heads:

"It was agreed and compounded (the said abbess and convent protesting that by reason of such composition no prejudice should be to their exemption to non-payment of tithes), that the said warden, &c. and the vicars of Isleworth, should for ever receive and have the tithes, oblations, obventions, and other ecclesiastical rights and emoluments whatsoever in the parish church of Isleworth aforesaid, in any manner howsoever paid or there happening or to arise. That the said warden, &c. should have the tenth sheaf, or other tenth part of any grain whatsoever, only from the lands without, and in no wise within the precinct of the said monastery, the limits whereof are hereunder described, to wit,—

"On the east side the river Thames, and on the south certain ditches, being the outside of the south part of a certain field called the Buttfield, descending in a line to the Thames; and on the west and south sides, other ditches, extending by the west side of Buttfield aforesaid, under a stone bridge, near the Corsgreve, and thence along the west and north sides of the field called the Sheep Leaze, and of another field called Bromfield, otherwise the Outhill, to a certain river called the Brayne (Brent), and from thence to the Thames aforesaid.

“ That the said abbess and convent should for ever have all and all manner of tithes, oblations, and obventions, and other ecclesiastical rights and emoluments whatsoever in the said monastery, and the places within the said monastery, and the precinct thereof, and of the manor of Isleworth, called Worton or Eystons, and the arable land, meadows, feedings, pastures, waters, woods, and other places whatsoever, to the said abbess and convent belonging, or in the hands of the said abbess, &c. or their farmers, being or thereafter to be (the tithes of grain arising from such lands and places situate without the said precinct excepted).

“ And also, except the tithes of the lands and tenements within the bounds and limits of the said parish church of Isleworth, and demised by copy of court roll or otherwise, in any manner whatsoever, at the will of the lord of the manor, according to the custom of the same manor, and then in the hands of the tenants, to the said vicar for the time being only payable.

“ That neither the said warden, &c. or the said vicar, or his successors, should by reason or pretext of any right or composition, jointly or severally challenge or demand any tithes, oblations, and obventions of any grain, hay, timber, wood, underwood, forests, hedges, warrens, furze, brambles, bushes, reeds, lands, tenements, farms, fields, mines, herbs, fruits of orchards and gardens, mills of what sort soever, dove-houses, piscaries, fishings, and fish of ponds, fens, lakes, marshes, pits, ditches, rivulets, watercourses, and all river birds and winged animals, water-fowls of every kind and sort, as well wild and warren fowls as tame, especially swans and bees, and all of the newly ploughed lands in the said monastery and within the precinct thereof: also of the said manor of Isleworth, called the manor of Worton or Eystons, from the lands and places aforesaid, in any manner whatsoever arising or to arise, but from thenceforth from all tithes, &c. within the said precinct, and from the said manor, lands, and places above specified arising, they should for ever be excluded (the tithes of grain or corn from the places and demesne lands of the said abbess, &c. without and not within the said precinct excepted), and to the said warden, &c. wholly to be paid, so that the said abbess, &c. should pay to the said warden, &c. as appropriators, twenty shillings sterling, for the indemnity and interest of them, as a suitable sufficient recompense and satisfaction of all tithes, oblations, and obventions, and other matters aforesaid, and a further sum of 6*s.* 8*d.* in case of non-payment.

“The said abbess, &c. for ever, to pay the said vicar forty shillings sterling for a proper, due, and sufficient recompense for all tithes, oblations, and obventions, in any manner howsoever arising or to arise within the said precinct, and in the said manor of Isleworth, called the manor of Worton or Eystons, and the lands, meadows, feedings, pastures, waters, woods, or otherwise, as aforesaid, and 6*s.* 8*d.* to be paid further in case of non-payment in proper time, viz. at Michaelmas and Christmas. The said abbess and convent to allow the said vicar daily, at the upper table of the hall of the monastery, meat and drink, and the like to be allowed to the vicar’s servant at the groom’s table; and in case the said vicar should from sickness be unable to attend the monastery, he shall be allowed at the rate of 7*d.* per week for his provisions at home. And the said abbess and convent shall find the said vicar and his successors yearly one robe, containing four yards of woollen cloth of the suit and livery of the gentlemen of the monastery aforesaid.

“Declaration.—That as often as and when any tenements or lands which were not demesne lands, and which were then in the hands of laymen, or the tenants of the said abbess and convent, of the growth and produce of which the vicar or any of his predecessors, in right of the said vicarage, had received or ought or had been accustomed to receive, tithes and obventions; and which lands might thereafter come to and be in the hands and possession of the said abbess, &c.; from thenceforth the said vicar should freely receive such tithes and oblations as the vicars of the said church had hitherto been accustomed and ought to receive and have when such lands and tenements were in the hands of tenants or laymen. So nevertheless that the said vicar for the time being, as often as he should thereafter require and demand such aforesaid tithes and obventions of such lands and tenements, when they should so come to the hands of the said abbess and convent, should first fully give notice thereof to the same abbess and convent by specifying and denominating the same.”

position. Mr. Lysons states, that, by some subsequent agreement (neither the date nor parties to which are specified), the diet, &c. was commuted for money, and the sum of 11*l.* 7*s.* 4*d.* was allotted to the vicar out of the demesne lands, which is still received.

The Church of Isleworth remained in the possession of the warden and scholars of Winchester College until the year 1543, at which time Henry VIII. by writ granted them the manors of Mondesmere, Stubbynton, and Woodmancote, in the county of Southampton, the manors of Piddle-Trenthide and Sydling in the county of Dorset, and the manor of Enford in the county of Wilts, with their appurtenances, in exchange for the manor of Harmondsworth and the churches of Isleworth, Heston, Hampton, Harmondsworth, and Twickenham, in the county of Middlesex.<sup>1</sup> In 1547, the rectory and advowson was granted to the Duke of Somerset;<sup>2</sup> but in the same year, as proved by a deed in the Augmentation Office, the great tithes were granted from the Crown to the Dean and Canons of St. George's Chapel, Windsor. Through the attainder of the Duke of Somerset, A.D. 1552, the advowson reverted to the Crown; as we find that, in 1554, Queen Mary presented to the vicarage. Soon after the Dean and Canons of Windsor became possessed of the advowson, and in 1562 a clerk was admitted at their presentation, and in them the right of patronage has since continued.<sup>3</sup> The great tithes, which were purchased some few years back of the Dean and Canons of Windsor, under the Land-Tax Redemption Act, by the late Edmund Hill, esq. were afterwards vested in his devisees, John Fish, esq. and others; and from them passed into the possession of the late W. Stanbrough, esq. Some of them, near the road leading from Isleworth to Richmond, have since been sold to the Marquis of Ailsa and the late Sir William Cooper; but the principal are still in the possession of Messrs. James and Charles Stanbrough, and by them the vicar's stipend of £20 is annually paid.

(Pat. 23 Edw. III. p. 1.) who was thereupon admitted, as in 1357 he obtained the King's licence to exchange it with John vicar of Warlington. (Pat. 31 Edw. III.)

<sup>1</sup> Nicholas Byfield, a Puritan divine of considerable eminence in the beginning of the seventeenth century, was the son of Richard Byfield, minister of Stratford-upon-Avon, and was born in Warwickshire, circa 1579. In 1596 he became a butler or servant of Exeter College, Oxon. during Lent Term, and remained there upwards of seven years, but left it without taking a degree. Being admitted, however, into holy orders, he left the University, and had intentions of going into Ireland, to obtain preferment in the church; but at Chester, in his way there, he was, upon the delivery of a noted sermon at that place, invited to be pastor of St. Peter's Church, which he gladly accepted, and continued there for several years, "much followed and admired," says Wood, "by the precise party, who esteemed his preaching profitable, and his life pious." He was a strict observer of the Lord's Day, on which subject he wrote, and involved himself in a controversy with Edward Brerewood, the mathematician, who, being a native of that city, was sometimes his auditor. From Chester he removed, in 1613, to the vicarage of Isleworth, where he died in 1622, leaving behind him an excellent character for learning, success in his ministry, and a pious and peaceable disposition. He was the author of many popular works, which are enumerated by Wood. Dr. Gouge of Blackfriars, who drew up an account of his death, informs us (in his Preface to the posthumous Works of Mr. Byfield) that, on his body being opened, a stone was taken out of his bladder that weighed 33 ounces and more, measuring about the edge 15½ inches, and was in length and breadth about 13 inches, and solid, like a flint. A print of him was published by Richardson in 1790, with an account of this very remarkable case.—His son Adoniram Byfield was a man of considerable note during the civil war, and was secretary to the Assembly of Divines. (Neale's Hist. of the Puritans, vol. ii. p. 374.) His son Richard, another ejected Nonconformist, was a member also of that assembly, and an author. (Ib. p. 371.) Adoniram is one of the few persons who have been by name stigmatized by Butler in his "Hudibras," part iii. canto 2, line 639. He was the father of Dr. Byfield, the noted sal-volatile doctor, who, in his epitaph, is said to be "Diu volatilis tandem fixus." See Fuller's Worthies, p. 415; Wood's Ath. Oxon. by Bliss, vol. ii. p. 323; and Chalmers's Biog. Dict. vol. vii. p. 475.

Rowles supplied the cure during Grant's sequestration. (Proceedings of the Committee, MSS. Lamb. Lib. vol. viii.) The inhabitants of Isleworth presented a petition against Mr. Grant, containing 21 articles, and printed on a single sheet, 4to. (Gough's Topog. vol. i. p. 571.) To which petition Mr. Grant published a reply, entitled, "The Vindication of the Vicar of Isleworth, in the county of Middlesex, from a scandalous pamphlet, containing 21 articles, invented by some closely subscribed auto, but by six publicly prescribed, but by one openly, and now reuted in print surreptitiously (in the name of the whole parish), by a nobody," by Wm. Grant, vicar of Isleworth, 1641. In answer to one of the articles, which was as follows: "He useth very unbecoming speeches in his sermons, as, speaking of some Popish tenets, he said, 'Marry, as good lucke is, we have the Scriptures against them,' and at another time, speaking of the devil's temptations, 'Marry, as good luck was, God was stronger than the devil,'" he says, that he had "twice used the phrase 'good lucke is,' though never as alleged, and that he found it thus often used in Holy Writ, 'good lucke have thou with thine honour,' says the Psalmist, and again, 'it fortuneth,' writes St. John) that there was a wedding in Cana of Galilee." (Lysons's Enq. Suppl. p. 203.)

Among the Minutes of the Vestry is entered a license (bearing date Apr. 22, 1661,) given by the same W. Grant to Richard Downton, Esq. and Thomasin his wife, to eat flesh in Lent, "for the recovery of their health, they being enforced by age, notorious sickness, and weakness, to abstain from fish."

<sup>3</sup> This eminent scholar and divine was born 30th Dec. 1637, at Pickwell in Leicestershire, where his father was rector of the parish, and a great sufferer during the civil war. (Kilmer's Baronetage, vol. i. p. 361.) On the 9th Nov. 1653, he was admitted into St. John's College, Cambridge, where he took the degree of B.A. in 1656, and that of M.A. in 1660. In August 1662, he was admitted to the vicarage of Islington, and some time after became chaplain in ordinary to Charles II. He took the degree of D.D. in 1672; and on the 16th Sept. 1679, was collated by the Archbishop of Canterbury to the rectory of All Hallows the Great, in Thames Street, London. In July 1681, he was incorporated D.D. at Oxford; and in Nov. 1684, was installed Canon of Windsor. He resigned the rectory of All Hallows in 1689, and the vicarage of Islington in 1691, having on the 19th Nov. 1690, been admitted to this vicarage, which, being a quiet and retired place, probably suited best his most studious temper. He was author of several works relating to ecclesiastical history. Cave's 'Lives of the Apostles,' 'Lives of the Fathers,' and his 'Primitive Christianity,' are justly esteemed the best books upon those subjects. He died at Windsor, 4th Aug. 1713, and was buried in Islington Church, where a monument is erected to his memory. On the east wall of the chancel. His lecture delivered upon that subject was answered in print, and he replied in a book dedicated to Bishop Latimer, in 1551.<sup>6</sup>

Richard Byfield was lecturer here about 1620. (Wood's Athenæ Oxon. by Bliss, vol. iii. p. 668.)

Mr. William Jemmat, or Gemote, was fourteen years a licensed lecturer in this church; but, leaving the cure in 1640, he took the covenant, and became minister of St. Giles's church at Reading in Berkshire. He was a very laborious preacher, and wrote many sermons and treatises

<sup>3</sup> Also Canon of Windsor, Archdeacon of Landaff, Prebendary of Chichester, and for fifty-five years Rector of Compton, Surrey. See pedigree of Fulham in Collectanea Topog. et Geneal. vol. i. p. 12.

<sup>4</sup> He was the son of the historian of York, and was himself distinguished as a scholar and an antiquary, particularly by his observations on the origin and derivation of the English language, and other papers in the Archæologia.

<sup>5</sup> Dr. Langford, during his incumbency, became insolvent. The living was sequestrated, and the Rev. John Mitchell, in 1806, was appointed curate by the Bishop. Dr. Langford died some years after, when the living was presented by the Dean and Canons of Windsor to the Rev. W. Heath, but this gentleman, being one of the assistant masters in the upper school of Eton, never resided here. Mr. Mitchell, therefore, remained as his curate, and was also lecturer of the parish till the year 1822, when Mr. Heath made an exchange of the living of Isleworth with the Rev. H. Glossop, for that of West Dean in Hampshire.

Mr. Thomas Carter was curate and lecturer here from 1775 to his death in 1791 (see his epitaph in a following page.) The present curate and lecturer is Dr. James, who succeeded the Rev. William Parker.

There are a Quakers' Meeting-house and two Wesleyan-chapels in this parish. The Roman Catholics also have a chapel here, endowed by the Earl of Shrewsbury.

Description of the principal Monuments and Epitaphs in the Church and Churchyard.

There are now very few monuments existing which were in the old church. Of those mentioned by Weever, and which will be recited hereafter, not one remains.

A small but very interesting memorial is a brass plate which was let into the door of the Duke of Northumberland's pew, by his Grace's express command. It represents one of the Nuns of Sion, as shown in the annexed engraving, where the figure is of the same size as the original, and in a plate beneath is the following inscription,

1561 on whose Soule Jh<sup>u</sup> have m<sup>er</sup>y.

At the east end of the north gallery is a mural monument containing two well-executed effigies of Sir Francis Darcy and his lady. They are of half the size of life, kneeling on cushions, face to face, between three marble pillars with Corinthian capitals. He is bareheaded, in white armour, with trunk breeches; she in a ruff and black gown; their hands in prayer. The inscription is as follows:—

and ye wife of Sr Francis Darcy, Knt sonne of Sr Arthur Darcy, Kt. and grandchild of ye Lord Thomas Darcy of ye North, which foresaid lady had issue by her saide husband three daughters, whereof Frances ye eldest dyed in ye cradle, Ann ye second married Sr Richard Wynn, Kt. and Baronet, and now Treasurer and Receiver Generall to ye Queenes Ma<sup>tie</sup>, LITTLE ye youngest married to Sr Henry Willoughby of Risley, in ye county of Derby, Knight and Baron<sup>et</sup>."

There is no date upon the monument: but Lady Darcy was buried May 29, 1625, and Sir Francis Nov. 29, 1641.

On a shield above are the arms of Darcy with eleven quarterings, as follow: 1. Az. crusilly and three cinque-foils Ar. Darcy. 2. Az. three gemelles and a chief Or, Meynil. 3. Ar. a bend between six martlets Sa. a crescent for difference, Tempest. 4. Az. a fess between three fleurs-de-lis Or, Skelton. 5. Gu. three goat's heads coupéd Or, Gatesford. 6. Az. a cross flory Ar. bordured of the Field, Melton. 7. Gu. three lucres hauriant Ar. Lucy. 8. Barry Ar. and Az. a fleur-de-lis Or, Hilton. 9. Ar. three chaplets of roses Gu. Lascelles. 10. Ar. a boar passant Sa. Swine. 11. Or, a helmet Gu. Ingle, alias Knightley.

In the south gallery is a smaller mural monument, with effigies of a man and wife, both in black gowns, kneeling to a desk.

Arms. Gu. on a fess Or, between three boar's heads coupéd Ar. a lion passant between two pheons Sa. a crescent for difference. There is also the following coat: Farn. a lion rampant Gu.; impaling, Sa. a chevron betw. three covered cups Ar.—being the arms, it is probable, of the heir or executor by whom the monument was put up.

"Heere sleepeth in the Lord RICHARD WIATT, Esq. some time citizen of London, and free of the worthy company of ye carpenters, who was borne at Slindon, in the county of Sussex; he married Margaret, the daughter of Roger Sheers, by whom he had X children, whereof VI. are yet living. III. sonnes, vidt. Henry, Roger, Francis; and III. daughters, Margaret, Jane, and Elizabeth, unmarried. After he had lived religiously in the fear of God and favour of all good men for temperance, uprightness, and deeds of piety, as y<sup>e</sup> hospital which he founded at Godlyman in Surrey for x poor men, and his gift of 7 pounds yearly to be given to 13 poor widows, may give sufficient testimony. He departed this life in the 65 year of his age, in the year of our Redemption 1619. VVIATVS—VT VIVAS."

In the south-east corner of the church is a table tomb, on which are the effigies of three children. The eldest is a boy about ten years old, in long coats, painted red, kneeling in prayer. Another is a girl of one year old, reclining on her right elbow. The third is an infant lying flat upon a pillow. The two last figures much resemble those of the princesses Mary and Sophia, children of King James the First, in Westminster Abbey. At the end of the tomb next the wall rise two columns, supporting a heavy entablature, upon which is a shield of arms, bearing six lions rampant; and for crest, a horse's head erased. These arms identify the monument as commemorating the children of Sir Thomas Savage, afterwards Earl Rivers.<sup>1</sup> The burial of the eldest Mr. Lysons could not find. The second was Elizabeth, who died in 1612, aged a year and a few days; and the child Henry, buried Jan. 29, 1611, aged thirteen days.

Adjoining to this monument is a very handsome erection, by William Halfpenny, to the memory of Mrs. Anne Dash, better known by the name of Tolson, a great benefactress to the parish. It exhibits a bust of that lady, and medallion heads of Caleb Cotesworth, M.D. and his wife Susannah, from whom she received her fortune. (See the plate.) Mrs. Tolson's very singular history is detailed in the following epitaph:—

" In this church ly<sup>e</sup> interr'd the remains of ANN TOLSON, the daughter of George Newton of Duffield, in the county of Derby, Gent. first married Henry Sisson, and afterwards John Tolson. In her last state of widowhood, she was reduced to narrow and confined circumstances, and supported herself by keeping school for the education of young ladies, for which she was well qualified,

By a natural ingenuity,
A strict and regular education,
A mild and gentle disposition.

By the loss of sight she became unfit for her employment, and a proper object to receive that charity she was solicitous to distribute.

“Also in this Church lye interr’d the remains of Caleb COTESWORTH, formerly of London, and late of Richmond, in the county of Surry, doctor in physick, and of Susannah his wife. By a long and successful practice and great economy, he became possessed of a fortune to the amount of one hundred and fifty thousand pounds and upwards, part of which by his will he distributed among his relations, and the residue, amounting to one hundred and twenty thousand pounds and upwards, he gave to his wife. They both died on the 2d: May 1741. But she survived, and dying intestate, her Personal Estate became distributable among her three next of kin, one of whom was the above Alm Tolson. With a due sense of this signal deliverance, and unexpected change, from a state of want to riches and affluence, she forthwith appointed the sum of five thousand pounds to be employed after her decease in the erecting and support of almshouses within this parish, for the reception of six poor men and six poor women, and many other sums of money for the benefit of her relations and friends. She afterwards married Joseph Dash of London, merchant, and died in his lifetime on the 24th day of April, 1750, aged 80 years. This monument is erected to her memory, and the memory of doctor Caleb Cotesworth and Susannah his wife, by Gilbert Jodrell, Esq: at the expence of five hundred pounds, which she gave to him for that purpose. The above-mentioned charity, since her decease, has been established, and now subsists, under the prudent care and attention of those to whom the conduct of it is committed, by the name and description of TOLSON’S ALMS-HOUSES.”

Immediately above Mrs. Tolson’s epitaph, and to be seen from the south gallery, is the monument of Sir Orlando Gee, with his half-length statue, very finely executed in white marble. The inscription is as follows:—

“To the memory of St ORLANDO GEE, Knight, son of Mr. John Gee, vicar of Dunsford in Devonshire. The truly noble

Algernon Earle of Northumberland employed him many years in ye management of his weightiest affaires, and for his fidelity equal to the greatness of his trusts (after the Restoration in 1660) commended him to the office of Register of the Court of Admiralty, which he enjoyed five and forty years. He continued serviceable in no less trusts to his patron's son the right honorable Joceline earle of Northumberland, and to his daughter ye most noble Elizabeth dutchess of Somerset. He was twice married, first to Elizabeth ye daughter of S<sup>t</sup> William Maxey, of Essex, Knt. after to Ann ye daughter of Robert Chilcott, of this parish, Esqr. His frequent charityes during the whole course of his life prevented him not from bequeathing considerable sumes to charitable uses at his death. He likewise gave five hundred pounds towards the rebuilding this church.

On the north side of the great east window is a monument of white marble, with a medallion portrait of the deceased, executed by Nollekens, to Mr. Keate the poet and essayist.

give evidence of his genius :

while warm regret and fond remembrance are friendship's eager testimonies to the qualities of his heart.

The elegant historian of pure and simple manners, his own resembled those which he described.

The ingenious author of works of fancy, sentimental, tender,

his imagination in its freest action paid respect to their obscurity.

the sense of which was ever conspicuous in his private life.
The tribute may be vain which time affords unto his memory and vain the marble monument which would perpetuate his name at least, they mark the spot made sacred by a husband's love, where widowed love

when it pleases heaven to try its power, is anxious to repair.

To these revered ashes have accordingly been united those of Jane-Catherine Keate, his wife, who died 18th March, 1804, aged 70 whose endearing virtues, which glowed and shined her own life, had, as he wished it his will, spread unceasing brightness and sunshine over his.

Mr. Keate was descended from Sir George Roper, his great-grandfather, by Lady Frances Ditch, only daughter of Francis Lord Seymour, and was born at Truro, Cornwall, about 1729 or 1730; educated at King's school, under Mr. Woodison, whence he went to Geneva, and staid there some years. At his return he was admitted as a clerk to Mr. Palmer, a solicitor; he then entered the Inner Temple, and was called to the Bar, but never practised the law. He was elected F.R.S. and F.A.S. in 1746. Soon after his return from his travels, he published, 1. Ancient and Modern Rome, 1760; a Poem, written at Rome, 1755. 2. An Account of the Government, History, and Laws of Geneva, 1761, 8vo. 3. Epistle from Lady Jane Grey to Lord Guilford Dudley, 1762. 4. The Alps, a Poem, 1762. 5. Netley Abbey, 1764; enlarged 1769. 6. The Young Student, an Epistle to a Friend, 1765, 4to. one of his first essays as a poet. 7. A Poem on the Death of Mrs. Carter, 1766. 8. Ferney, an Epistle to M. de Voltaire, 1766, 4to. 9. The Monument in Arcadia, a Dramatic Poem, in Two Acts, 1773, 4to. founded on a picture of Poussin, representing some Arcadian Shepherds and Shepherdesses contemplating ing a Monument inscribed Et in Arcadia ego. 10. Sketches from Nature, taken and coloured in a Journey to Margate; published from the original design, in two volumes, 1773, 12mo. 11. In 1781 he gave an edition of his Works, in 2 vols. 12mo. with additions, the principal of which was, "The Helvetiad, a Fragment, written at Geneva, 1736." It was dedicated to Dr. Heberden. 12. Epistle to Angelica Kauffman, 1781. 13. The Distressed Poet, a serio-comic Poem, in Three Cantos, 1787, stating the principal circumstances of his case in the long and vexatious law-suit in which he was engaged with an architect who professed himself his friend. 14. Account of the Pelew Islands, 1788, 4to. This is said to be a more lasting monument to his fame than all the preceding ones. 15. Observations on the Roman Earthenware found in the Sea on the Kentish Coast, in Archæologia, vol. vi. 125. He wrote several prologues and epilogues for Mr. Newcome's Scholars at Hackney. Some complimentary verses by him are to be found in the European Magazine; and he had adapted Voltaire's Semiramis to the stage, which was superseded at Drury Lane, 1777, by Captain Ayscough. Mr. Keate married a sister of Sir Charles Grave Hudson, of Wanlip, county of Leicester, bart. by whom he had one daughter, Charlotte, who was married June 9, 1795, to John Henderson, esq. of the Adelphi Terrace.'

Monumental tablets bearing the following inscriptions are also on the east wall:—

" Sacred to the Memory of CHARLOTTE EDWIN, Widow, who departed this life on the 8th day of June 1816, aged 78. " Here was buried (some time since) the body of Mr. HENRY NEWMAN, citizen and linendraper of London, and now the body of Mrs. SUSANNA NEWMAN, his wife, who died 7 Sept. 1803, aged 59."

Arms. The dexter side, Party per pale, three demi-lions rampant<sup>1</sup> and a single lion rampant; sinister, A fess engrailed between three escallops. Crest, a demi-lion winged.

"JAMES GOODINGE, son of James Goodinge, late of the parish of St. Andrew, Holborn, gent. and Bridget, his wife, died Nov. 3, 1712, aged 6. Also the above BRIDGET GOODINGE died March 3, 1719, aged 47."

In the north side was formerly an effigy of brass plate, representing an Esquire in plate-armour of about the middle of the fifteenth century (see the annexed engraving). His armour is remarkable for these peculiarities. The hausse-col consists of a collar, which, not meeting in front, is secured by a strap, which passes round it; and on each side are attached to it two or three overlapping plates, in order to give pliability and protection in raising and lowering the arm. To the uppermost of these are affixed the pauldrons. The breast-piece is formed of two pieces, one covering the other. (Compare the effigy of Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, 1439. Stothard.) The skirt of taces is formed of laminae, bent in a fashion not very usual, but which occurs in the two brasses mentioned below. The apparent insufficiency of the hausse-col, as a protection for the throat, in these instances, seems to be accounted for by the length of the neck of the helmet, as may be seen by an engraving in Fisher's Bedfordshire Brasses, of the figure, at Marston Morteyne in that county, of Thomas Reyves, Esq. who died in 1451,—a figure which closely resembles the present,<sup>2</sup> including the greyhound on which he stands, but

<sup>2</sup> The only difference is that the corners of the plates in the taces are more angularly cut off. The three figures above named, at Isleworth, Hayes, and Marston Morteyne, are the only three that have been observed attired in this peculiar pattern of armour, by a gentleman who has made a large collection of see—Albert Way, Esq. F.S.A. to whose assistance in the design subject the author is materially indebted has also a helmet upon which the head rests. In the church of Hayes in Middlesex (not far distant from Isleworth) is also another figure, the exact counterpart of the present in respect to armour, but with a helmet under his head, a dagger at his right side, and a griffin instead of a greyhound under the feet. The latter is commemorative of Walter Grene, Esq., but the date of his decease is lost. The appearances in the armour already described would, however, even without the date of the figure at Marston Morteyne, be quite sufficient to prove that the figure before us was not originally engraved for William Chase, Esq., to whose memory the following inscription was formerly placed upon the same stone :—

Of god chaunce pray for the soule of Wm Chase Esquier, su'tyme sergeant to kyng Henry the viij. ; of hys most honorable household of hys bell ; woodgerd, which deceased the vij day of Maye yn the y<sup>r</sup> of our lord god 1544. and xiiij. of whos soule ; all crystyn' Soules sh'u haue mercy amen.

The stone on which these plates were fixed is now lying in the churchyard, in a footpath south of the church ; the brasses are in a closet in the vestry. On the back of the inscription is another engraving, being a portion of one of the rich canopied brasses of the latter part of the fourteenth century. It represents some sacred personage standing in a niche of elaborate tabernacle work ; and is of Flemish workmanship.

On the reverse of this, likewise, is a portion of a Flemish sepulchral brass, of the middle of the fifteenth century. There appears to be engraven upon it part of the lambrequin of a knight's helmet ; and the diapered field of the plate retains traces of red enamel. It is a remarkable circumstance that two specimens of this kind of palimpsests, both Flemish, but one nearly a century older than the other, should occur together in this church; but the cause of it will be sufficiently explained, when it is remembered that, there being no manufacture of brass in England until 1649, we imported from Flanders or Cologne all the metal plates used for these memorials; and the waste pieces, either plundered from some foreign church, or having failed in the engraving, would occasionally find their way to England, probably at a lower price than the new.

Among the other loose pieces in the vestry is a figure, 21½ inches long, of a gentleman or merchant in the reign of Elizabeth or James I. his head bare, front face, a small ruff, long gown, and hands in prayer.

The following are the memorials formerly in the church which have been preserved by Weever (Funeral Monuments, pp. 528, 529): they are here arranged in order of date.

" Hic dominus JOHANNES PAYNE, vicarius. . . . 1470.

" Quisquis eris, qui transieris, sta, perlege, plora.

Sum quod eris, fueram quod es, pro me precor ora."

" Orate pro anima HENRICI ARCHER, qui obiit 2 die Septemb. anno Domini, 1480, cujus anime. . . . ."

" Here lyeth JOHN ROBINSON

Who dyed M.cccc. and thre.

Monuments in the Churchyard.

Affixed to the south side of the church, on the exterior, is a tablet with this inscription:

" Sacred to the memory of the Revd. THOS. CARTER, late the respected Curate and Lecturer of this parish sixteen years, who, by the sudden stroke of an apoplexy, departed this life the 28th day of Decr. 1791, aged 60 years. The best of husbands, a steady friend, indefatigable in the sacred duties of his office, an honest man, a sincere Christian. O reader! admire and imitate.

" What sound is that? see, see, he gasping lies;
All help is vain! my lover, husband, dies!
O he was all my glory, all my pride.
My constant friend, companion, pastor, guide.

Against a house at the west side of the churchyard is erected a large monument, of a pyramidal form: it is now about a century old, and has only this inscription:

SI CHRISTICOLA ES
ET AETERNOS ANNOE MEDITARE.

There is no name; and a coat of arms, the charges of which were only painted, is now obliterated, with the exception of two lions passant on a chief indented. The crest, which also is defaced, was an owl.

EXTRACTS FROM THE REGISTER.

The earliest date in the Parish Register is 1566, and it appears to have been very accurately kept. The following extracts supply various particulars regarding the former residents in Isleworth, not afforded by the monumental inscriptions. They were taken by Mr. Lysons, and the annotations are principally his, with occasional corrections.

" William, son of St. Jeffery Fenton, Knt. baptized June 24, 1590; John, his son, buried Ap. 5. 1591."

" St. John Arundel, Knt. died Jan. 17, 1591, and was buried at St. Collone in Cornwall." This Sir John Arundel married Anne, daughter of Edward Earl of Derby, who had a seat at Isleworth. He was ancestor of the Arundells of Lanberne in Cornwall, and of Chidioke in Dorsetshire, one of whose coheirs was married in 1739 to Henry 7th Lord Arundell of Wardour.

" Mary, the daughter of St. John Hungerford, Knt. baptized June 21, 1601." Sir John Hungerford was of Down Ampney in Gloucestershire. His daughter Mary married William Platt, Esq. of Highgate, the founder of the Platt Fellowships at St. John's college, Cambridge, and afterwards Edward Tucker, Esq. There are busts of Mr. Platt and this lady on their monument in Highgate chapel.

" St. William Glover, Knt. buried Dec. 17, 1603." He was an alderman of London, knighted, with all the other aldermen not already knights, on the 26th July preceding his death, in which year he was also Sheriff, and consequently never Lord Mayor.

" Henry, the son of St. Thomas Savage, Knt. baptized Mar. 7, 1606; Jane, May 26, 1607; Francis, June 5, 1608; James, Aug. 13, 1609; another Henry, Feb. 26, 1609; a third Henry, Jan. 16, 1611 (buried Jan. 29); Elizabeth baptized July 27, 1612 (buried Aug. 7, 1613); Dorothy baptized Nov. 3, 1614." (See the description of a monument to three of these children in p. 148.)

" Dorothy, the daughter of Sir William Lower, Knt. buried Oct. 16, 1608."

" Henry, son of St. Ralph Winwood, Knt. baptized Aug. 13, 1614." Sir Ralph was ambassador to the States of Holland, and Secretary of State to James I. He died in 1617.

" Philip Hobby, the son-in-law of St. Horatio Vere, buried Jan. 13, 1616." Mary, daughter of Sir William Tracy, married to her first husband, Mr. William Hobby, and secondly Horatio Lord Vere. Philip Hobby died unmarried.

" Harry Trace, the Ld. Vere's kinsman, buried Mar. 25. 1617, son of Sir William Tracy, and brother of Lady Vere."

" Horace, the son of Sir Robert Trace, Knt. and Bridget, baptized June 28, 1618, buried May 20, 1619." Sir Robert was nephew of Lady Vere, and was afterwards the second Viscount Tracy. He married Bridget, daughter of John Lyttelton, Esq.

" Henry Leigh, Esq. and Lady Scudamore, married July 2, 1616." Son and heir of Sir Edward Leigh, kt. of Rushall, co. Stafford. Lady S. the dau. of Griffith Hampden, of Hampden, Bucks, Esq. and widow first of Edward Oglethorpe, Esq. (son and heir of Sir Owen Oglethorpe, knt.), and 2. of Sir Philip Scudamore, of Burnham.

" St. Robert Sidney and the Lady Dorothy his wife had their daughter Dorothy baptized Oct. 5, 1617." Sir Robert Sidney, afterwards the second Earl of Leicester of that name, married Dorothy, daughter of Henry Earl of Northumberland. Their daughter Dorothy, whose baptism is now recorded, was the celebrated Sacharissa, rendered immortal by Waller. Fenton, in his notes upon that poet, says, that he had in vain endeavoured to discover the time and place of her birth, and that he searched the registers at Penshurst for that purpose. It appears by this entry that she was born at Syon-house, whilst her grandfather was a prisoner in the Tower. The following extract from the parish accounts proves that she resided at Isleworth in her widowhood, 1636.—" Received of the Countess of Sunderland for her rate for the poor for half a year 16s."

" Dorothy, the Lady and Countess of Northumberland, buried Aug. 14, 1619." Sacharissa's grandmother, wife of Henry Earl of Northumberland, and daughter of Walter Deverreux, Earl of Essex. The time of her death is not mentioned in the peerages. It appears by this date of her burial, that she did not live to see her husband released from his confinement. Some remarkable reflections upon her by her husband have recently been printed in the Archæologia, vol. XXVII.

" St. Thomas Dutton, Knt. and the Lady Anne, had their daughter baptized Feb. 23, 1622; Elizabeth, their daughter, buried Aug. 15, 1623; Lucy baptized Nov. 21, 1623. St. Thomas Dutton, Knt. buried May 19, 1634." He was descended from the family of that name in Cheshire, and a courtier (see Nichols's Progresses, &c. of King James I. vol. iii.

p. 466.) His wife's name was Garraway (Middlesex Pedigrees, MS. Harl. 1551.)

"Sir John Walters, Knt. and the Lady Anne Biggs, married July 18, 1622."

"Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Simon Harvie, Knt. buried May 6, 1626. Simon Harvie, Knt. buried Dec. 4, 1626. Simon, son of Lady Harvie, buried April 6, 1632." It is probable that this is the same Simon Harvey mentioned in the parish register at Newington as grocer to Queen Elizabeth. Sir Simon was knighted at Theobalds Oct. 3, 1623.

"Giles, son of St. Giles Overbury, and Anne his wife, baptized Aug. 8, 1627. John, Ap. 24, 1630 (buried Ap. 9, 1632); Anne, baptized Oct. 11, 1631; Edward, Feb. 4, 1633; Richard, Oct. 24, 1634; Mary, Sept. 11, 1637." Sir Giles Overbury was of Bourton in Gloucestershire, and knighted Dec. 1, 1623.

"Jane Carter had three children (whereof two were still-born) buried Feb. 23, 1627."

"The Rt. Hon. the L<sup>d</sup> Graye and the Lady Priscilla, his wife, had their daughter Catharine baptized Oct. 29, 1629; Ralph and Elizabeth, son and daughter of L<sup>d</sup>. Gray and Priscilla, Oct. 27, 1630; Talbot, their son, Feb. 14, 1632 (buried June 9, 1635); Edward, baptized Feb. 7, 1633." William Grey was created Lord Grey of Warke in 1624. His son, Ralph, succeeded to the title, and left an only son, Ford (created Earl of Tankerville), in whom it became extinct. The Earldom of Tankerville was revived in the person of Charles Lord Ossulston, who married Lady Mary Grey, his only daughter. Catharine, daughter of William Lord Grey, whose baptism is here recorded, married Sir Edward Moseley, Bart. and secondly Charles Lord North. Lord Grey of Warke had the king's licence, anno 1631, to inclose a part of the high road leading from Brentford to Twickenham, adjoining to his house. (Pat. 7 Car. 1. pt. 5, July 18.)

<sup>1</sup> In the church of St. Benet Fink, in the city of London, was formerly this epitaph: "By this pillar was buried the body of Dame ANNE AWNSHAM, who dyed the 23d of December, 1613, being neere 12 years the wife of Sir Gideon Awnsham of Ittleworth, in the county of Middlesex, Knight: And before the wife to William Barradaile, citizen and merchant taylor of London, dwelling in this parish together some 30 years. He died in March 1600, who, by his will, gave five pounds to the poore of this parish, and 6 pounds 13 shil.

" John and Ann, son and daughter of St. Richard Salterston, and Elizabeth his wife, baptized Jan. 22, 1632. Sir Richard Salterston's daughter buried May 13, 1632." This name should probably be Salstonstall, an eminent city family for several generations; see Clutterbuck's Hertfordshire, vol. iii. p. 362; Nichols's Progresses, &c. of James I., vol. iii. p. 449.

" John Queat, a dwarf, buried July 9, 1632."

" Robert, son of Sir John Bennet, and Anne his wife, buried Oct. 18, 1634." Sir John Bennet, ancestor of the Earl of Tankerville, had by his wife Dorothy (daughter of Sir James Crofts), a son, Robert, who died unmarried about that period.

" Abienna, the daughter of St. Theodore Mayerne, baptized May 1, 1637." Sir Theodore Mayerne was a physician of great eminence in the reign of Charles I. Lysons supposes his daughter Abienna to be the same person (called in the parish register at Chelsea, Adriana de Miherne) who was married to the Marquis de Montpouhon in 1659. Sir Theodore lived many years at Chelsea.

" Sir Richard Murray buried June 29, 1637."

" Richard, the son of St. William Thalkeston, baptized Aug. 1638." (A note in another hand, "Not here baptized.")

" Theodore, son of St. William Denny, buried July 16, 1640." Sir William Denny was created a Baronet in 1642. The title is extinct.

" The Lady Bruker's child buried Sept. 14, 1647." Perhaps Brouncker.

" The Ld. Waurewick had his daughter Frances buried May 4, 1648." Robert Earl of Warwick was Lord Admiral to the Parliament.

" Mr. Francis Brudenell buried June 23, 1654." Son, it is probable, of Francis Lord Brudenell, by Anne, daughter of Thomas Viscount Savage, who was an inhabitant of Isleworth.

" Sir Charles Wolseley, Knt. and his wife had their daughter lins, and a pence toward the building a loft in the church, besides his other legacies to the poore in other places. And the said Dame Anne, besides her other good deeds to Isleworth, and other places, she also appointed five pound to the poore of this parish, which the said Sir Gideon paid. As they both (thanks be to God) lived godly and well, so they could not but dye well, by the onely mercy of Jesus Christ."

Bridget born Mar. 10, 1657." Sir Charles was the second baronet of that name, and one of Cromwell's peers. He represented the county of Stafford in parliament in the reigns of Charles I. and II. His wife was Anne, daughter of William Viscount Say and Sele, by whom he had six sons and ten daughters; Bridget was the fifth.

"St. Thomas Nott's child buried Ap. 17, 1659. His daughter Susan, born April 23, 1659." Sir Thomas Nott was Gentleman Usher of the Privy Chamber to Charles II.

"Frances, daughter of St. John Talbot, buried June 13, 1662. Thomas, his son (by his wife Barbara), baptized July 23, 1665." Probably Sir John Talbot of Lacock (see p. 177.)

"Mrs. Margaret Hudson, daughter of St. Henry Hudson of Melton Mowbray, buried Sep. 29, 1665." She died of the plague. Sir Henry Hudson, who was created a baronet in 1660, married Mary, daughter of Sir Edward Bromfield, baronet, some time Lord Mayor of London (see p. 160.) This daughter of Sir Henry is not mentioned by Kimber.

"Jane, daughter of St. Sackville Crow, buried Jan. 1, 1666." Sir Sackville Crow, created a baronet in 1627, after marrying Mary, sister of John eighth Earl of Rutland, died in the Fleet Prison in 1683. His son and successor was also named Sir Sackville, but on his death without surviving male issue the title became extinct. (Courthope's Extinct Baronetage, p. 55.)

"Anthony, the son of Mr. Henry Collins, baptized June 22, 1676." The celebrated deistical writer. He is said to have been born at Heston, but as others of Henry Collins's children were baptised at Isleworth about this period, and none appear in the register at Heston till 1691, it is probable that he had a house at this place at the time of his son Anthony's birth, and removed some years afterwards to Heston.

"The lady Anne Brumfield buried July 7, 1681."

"Mr. Francis Lumley buried June 18, 1688."

"Margaret, Countess of Orrery, buried Aug. 24, 1689." Third dau. of Theophilus third Earl of Suffolk, married in 1640 to Roger 1st Earl of Orrery, and left his widow in 1679.

"Susan, the daughter of the Rt. Hon. Henry Le Longueville, and the Lady Barbara his wife, baptized Oct. 2, 1692; Henry, Aug. 30, 1695." Henry Lord Grey of Ruthin, created Viscount Longueville in 1690, was father of Talbot Yelverton,

Earl of Sussex of that family. Lord Longueville

" James, son of Sir Charles Carteret, and the Lady Mary, his wife, baptized June 16, 1694." Sir Charles Carteret, Bart. was gentleman of the privy chamber to Queen Anne, and it is probable was at this time in attendance upon her (as Princess of Denmark) at Syon House. Sir Charles left no issue at his death, when the title became extinct. He was collaterally related to George Lord Carteret, father of John Earl Granville. Sir Charles Carteret married Mary, daughter of Amias de Carteret, Esq.

" Dame Elizabeth Cartwright buried Dec. 19, 1680."

" Mr. Savage Mostine buried Aug. 22, 1700." A son, it is probable, of Sir Thomas Mostyn, Bart. by Bridget his wife, only daughter and heir of Darcy Savage, descended from Thomas Viscount Savage and Earl Rivers.

" Anne Dechamp, aged 92, buried Dec. 12, 1712."

" The Lady Whitwong buried May 15, 1716." Sir John Wittewronge, Bart. married Mary, daughter of Mr. Samuel White. Their daughter, Martha, was wife of John Gumley, Esq. of Isleworth.

" Henry, son of the Right Hon. Henry L. Paget and Elizabeth his wife, baptized Jan. 22, 1719." The Earl of Uxbridge, who died in 1769, when the title became extinct, but was revived in the junior branch of the family.

" George, son of George and Mary Talbot, born Dec. 11, 1719; Barbara Maria, Feb. 12, 1720; Charles, son of the Hon. George Talbot and Mary, born Ap. 12, 1722; Maria, Aug. 18, 1723; John Edward, Oct. 13, 1724; James Robert, June 28, 1726; Thomas Joseph, Apr. 17, 1727; Francis Jerome, Sept. 30, 1728; Lucy, Dec. 4, 1732." George Talbot, the birth of whose children is here recorded, became afterward (in 1743) the 14th Earl of Shrewsbury. He married Mary, daughter of Thomas Viscount Fitzwilliam, of Ireland. George, their eldest son, was the 15th Earl of Shrewsbury. Charles was father of the 16th Earl. John Edward died unmarried in 1751. James Robert was in holy orders, and became the catholic Bishop of Birta, and vicar apostolic of the diocese of London. He died in 1790, and was buried at Hammer-smith. Lysons supposes that Thomas Joseph and Francis Jerome died in their infancy, as they are not mentioned by Collins. Barbara married James Lord Aston, of Forfar, Maria married Charles Dormer, Esq.; Lucy took the veil.

" Heneage Finch, son of the R<sup>t</sup>. Hon. Lord and Lady Guernsey, baptized July 12, 1751." Heneage Earl of Aylesford, born, it is supposed, at Syon House. His mother was daughter of Charles Duke of Somerset.

" Sir William Elwes, Bart. buried Nov. 26, 1779." Sir William Elwes lived in Syon Lane, Isleworth, upon a very slender income; the fortune of the family having been left by his cousin and predecessor in the title Sir Harvey Elwes to his nephew John Meggot Elwes, Esq. the notorious miser. Sir William is said to have had three sons, two of whom proved his will in 1779, but they did not assume the title, nor is it known what became of them. (Courthope's Extinct Baronets, p. 72.)

" The Hon. Henry Nevill, of St. George, Hanover Square, and Mary Robinson (daughter of John Robinson, Esq. M. P.), of this parish, were married by special licence Oct. 3, 1781. Mary Catharine, daughter of the Hon. Henry Nevill, son and heir of George Baron of Abergavenny, and Mary his wife, baptized Mar. 24, 1783. Henry George, son of the R<sup>t</sup>. Hon. Henry Viscount Nevill, and Mary, June 20, 1785. Ralph, son of the R<sup>t</sup>. Hon. Henry, Earl of Abergavenny, &c. Jan. 22, 1787; Henrietta, Aug. 14, 1788; John, Feb. 27, 1790; William, Aug. 5, 1792."

" Louisa Caroline Anne, daughter of George Greville, Earl Brooke and Earl of Warwick, and Harriott his wife, born the 9th of Feb. 1794, and baptized the 9th of March, 1794, by the Rev. Frederick Hamilton. Sponsors, Lady Caroline Peachy, Lady Anne Fitzpatrick, the Duke of Bedford."

At the visitation of Middlesex, began in the year 1663 by William Ryley, Esq. Lancaster, and Henry Dethick, Rouge Croix, marshalls and deputies to Sir Edward Byashe, Knt. Clarencieux King of Arms, the following persons belonging to Isleworth made proof of their pedigrees—David Bonnell, gent., Richard Fuller, merchant, William Comyn, alias Chilcott, Esq., John Richards, Gilbert Barrell, Esq., and John Symcotts, gent. Of this visitation an edition was printed in folio, 1820, at the expense of Sir Thomas Phillipps, Bart., and the pedigrees will be found therein.

The old Workhouse belonging to this parish is situated in Godfrey's or Link Lane. Till the year 1822 it stood on a piece of ground near Brentford Bridge; but, being in very bad repair, and the situation not at all proper, it was therefore sold about fifteen years ago, and the sum thence arising was applied towards purchasing the ground and erecting the building above-mentioned, the cost of which was between 3 and 4000*l*.

THE NEW (BRENTFORD) UNION WORKHOUSE.

This building, lately erected under the provisions of the New Poor Law Act, from the designs and under the superintendence of Lewis Vulliamy, Esq. architect, is in the style of architecture that prevailed about the time of Queen Elizabeth. The walls are faced with red brick, and dressed with stone heads, sills, jambs to the doors and windows, stone plinths, copings, string-courses, and quoins, &c. The roofs are covered with slate, which is not in strict conformity with the style, no other covering being used in the period to which the style of architecture refers but tile. The great superiority of slate rendered this deviation desirable.

The house is intended to accommodate 400 paupers, besides the master and mistress, nurses, &c. The paupers are divided into three classes, and each class into male and female, who all have separate yards, wards, and dormitories, viz. for aged and infirm poor, for able-bodied persons who cannot find employment, and for children. There are also sick and infirm wards, and lying-in wards; a surgery, water-closets, work-rooms, store and provision rooms, &c. &c. The board room, where the guardians meet once a week to transact the business of the poor, and an office for the clerk adjoining, are on the first floor over the entrance hall; just behind is the school room, which serves also as a chapel on Sundays. The dining hall is on the ground floor, at the back part of the building, and serves also as the chapel for the adults.

The space occupied by the buildings and yards is 177 feet broad and 180 feet deep; and the height of the buildings varies from one to three, and in the centre and wings four stories.

The entire cost of the building was about £7500.

The wish of the Guardians in this Union was to have a building which should not present any of the prison-like associations so usual in buildings of this description: this they considered desirable, not only as regarded the inmates, but also the inhabitants of houses in the neighbourhood, to whom a building in the style in which workhouses are usually built would have been objectionable, and have deteriorated the value of property in the vicinity. They wished, too, that, as a feature in the country, it should add to rather than detract from the appearance of the scene, from whichever side it was viewed.

The situation is central; the level of the ground rather flat and low, but healthy, on account of the substratum of soil being principally composed of gravel for twelve or fourteen feet deep, under a very thin layer of vegetable mould.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS AND BENEFACTIONS.

ISLEWORTH CHARITY SCHOOL.

THIS charity-school appears to have been first founded in the year 1715, when funds for its support were furnished by yearly subscriptions added to the bequests of Lady Elizabeth Hill and Mrs. Ann Oliver. Of the appropriation of these bequests there is no record of an earlier date than the above, although they were most likely applied to the education and support of poor children, such being the express intention of each testatrix.

An allowance was usually made to some poor children for victuals, and in the foundation deed the trustees are required to have particular regard to that matter.

The gifts of the above Lady Elizabeth Hill and Mrs. Ann Oliver are now held by trustees, appointed under a legal deed.

In 1814, this charity school was united to the National Society for the education of the poor according to the system introduced by Dr. Bell, since which time the general number receiving daily instruction has been 100 boys and 60 girls.

The trustees of Isleworth charity-school are the being.

Mr. and Mrs. Adams are the present master and mistress.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

This charity was founded during the incumbency of the Rev. William Drake, D.D. in or about the year 1796, the great object of which was that the children of the poor, who were then too numerous to be admitted into the charity-school, should nevertheless be led to a proper observance of the Sabbath, and be instructed in the invaluable truths of Christianity.

Its beginning, as is the beginning of all human institutions, was small. A few poor children who had been used to idle away the sabbath, and some of them exposed to the worst examples, were collected together, and, under the care of a prudent and serious woman, were taught the most useful part of education, discipline, and were by her brought to hear the service of the church, and to learn the end of their being here, and the hope of their being hereafter.

In a few years the number of applicants became so numerous, that it was thought expedient to divide them under two different mistresses, each having the charge of about 25; and in this manner they continued till the year 1815, when, from the adoption of the national system of education in the charity-school, and the superannuation of one of the mistresses of these schools, they were again united into one, and under such union they still continue.

In 1823 this became, properly speaking, a daily charity-school, the girls receiving daily instruction, and being in a great measure clothed by its benefactors.

The trustees of this school are the Rev. H. Glossop, Charles Stanbrough, esq. Mr. Grimault, and Mr. Wilmot.

The ladies of the parish superintend its arrangements, the vicar's lady acting as treasurer. Mrs. Kemp is the present schoolmistress.

The £80 paid by Mrs. Child was applied towards building the workhouse at Brentford-End.

SIR THOMAS INGRAM'S ALMSHOUSES.

These almshouses were founded and endowed by Sir Thomas Ingram, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, and one of his Majesty's Privy Council, about the year 1664, having for its support certain properties in Isleworth, now known as Shrewsbury Wharf, but which were some years since exchanged under an Act of Parliament obtained by the Earl of Shrewsbury for certain fee-farm rents. Since the year 1664 there have been occasional benefactions.

In July 1809, the sum of £250 South Sea stock was bought with a legacy of Thomas Murthwaite, esq.

In May 1825, John Allen, esq. left £900 stock 3 per cent. to this charity. The following is an extract from his will:

"I direct my said trustees to set apart in their names nine hundred pounds stock 3 per cent. annuities to and for the benefit of the poor persons inhabiting Ingram's almshouses at Isleworth, and out of the dividends, interest, and annual profit thereof, to pay four pounds per annum unto each of the poor persons aforesaid yearly; and the surplus dividends I direct to be disposed of yearly in bread, and given at Isleworth church-door to the poor of the parish."

The trustees of these almshouses are the Duke of Northumberland, Rev. H. Glossop, Rev. H. Trimmer, vicar of Twickenham, James Clitherow, esq., William Day, esq., and G. Clark, esq.

MRS. TOLSON'S ALMSHOUSES.

Mrs. Tolson, in a deed of settlement dated 1741, prior to her marriage with Joseph Dash, esq. reserved the disposal of certain property; and in her will, dated 1754, she gave to the parish of Saleworth, under certain trust, the sum of £1000 for the provision and endowment of almshouses; the which legacy was disputed on the part of her husband, Joseph Duck, esq.; but, pursuant to a decree of Chancery, dated April 14th, 1756, Colonel Schutz and Mr. Juddell received of ——— Haverham, esq. the principal sum of £1000, and for interest upon the same at 4 per cent. from May 24, 1750, to April 10, 1766, a further sum of 1,192*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.* from which sum was paid for expences of Chancery suit 67*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.* leaving a net sum of 6,123*l.* 2*s.* 9*d.* in their hands.

On July 8, 1756, two copyhold cottages, situated near the Mill bridge, were bought of Joseph Reeves, butcher, for the sum of £110, and a copyhold cottage and garden of Henry John Wally, apothecary, for the sum of £63, in order to build almshouses on their sites.

On the 6th July following, it was agreed with George Blount to pay him the sum of £900 for building and completing almshouses for 12 poor persons; and an order was made to sell out a sufficient quantity of Bank stock to meet the expenses, and the purchases of the cottages before named.

Notwithstanding this order, the Reverend John Fulham, then one of the trustees, in whose name the stock stood, refused to sell out a sufficient part of the stock to cover the above engagements, and in consequence a petition was filed in the Court of Chancery, which petition was heard Dec. 20th and an order was granted for the sale.

The amount of stock remaining Jan. 25th 1758, was 2,444*l.* 10*s.* 4*d.* and in August 1773 a part of the dividends, 17*s.* 6*d.* 17*s.* was added to that sum, making it £5,500, the which, added to Mr. Gosting's donation in 1820, makes the present fund £5,710 three per cent. consols. (Min. Sept. 11th, 1758.) Three trustees form a quorum, but there must not be less than five trustees, nor more than ten, of which the vicar for the time being is always one, under the will of Mrs. Anne Tolson.

Mrs. Tolson also gave £500, the interest to be distributed in bread.

PARTICULARS OF PROPERTIES IN ENFEOFFMENT.

There is no account of the appropriation of the property in the possession of the present feoffees, of an earlier date than 1766, although the whole of it had been bequeathed to the poor at that time for nearly a century: before the year 1766 it was carried to the accounts of the overseers.

In the year above mentioned, it was determined at a vestry, in consequence of much rent being in arrear, not only on one estate, but on the greater part of the whole, to appoint certain distinct (from the officers of the parish) but joint trustees; and by them and their successors the proceeds have been and are still distributed monthly to parishioners being in distress.

The right of appointing new feoffees is not in the parish at vestry, but in the surviving feoffees, under the existing deed of admission.

The present feoffees are the Rev. H. Glossop, vicar; Rev. Dr. Benson, incumbent of Hounslow church, James Stanbrough, esq., Charles Stanbrough, esq., William Day, esq., John Farnell, esq., Mr. Benham, Mr. Atlee, Mr. Wilmot, Mr. Knevelt, Mr. Grimault, Mr. Smith, Mr. Quarman, and Mr. Joseph Chapman.

MR. DYCHOFF'S GIFT.

In 1747, Mr. John Anthony Dychoff gave £50 New South Sea annuities, in aid of the poor's rate.

THE CHURCH OF ISLEWORTH.

Extract from the will of Mr. Richard Robinson, dated 1785.

"I give and bequeath the sum of nine pounds ten shillings a year to be paid out of the churchwardens and overseers of the parish of Isleworth for the time being in the intent that they shall have the same five pounds put thereof in the purchase of land to be sold at any time on the anniversary day after my decease amongst the poor of the said parish of Isleworth. And I direct them to be made as near my tomb as conveniently may be, and the remainder of the said sum of nine pounds ten shillings to be given on the same day and at the same place annually in money. And I will and direct that a sermon commemorating the day of my decease shall be preached at the parish church of Isleworth on the day of my interment, and also on the Sunday next following the anniversary day thereof forever. And I will that my executors shall pay to the vicar of the said parish for the time being for ever, two guineas a year for the wages of the said vicar, and to the lecturer of the said parish for the time being one pound and one shilling a year to be paid to them on the occasion. And I give and bequeath the sum of five pounds to the clerk and sexton of the said parish to be equally divided between them, to be paid to them on the anniversary day of my decease and the vault where I am interred. And I will that the said five pounds a year for the wages of the said vicar and the said lecturer of Isleworth, to be paid to them for the time being in keeping the said tomb and vault a repair, the surplus to be by them applied as they shall think fit, and I will that the sum of five pounds five shillings and six pence to be received by the trustees or the time being of the said parish of Isleworth for the poor boys and girls in Isleworth shall be by them applied annually towards the maintenance and education of the said poor boys and girls. And it is my will that the poor of the said parish who shall be thought worthy to be given, and the said vicar, lecturer, or clerk, or sexton, or any of them, shall be by them executed the directions herein before contained, and shall do justice to them respectively as they shall think fit, and be void."

MRS. FRANKS'S GIFT.

Priscilla Franks, late of Isleworth, widow, deceased, by her will dated 22nd January, 1827, made the several following charitable bequests, viz.:

"To the ministers and churchwardens for the time being of the parish of Isleworth, to be distributed by them for the benefit of the poor of the same parish, the sum of two hundred pounds. To the trustee or trustees for the time being of Ingram's almshouses in the Mill Platt the sum of fifty pounds, to be made use of as he or they may think proper for the benefit of such charity. To the trustee or trustees for the time being of Mrs. Tolson's almshouses close to the Mill Bridge at Isleworth aforesaid, the sum of fifty pounds, to be made use of as he or they may think proper for the benefit of such charity."

Proved at London, with three codicils, the 1st December, 1832, before the worshipful John Daubeny.

Philip Godard's intended benefaction is mentioned in the account of All Angels Chapel.

Mr. Thomas Bawcutt has left some reversionary interest to this parish, which at present has not devolved to it.

LYING-IN INSTITUTION, AND TRUSS SOCIETY.

An institution was established in 1811 for providing the necessary comforts and clothing for poor married women during their lying-in. This institution is supported by subscription.

A Truss Society for the gratuitous distribution of trusses in this parish, and within a circuit of five or six miles of Isleworth, under the patronage of his Grace the Duke of Northumberland, was established in 1834, and the evidence of its usefulness is demonstrated by the almost incredible number of poor to whom instruments have been dispensed, amounting to 1,016 up to May 1, 1838. It was suggested by Mr. M. Adams, of Isleworth, who, although any thing legitimately but a truss maker, has so far given his attention to their construction, that they are principally maintained by his own family, and in his own house; their cost, therefore, is comparatively trifling; and he affords an superabundant gratuity.

MANOR OF ISLEWORTH.

The manor of Isleworth, or Isleworth-Syon, is co-extensive with the hundred to which the village imparts a name.<sup>1</sup>

In Domesday,<sup>2</sup> as before observed, it is noticed under the name of Gistelesworde. It was held by Walter de St. Valeri; and always answered for seventy hides.<sup>3</sup> "There is land," continues that record, "to fifty-five ploughs.<sup>4</sup> Six hides and a half are in the demesne, and there are six ploughs therein. Among the freemen and villains<sup>5</sup> there are twenty-eight ploughs; and eleven may yet be made. A priest has there three virgates;<sup>6</sup> and there are fifty-one villains of one virgate each, and twenty-four villains of half a virgate each, and eighteen villains of half a virgate each, and six

<sup>3</sup> A hide was never expressly determined. In the time of Edgar and Edward the Confessor it consisted of 120 acres. It is sometimes described to be sufficient for the cultivation of one plough; and has been represented at 100, and at 96 acres; "one hide four virgates, and every virgate four acres." Other authorities make eight virgates go to one hide. It appears, however, that it was no given number of acres, but varied according to places.

<sup>6</sup> A virgate differed in extent at different periods; some writers consider that at the Survey four virgates or virges formed the hide. In the time of Henry the Fifth it is stated that a virgate contained sometimes thirty, and at others twenty-four and fifteen acres. The Malmesbury MS. quoted by Spelman (Gloss. voc.) says, that a virgate of land contains twenty-four acres, that four virgates constitute one hide, and that five hides amount to one military fief.

cottagers. A foreigner and a certain Englishman have four hides, and they are approved knights (milites probati). Twelve villains and bordars<sup>1</sup> together live under them; and six of the lord's villains, who hold two hides and half a virgate. There are two mills of ten shillings, meadow for twenty ploughs, pasture for the cattle of the village. One wear (gost) and a half of twelve shillings and eight pence. Pannage for five hundred hogs.<sup>2</sup> For herbage twelve pence. The whole value is seventy-two pounds;<sup>3</sup> the same when received; in King Edward's time four score pounds. Earl Algar held this manor."

Walter de St. Valeri, who possessed this manor at the era of the general survey, was a nobleman who accompanied the Conqueror in his expedition to England. William parcelled out the conquered kingdom among the numerous soldiers of fortune who followed him on this occasion. The Earl of Moretaine, his half-brother, was recompenced by a donation of seven hundred and ninety-three manors. Alan Earl of Bretagne, who commanded the rear of the army in the battle of Hastings, possessed four hundred and forty-two manors. William de Percy, ancestor of the noble family of Percy, who was a great <sup>1</sup> The bordarii or bordars are frequently mentioned in Domesday; they are always placed after the villains, and were those of a less servile condition: holding small houses or bords, which they paid with poultry, eggs, and other provisions for the lord's consumption, and performed services and domestic works, as grinding, threshing, drawing water, cutting wood, &c. Somner (on Gavelkind, p. 74) says the villains or bordarii of Domesday Book, who are always distinguished from the serfs of the demesne, were the coorls of the Anglo-Saxon law.

<sup>2</sup> Pannagium, or pannage, had a double acceptation in the Survey. It meant first the running and feeding of hogs in the wood; and in a secondary sense, the price or rate of their running. In one or two entries it is termed pastio. Sir Henry Ellis's Introd. to Domesday, vol. i. p. 97.

favourite of the King, and one of his barons, enjoyed by his bounty Ambledune in Hampshire, thirty-two lordships in Lincolnshire, and eighty-six in Yorkshire.<sup>1</sup> Odo Bishop of Baieux received from the hand of his brother four hundred and thirty-nine. Hugo de Port reckoned upwards of four hundred within his domain, and many other Norman noblemen in equal or greater number.<sup>2</sup>

The noble and ancient family of St. Valeri were lords of a town in Picardy, named from a sainted disciple of St. Columban, who was made abbat of a monastery in the territory of Amiens by Clothaire, in 589. The first person who is known of this family was Gulbert, who was styled "Advocatus de Sancto Gualerico." He married Papia, the daughter of Richard the Second, Duke of Normandy. His son was Bernard de St. Valeri, father of Walter de St. Valeri, who flourished under Duke Robert the Second, and with his son Bernard was present at the siege of Nice, in 1096. Ranulph de St. Valeri, who is recorded in Domesday as having possessions in Lincolnshire, together with several houses in Winchester, and from whom a street in that city was called "Vicus Sancti Walerici," attended Duke William upon his expedition to England.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>3</sup> A long account of the duties and privileges of Advocati will be found in the Glossary of Ducange. They were the lay defenders appointed by monasteries, bishops, and other ecclesiastics, to wield the sword of the flesh, and fight their battles in this world - to act as their Banner-bearers in war, and their Castellans in peace. It was said of the advocate of the church of Tournay

"Thomas de St. Valery was travelling with his wife Adela, daughter of a Count de Ponthieu. They were attacked near a forest by eight armed men. St. Valery, after a severe struggle, was seized, bound and thrown into a thicket. His wife was carried off, exposed to the brutality of the banditti, and afterwards dismissed in a state of nudity. She, however, sought for and found her husband, and they returned together. They were soon after met by their servants, whom they had left at an inn, and returned to their father's castle at Abbeville. The barbarous count, full of false ideas of honour, proposed, some days after, to his daughter, a ride to his town of Rue on the sea shore. There they entered a bark, as if to sail about for pleasure; and they had stood out three leagues from the shore, when the Count de

In 1264, when the great rebellion broke out, on pretence of Henry the Third's violation of the provisions made at Oxford, managed chiefly by Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, and Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester; Richard Earl of Cornwall adhered faithfully to his royal brother: for which the constable of the Tower, Sir Hugh Spencer, knight, and a great multitude of the citizens of London, riotously assembled, and hastened hither with intent to seize on the person of Richard; but the Earl having made his escape, they in revenge "spoiled the mannour place of the King of Almaine, and then set it on fire, and destroyed the water milles and other commodities which he there had." For this outrage, when Henry the Third had suppressed the rebellion of the Barons, he obliged the citizens to pay a fine of 1000 marks to the Earl of Cornwall as a compensation.<sup>2</sup>

Ponthieu standing up, said, with a terrible voice, 'Lady, death must now efface the shame which your misfortune has brought on all your family.' The sailors, previously instructed, instantly seized her, shut her up in a hog'shead, and threw her into the sea, while the bark regained the coast. Happily, a Flemish vessel passing near the coast, the crew observed the floating hog'shead, and expecting a prize of good wine, took it up, opened it, and with great surprise found a beautiful woman. She was, however, almost dead, from terror and want of air; and at her earnest entreaty the honest Flemings sent a boat ashore with her. She gained her husband's house, who was in tears for her supposed death. The scene was extremely affecting; but Adela survived it only a few hours. John, Count of Ponthieu, repenting of his crime, gave to the monks of St. Valery the right of fishing three days in the year in and about the spot where his daughter had been thrown overboard."—Croke's Hist. of the Croke Family, vol. i. p. 415.

After the death of Richard Earl of Cornwall, which took place the 4th April, 1272 (56 Hen. III.) we find, in an entry on the Hundred Rolls, that Edmund, his son, possessed the manor and park of Isleworth, and that his bailiff there received from Stephen Escvy, citizen of London, four rafters, price 12*s.* which the said Edmund claimed as wreck after the battle of Evesham.<sup>1</sup>

From a record in the possession of the Duke of Northumberland, cited by Mr. Lysons, it appears that in 1293 (22 Ed. I.) the same Edmund also claimed assize of bread and beer, gallows and free-warren, in his manor of Isleworth; as also the prior of St. Valeri for his tenants there, and the master of the hospital of St. Giles the same privilege for his tenants in Isleworth and Heston, as belonging to his church of Isleworth.<sup>2</sup>

In the year 1300 the master of the Knights Templars in England made a fine of 40*s.* with the King before the Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, the King's treasurer, at a Parliament holden at Westminster, for licence to receive a certain common pasture within the limits of the hundred of Isleworth, viz. from Cranford to Twickenham in length, and from the bridge of Babbeworthepond to the town of Hounslow in breadth, the gift of the Earl of Cornwall. This grant was confirmed the following year by Edw. I.<sup>3</sup> The same Earl also remitted and quitclaimed a certain yearly rent of 2*s.* which he was accustomed to receive from the above master for the same common pasture,<sup>4</sup> which was confirmed by Edward III.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>2</sup> It is stated in the Inquisition (28 Ed. I. n. 44) taken after the Earl of Cornwall's death, that the churches of Isleworth, Heston, and Twickenham, at the time of the Conquest, were in the possession of the abbat and convent of St. Valeri as hamlets pertaining to the manor of Isleworth. An extent of the manor is also given, together with a list of the freeholders, &c. It is almost illegible.

Upon the death of Edmund Earl of Cornwall (Oct. 1300, 28 Ed. I.) this manor became vested in Edward I. as his next heir.<sup>1</sup> In the following year, at a Parliament holden at Lincoln (12th Feb.) the King was pleased to assign it, with the hamlets of Heston, Twickenham, and Whitton, and their appurtenances, amounting annually to 115*l.* 13*s.* 0*d.* among other lordships, lands, and rents, unto Margaret the Earl's widow (sister of Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester), as part of her dower.<sup>2</sup>

It appears to have come again into the hands of the Crown at her demise, as by the Nomina Villarum, in the British Museum, dated 1316, we find that the towns of Isleworth, Heston, and Twickenham, were in the King's possession.<sup>3</sup>

In 1312 William de Hampton was appointed bailiff of the manor of Thistleworth, with appurtenances, during pleasure.<sup>4</sup> On the 28th November, in the same year, Roger de Morwode had the custody of this manor, with the hamlets and other appurtenances in the county of Middlesex.<sup>5</sup> In 1318 Humphrey de Waleden.<sup>6</sup> In 1323 the same Humphrey and Richard de Ikene.<sup>7</sup> In the following year the same Richard and Richard de Wymferthing.<sup>8</sup> In 1330 William le Heir.<sup>9</sup> In 1332 John de Rule was appointed keeper of the King's park at Isleworth during pleasure, receiving the accustomed wages.<sup>10</sup>

was subsequently granted to Edward Duke of Cornwall, and his heirs, the first-born sons of the Kings of England, successively for ever.<sup>1</sup>

In 1362 the bailiff of the manor of Isleworth (at this time in the King's hands), upon the survey of John Weeke, steward of the manor court there, was commanded to repair and amend the bridge, and the head of the pool of Babworth-pound; and also to rebuild the water-mill of Isleworth, from the issues of the said manor, for which due allowance was to be made upon survey and testimony of the said steward.<sup>2</sup>

The following survey of the state of the manor-house and water-mill of Isleworth (previously alluded to as having been destroyed by the citizens of London), made by Adam de Hertynghdon, clerk, at the command of the Treasury "mense maii, anno xliiii<sup>to</sup>" [Edw. <sup>1</sup> Cart. Reg. vol. i. No. 50, fol. 409. These letters patent testify that the grant of the castle, manor, and honour of Knaresborough, in the county of York (which, together with the manor of Isleworth, had been assigned as stated in the text,) made to John King of Castile and Leon, Duke of Lancaster, and the heirs of his body, in exchange for the honour of Richmond, was for the advantage of the realm. By these letters the King declares that his only intention in granting that reversion to the Duke of Cornwall and his heirs was to put a stop to the petitions at that time inordinately preferred for a grant of that honour, and by no means that it should be transferred to the Duke, however desirous he might otherwise be of augmenting his station; and that, therefore, such grant was revoked and utterly annulled and void; and the said honour, by the advice of the prelates and nobles of the King's council, granted to the said Duke of Lancaster as aforesaid, and the manor of Isleworth retained in the King's hands.

other appurtenances in the county of Middlesex, were granted to Sir John de Ipre, knight, for term of ten years, at an annual rent of 123*l.* for maintaining the houses, &c. the wages of the warrener, and the repairs of the bridge and head of the pool of Babworth; right of piscary reserved to the King.<sup>1</sup> In the following year the same Sir John Ipre, then comptroller of the King's household, had an annuity of 100*l.* granted him out of the issues of the manor, to be paid by equal portions at the feasts of Michaelmas and Easter, by the hands of the keeper or farmer there for the time being.<sup>2</sup>

A remarkable depopulation of this place, or rather of the manor of Isleworth, occurred during this century. It appears that the King had been petitioned by the tenants of the manor of Isleworth relative to a customary annual payment of 8 marks called "Le Dyseyne," which was levied upon all males of 15 years of age and upwards, and was formerly of no consideration, it amounting only to 1*d.* per head, which had increased to six times that amount in consequence of so many of the inhabitants leaving the place on their attaining that age, thereby increasing the burthen upon the remaining inhabitants beyond their power of payment. Upon this petition, the King commanded the discontinuance of the payment of the said rent called "Le Dyseyne" for four years from that time.<sup>3</sup>

In 1390 this manor was given by Richard the Second in dower to his consort Anne for life.<sup>4</sup>

In 1421 Henry V. procured an Act of Parliament by which he was enabled to separate it from the duchy of Cornwall (to which other manors were assigned in exchange), and settle

On the 1st of March, 1426, (4 Hen. VI.) it was agreed and granted by the lords of the King's Council assembled at Leicester, that Jane Waryn, who was nurse to Henry V. father of the now King, should have 20*l.* annually at the Receipt of the Exchequer at Michaelmas and Easter Terms by equal portions, viz. from Michaelmas last past thenceforth, during the King's pleasure, in recompense of 20*l.* per annum, granted to her for term of her life by the said Henry V. to be received from the manor of Ystelworth, which was amortized to the house of St. Saviour of Sheen (Syon).<sup>2</sup>—Also, in 1427, John Merbury, of the county of Hereford, esq. presented a petition to Parliament, stating that he had been accustomed to receive 40 marks yearly payable out of the issues and profits of the manor of Isleworth, by grant from Hen. V. when Prince of Wales, but which had not been paid to him for some time, by reason of the said manor having been granted to the abbess and convent of Syon. In 1443 the abbess and convent of Syon, by their deed bearing date 22 Hen. VI. discharged the tenants of their manor of Isleworth of a certain payment or tribute of 20*l.* which they had been accustomed to pay annually to the said convent.<sup>2</sup>

The manor of Isleworth continued in the possession of the abbess and convent until the suppression of monasteries by Henry VIII. when it fell into the hands of the Crown.

In 1552 (6 Edw. VI.) Sir Thomas Wroth was appointed steward and bailiff of this manor, and all other lands, &c. in Isleworth, Twickenham, &c. for life; and also keeper of Syon House.<sup>3</sup>

Sr. Frances Knolles, knight, with the fee of 6l. 1s. 8d. by year for keeping of the same.'

The manor of Isleworth continued in the hands of the Crown until the reign of James I. A.D. 1604, when it was granted by that monarch to Henry Earl of Northumberland,* in which noble family it still continues. King James's grant was subject to an annual fee-farm rent of £99. 2s. which was purchased of the Crown by Charles Duke of Somerset, and given by him to the Earl of Egremont. This rent was afterwards the property of Theodore Broadhead, esq.†

In the year 1666, certain articles were agreed upon between the Right Honourable Algernon Earl of Northumberland (son of the above Henry), lord of the manor of Isleworth-Syon, Peter Dodsworth, and others, servants to the said Earl, of the one part, and Sir Thos. Ingram, knt. and others the principal copyhold tenants, on the other part, relative to the customs and privileges of this manor.

By these articles it was agreed between the said parties, that all fines and heriots upon admittances to all and every two copyhold messuages, &c. held of the said manor by the said Sir Thomas Ingram, knt. and others the customary tenants, their heirs and assigns, by copy of Court Roll, should themselves be certain, and not arbitrary at the will of the lord, and that the said Earl, Peter Dodsworth, and others, their heirs and assigns, and all and every other lord or lords of the said manor, should have and take fines and heriots upon the death of every tenant dying seised of any copyhold messuage, &c. as follows, viz. —

That upon the death of every tenant dying seised of one messuage, &c. in his usual occupation, the said Earl, Peter Dodsworth, and others, their heirs and assigns, and Robert Scawen, their assigns, as lords of the said manor, shall and lawfully may take the second best cloven-footed beast, which the said tenant shall be posseised of in his owne proper right, as of his owne proper goods, at the time of his decease, within the said manor: or, if he have no such beast, then the summe of two shillings in money, for and in lieu of an heriot. And for every other messuage whereof such tenant shall die seised in his occupation, or otherwise, the like summe of two shillings in money onely and no more: one heriot in kind onely, and no more, to be paid upon the death of one tenant, and that in case such tenant have a messuage in his owne occupation at the time of his death, and not otherwise. And upon the death of every tenant dying seised of one or more half-messuage, the summe of twelve pence a-piece for every half-messuage. And upon the death of every tenant dying seised of one or more customary cottages, six pence a-piece for every cottage, for and in lieu of an heriot. And upon the admittance of every tenant to one or more of the said copyhold messuages, for a fine for every messuage two shillings a piece; and for a heriot, the like summe of two shillings a-piece. And upon the admittance of every tenant to one or more half-messuages, twelve pence a piece for a fine, and the like sum of twelve pence for an heriot for every half-messuage. And upon the admittance of every tenant to one or more copyhold cottages, the summe of six pence a-piece for a fine; and six pence a-piece for an heriot for every of the said cottages. And for a fine upon an admittance to every acre of land, of what nature or quality soever it be, four pence, and no more: And so after that rate for every lesser or greater quantity of land. And that all acres of land, of what nature or kind soever, in case any difference arise concerning the content or quantity of the same, shall from henceforth be accounted according to the usuall estimation thereof. And orchards and gardens, woods, nurseries, and plantations, to pay after the rate of land, according to the quantity thereof, and not any other or greater fine.

“ That every husband whose wife is, or at any time during the coverture between them shall be, in the actual possession of any customary messuages, half-messuages, cottages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and shall have any estate of inheritance therein, and shall die seised thereof, they having or having had issue (born alive) between them, in case he survive his said wife, he ought to hold the said messuages, cottages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments whereof she shall so die seised, during his life, as tenant by the courtesie, according to the course of the Common Law of England.

“ That the wife of every copyholder, who is, or shall be at any time during the coverture between them, seised of any messuages, half-messuages, cottages, lands, tenements and hereditaments of such estate therein; whereof the issue between him and his said wife may by possibility inherit: In case she survive her husband, she ought to be endowed (for term of her life) of the said messuages, half-messuages, cottages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, whereof her husband was so seised, in manner following: That is to say, of eighteen pence a year, payable half-yearly, at Michaelmas and Lady-day, for every acre of land, of what nature, kind, or quality soever, in lieu of her thirds; for non-payment whereof she may (by the custome of the mannor) distrain as for a rent-charge at Common Law, and of such part of messuages, half-messuages, and cottages as shall be appointed to her by the homage.

“ That the youngest son of every copy-holder dying seised of any customary messuages, half-messuages, cottages, lands, tenements and hereditaments, ought to inherit the same. And so the youngest son of the youngest son, and the youngest brother, and other youngest of the male line, after the nature of the descent of Borrough-English-Land. But if there be but one son, then that son shall inherit. And if there be daughters and no son, then the daughters shall inherit as coheirs. And if but one daughter, she shall inherit.

“ That when a copy-holder dieth seised of a copy-hold of inheritance, his heires being within the age of fourteen years, the guardian-ship of such heir shall be committed (by the lord or his steward) to the next of kin to the heir that cannot inherit: As in case of tenure of soccage of lands at Common Law: And that such heir is to be and shall be admitted tennant by his guardian. For which admission one fine is to be paid; but no fine payable for admitting the guardian. And that such heir, at his full age of one and twenty years, is to do fealty, which in the mean time is to be respited. And that such guardian is to give security (to be taken by the steward, in the name of the lord) that he shall account to the steward when he shall be required; and answer the profits of the heir's estate to the heir's use. And that such heir ought to be and shall be at liberty, at his age of fourteen years and upwards, to choose another guardian; who shall likewise give security as aforesaid. And that if a guardian die, or become insolvent, before the heir shall attain to the age of fourteen years, the steward shall commit the guardianship of such heir to the then next of kin, as aforesaid, or to some tenant in case of insufficiency in the kindred, and shall take security in manner as before is set down.

"That by the custome of the said mannor the tenants of inheritance may suffer their respective messuages, half-messuages, and cottages, or any of them, or any part of them, or of any of them, to fall down, or may take them down, or remove them, or cause them to be taken down, or otherwise dispose of them, or any part of them, as they shall think fit. And shall and may also dispose of their woods, orchards, gardens, and timber-trees, growing and being, or to be upon their customary lands, to what use they please, without peril or penalty; and without forfeiture of their or any of their copyhold estate, or estates, or any part thereof.

"That in case any copyholder or copyholders, which is, are, or at any time hereafter shall be seised of any customary messuages, half-messuages, cottages, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, held of the lord of the said mannor for and during the term of his, her, or their life or lives onely, or of any estate determinable upon the death of any person or persons whatsoever, shall commit or permit any waste to be done or suffered, in or upon the customary messuages, cottages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, or any part or parcel of them so held, or to be held, by such copyholder or copyholders for life, as aforesaid, by not sufficiently repairing the same, or otherwise: The homage at the lord's courts (from time to time to be holden for the said mannor) ought to present every such copyholder, so committing or permitting waste to be done, by neglect of repair, or otherwise, as is aforesaid; and impose an amercement upon every such copyholder, to enforce him, her, or them thereby to amend and repair such wastes by him, her, or them permitted or committed in and upon the messuages, lands, tenements and hereditaments by him, her, or them held, or to be held, as is aforesaid."

By a decree in the High Court of Chancery exemplified under the Great Seal of England, all the above articles were ordered and adjudged to be for ever inviolably observed and performed, as well on the part and behalf of the defendants their heirs and assigns, lords of the said manor, as on the part and behalf of the complainants, their heirs and assigns, of their copyhold messuages, &c. held of the said manor.

It was also agreed by the tenants that the above articles, together with copies of the bill and answer, and decree, as also a printed book entitled "Isleworth-Syon's Peace," should remain and be kept in the vestry belonging to the Church of Isleworth, in a chest with three locks and keys; one of the keys to be kept by the churchwardens of the parish of Isleworth for the time being; another by the churchwardens of the parish of Twickenham for the time being; and the other by the churchwardens of the parish of Heston for the time being; in trust to and for the only use of the copyhold-tenants of the said manor of Isleworth-Syon, their heirs and assigns. The homage for the court baron was to be held at Michaelmas yearly.<sup>1</sup>

It must be observed, that the description of this manor in Domesday includes Heston and Twickenham, which accounts for its large extent, 70 hides, nearly corresponding with Glover's Survey, which makes the three parishes contain about 6,880 acres, from which, deducting 1,874 acres of waste, there will remain 5,006 acres of cultivated land, not very widely differing from the 55 carucates in Domesday. The present Bailiff of Isleworth manor is Mr. Rhoades.

MANOR OF WYKE.

In the year 1508, Hugh Denys, citizen of London, bequeathed the manor of Wyke,<sup>2</sup> which he had purchased of Robert Cheesman, to the Carthusian Priory of Sheen, charged with certain payments to All Angels' Chapel.<sup>1</sup> The prior and convent of Sheen, by their indenture bearing date 1530, conveyed it to the abbess and convent of Syon,<sup>2</sup> who by their indenture demised the farm of the manor of Wyke, with all lands, meadows, &c. belonging to the same, unto William Arthure and Joan his wife, for term of years, at a rent of 6*l.* 17*s.* 4*d.* per annum.<sup>3</sup> At the dissolution of monasteries it was granted by Henry VIII. to the Marquis of Exeter, on whose attainder it reverted to the Crown, and was given by Edward VI. to the Duke of Somerset.<sup>4</sup> After the Duke's attainder it remained in the Crown till 1557, when it was granted by Queen Mary to Augustin Thaler and Alexander Cheesenall, and the heirs of the former, to be held in fealty by free socage, discharged of all corrodies, pensions, and payments whatsoever, except a rent of 13*l.* 10*s.* 8*d.* reserved by that grant to the Crown.<sup>5</sup> It afterwards came by purchase, as is supposed, to Sir Thomas Gresham, who died seized of it in 1580,<sup>6</sup> having made over the fee simple of this and other manors to his wife. After her death<sup>7</sup> it was inherited by Sir William Read, her son by a former marriage. Sir William's only son, Sir Thomas Read, dying without issue, his estates were inherited by his daughter Anne, who married Sir Michael Stanhope, and left three daughters, co-heirs,—Jane, married to Lord Fitzwalter, and afterwards to Sir William Withipole; Elizabeth, married to George Lord Berkeley; and Bridget, married to George Earl of Desmond; of whom it was purchased in 1638, by Sir William Washington, who mortgaged it in 1640 to Sir Edward Spencer and Sir Richard Wynne. It remained in the possession of the latter, who had before purchased the site of All Angels' Chapel of Edward Ditchfield and others. Sir Richard Wynne died in 1649; his widow in 1669. Maurice Wynne, esquire, his brother, by his will, bearing date 1670, bequeathed the manor of Wyke to his brother Henry, and to Dame Grace, relict of Sir Owen Wynne (also his brother) and their heirs. Mary, daughter of Lady Wynne, was married in 1678 to Robert Lord Willoughby d'Eresby, afterwards Duke of Ancaster; whose son Peregrine, the succeeding Duke, sold this manor in 1724 to Joshua Fletcher. In 1731 it came to John Jacob, and was sold in 1755 by his trustees under his will to Peter Storer, esquire, whose daughter Martha married William Baker, esquire. In 1778 it was purchased of their son Peter William Baker, esquire, by John Robinson, esquire, M. P. who resided upon the estate in a handsome villa which he modernised and improved.<sup>1</sup> After his death it was purchased by the Earl of Jersey.<sup>2</sup> The ancient dwelling-house, it is believed, occupied a moated site contiguous to the farm of Wyke.

Wyke House was formerly the residence of Edward Ellis, esquire, and was recently occupied as a boarding-school under the superintendence of Dr. Jamieson. It is distant from Brentford about one mile towards the north, and is remarkable for its good and well-managed kitchen-garden.

MANOR OF WORTON.

In the year 1375 William Eyston of Isleworth (ancestor of the Eystons of East Hendred, in the county of Berks,) granted to the King (Edw. III.) a messuage called Worton, with the garden adjoining, and 93 acres of land with appurtenances, in the parish of Isleworth.<sup>3</sup> This estate, being called the manor of Worton, was granted by Edward III. to Alice, the widow of Edmund Fauconer, for term of her life, and which it appears William Loveney, esquire, rented of the aforesaid Alice at the annual sum of eight marks; the reversion whereof, after the death of Alice, was granted to him by Henry IV. for term of life, without rendering any rent for the same. After his death it was granted among other lands, &c. by Henry V. to the abbess and convent of Syon Monastery.<sup>1</sup> In some records it is called the manor of Eystons. It is now the property of the Duke of Northumberland.

The site of the chapel of Eystons was at Worton, and the lands supposed to have belonged to it were estimated at 95a. 2r.

The variation of the payment from £2, mentioned in the "Compositio Vicarie de Isleworth,"<sup>2</sup> to 11*l.* 7*s.* 4*d.* will, it is presumed, destroy the effect of the agreement, and leave the vicar to his right to tithes in kind. Supposing that should not be the case, the agreement extends only, as it is apprehended, to such lands as were within the express precinct of Syon Monastery and the 93 acres of the manor of Worton or Eystons. (See the map of the precinct.) Notwithstanding this, all the tenants of the Duke of Northumberland claim an exemption from the payment of tithes to the vicar, although the lands which they hold of his Grace do not appear to be within the precinct described in the deed before mentioned. Moreover, the occupier of Wyke Farm, and also the tenants of lands which are said to be the estate anciently belonging to the Chapel of All Angels, claim the same exemption.

Worton House was some time in the possession of Colonel William Fullarton, M. P. who died in 1808 (see p. 168), and afterwards of his widow, the Hon. Mrs. Fullarton. It is now in the occupation of the Rev. John Keily.

In 1398 Edmund Fauconer died seised of a house and lands in the parishes of Isleworth and Heston, which he held for term of life, under Queen Isabella, by a grant of Edward III. by the service of rendering to the same Queen annually the sum of 18s. 4d. and a suit of court at Isleworth twice a year. 'The value of the premises was £5 per annum, and the tenant was bound to ride among the reapers in the lord's demesnes at Isleworth upon the Bedrepe-day in autumn, with a sparrow-hawk in his hand.' This estate (called Fawkener's Field) is now part of the Child property.

In 1422, Thomas Conyngesby released and quitclaimed for ever for himself and heirs to Thomas Pope, esquire, all right and claim in all his lands and tenements in the hundred of Isleworth, with all edifices, gardens, &c. and all other liberties to the same pertaining, which he lately had conjointly with others his co-tenants by the gift and feoffment of Thomas Eyston, citizen and clothworker of London.*

In 1444, Joan widow of Richard Maydeston, remised and quitclaimed for ever for herself and heirs to Geoffrey Godlok<sup>2</sup> and Elizabeth his wife, their heirs and assigns, all her right, title, &c. to and in all the lands, &c. in Isleworth called Thistleworth, Hounslow, Brentford, and other places in the counties of Middlesex and Hertford.<sup>3</sup>

In 1553 (16 Eliz.) John Payne, esquire, died seised of the manor or capital messuage of Palenswick, &c. in Isleworth, Whitton, Twickenham, Brentford, and Fulham.<sup>4</sup>

In 1582 (25 Eliz.) John Heydon, citizen and alderman of London, died seised of certain lands and a messuage value 6s. 8d. &c. in Isleworth, which he held of the King in capite by knight's service. John Cowse was his next heir.<sup>5</sup>

Ferdinand Earl of Derby, who died in 1594, (36 Eliz.) was seised of a certain rent of 10s. in Isleworth.<sup>6</sup>

CHAPEL AND GUILD OF ALL ANGELS.

In 1446, Henry the Sixth, by letters patent, granted licence to Master John Somerseth<sup>2</sup> to found a certain hospital and fraternity or guild, in a certain chapel likewise founded by him at Brentford-End, in the parish of Isleworth, to be dedicated to the honour of the Nine Orders of Holy Angels,<sup>3</sup> of the tenor following :

"The King, to all to whom, &c. greeting. Know ye, since we have often reflected how kindly and graciously the Almighty Creator, not willing that we should be equal with the heavenly angels, in things sensible or belonging to this life only, yet has made us so in understanding, &c. &c. (A long and almost unintelligible preamble.) We, considering that in our kingdom of England hitherto there exists no record of the foundation, edification, or dedication of chapel or church of All Holy Angels, in anywise befitting the honour of God. But truly, at the suggestion of a very chosen man, as mediator and ordainer, there exists a necessity for the edification, foundation and dedication of a work of this kind.

<sup>2</sup> He was doctor of civil law, chancellor of the exchequer, and also physician to Henry VI. who, in 1429, granted him an annuity of 40*l.* by way of reward, out of the issues of the City of London, during pleasure, also a furred robe and lining, as other royal physicians had been accustomed to have (Addit. MS. No. 4065, art. 8) ; and subsequently, A.D. 1430, a further sum of 40 marks, in consideration of his expenses (Cott. MS. Cleop. F. iv. fol. 49.). In 1432 he was made a Fellow of Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, to which he gave a manor at Swaffham (Hawes's Hist. of Framlingham, p. 212, edit. 1794. Dyer's Hist. of the Univ. and Coll. of Cambridge, vol. ii. p. 97.) He was also a great benefactor to other colleges, and was one of those to whom Hen. VI. gave in trust all the possessions of the alien priories in England (Rot. Pat. 19 Hen. VI. p. 1, m. 39). His name occurs as one of the witnesses to the will of Thomas Duke of Exeter, 29th Dec. 1426 (Testamenta Vetusta, vol. i. p. 240), and in a copy of the will of Hen. VI., dated Mar. 12, 1447, for the foundation of his two colleges at Eton and Cambridge, he is named as appointed feoffee for certain lands, tenements, &c. for that purpose, with several other persons of greater quality. (Thomas of Elmham, Vita et Gestis Henrici Quinti, p. 559.) He died circa 1464. (Echb. 4 Ed. IV. n. 20.)

" And, therefore, whereas our beloved and faithful attendant on our person, Master John Somerseth, chancellor of our exchequer, lately hath newly constructed, erected and built, in honour of God, and of the most blessed Virgin Mary the mother of Christ, and of all the Holy Angels, a certain chapel on a certain ground or soil of ours, containing 220 feet of land in length, and 40 feet of land in breadth, lying at the west end of a certain wooden bridge called New Braynesford Bridge,* in the county of Middlesex, between our present highway, near the new stone bridge which leads from Braynesford aforesaid, towards the village of Houndeslowe, on the north side, and a certain parcel of land of the said Master John Somerseth on the south side, (at the construction of which chapel, We, of our great devotion, with our own hands, and at our charges and expenses, did lay the foundation stone,) piously and devoutly intending, God willing, to found, erect and construct anew a certain hospital for the maintenance of nine poor men, lay and secular, also a certain fraternity or guild in honour of the Nine Orders of Holy Angels in the same hospital, on a certain ground or soil belonging to the same John, which he holds of us contiguous to the aforesaid chapel, supplicating us that we would graciously condescend to grant our royal licence for the finishing and perfecting the premises thus devoutly undertaken and begun. We, deeply considering the premises and the pious and devout affection of the said John, cordially intended in this behalf to God and all Holy Angels, to the supplication of the same John most willingly inclining, to the honour of omnipotent God, and of the glorious Virgin Mary his mother, and of all Holy Angels, of our special grace have granted for us, our heirs and successors, as much as in us is, all that our ground or soil in our late ancient highway, with the water of Braynt and its soil on either side formerly belonging to the ancient wooden bridge, as now by admeasurement and boundary are made manifest to the eye, which are immediately from east to west of our now highway there, and of the new stone bridge, in which ancient * Leland, in his Itinerary (vol. ii. p. l.) speaking of Brentford, says, " There is a bridge over Brent riveret of three arches, and an hospital builded with bricke on the farther side of it." Upon the bed of the river being deepened some time since by the Grand Junction Waterworks Company, the piles of the old wooden bridge were found and drawn out. They were very black, but quite sound. Brent river is now called the Grand Junction Canal.

soil or ancient way aforesaid the chapel at present constructed stands,—to the venerable Fathers in Christ Reginald Bishop of St. Asaph, Nicholas Bishop of Llandaff, Master John Somerseth, chancellor of our exchequer, Master Peter Hynford, Master William Lychefeld, Richard Hakeday esquire, John Coloppe, and Richard Plokyngdon, together with the aforesaid chapel thus newly constructed upon that ground or soil: to have to them, their heirs and assigns, from us, our heirs and successors, in pure and perpetual alms for ever, without anything to us, our heirs and successors, thereof to be rendered. And moreover we have granted for us, our heirs and successors, to the aforesaid Reginald, Nicholas, Master John Somerseth, Peter, William, Richard Hakeday, John Coloppe, and Richard Plokyngdon, as much as in us is, that they or any two or three of them, their executors or assigns, may make, found, erect, create, unite and establish anew, in the hospital and chapel aforesaid, a certain fraternity or perpetual guild of one master, and brothers and sisters of the same, as well from themselves, as from others, who of their devotion desire to be of the same fraternity or guild. And that such fraternity or guild, when so made, founded, erected, created and established, shall be named and called "The Fraternity or Guild of the Nine Orders of Holy Angels near Syon," for ever. And that the same master, brothers and sisters, may augment the same fraternity or guild from time to time, when and so often as it shall to them seem to be necessary and convenient. And that the aforesaid brothers and sisters of the fraternity or guild aforesaid, or the greater part of them, and their successors, shall meet annually, to wit, on the feast of St. Michael the Archangel, or on the morrow of the same, within the said hospital or chapel, to proceed to the ordaining and electing a person from among themselves, the most discreet, fitting, devout, politic, and having a clear conscience, for the ruling and governing rightly and honestly in all things the same fraternity or guild, and whatsoever to the same thenceforth in future may pertain, for one entire year; who, thus elected, immediately after the same election shall make his corporal oath before the brothers and sisters who shall happen to be present at his election, to rule and govern the same fraternity or guild with divine worship of a priest, a clerk, with the nine poor men, two servitors, and all thereto belonging rightly and honestly, for one entire year from the same feast; and that, in case the master so elected for the whatsoever government and rule of the said fraternity or guild shall happen to cease or be removed, or by any other lawful causes within the same year the masters and sisters of the said fraternity or guild, or at least the greater part of them as aforesaid, shall, as soon as they can, proceed to ordain and elect as is before mentioned, without the licence of us, our heirs or successors, or any other person whatsoever, another person for master of the same fraternity or guild, discreet, fitting, devout, politic, and having a sound conscience as is aforesaid, in the place of the said master so resigning, decreasing, or removed; who thus elected shall take his corporal oath before the brothers and sisters aforesaid, rightly and faithfully to govern and rule the same fraternity or guild in that office for the residue of that year inclusive; and thus when so often as there shall be occasion, or it shall seem necessary to the brothers and sisters and their successors. And moreover, we have granted for us, our heirs and successors aforesaid, that the same master, brothers and sisters of the said fraternity or guild, when thus founded, erected, united, created and established, shall be in deed and name one body and one perpetual community, and that they shall have perpetual succession. And that they and their successors shall be called "The Master, Brothers and Sisters of the Fraternity or Guild of the Nine Orders of Holy Angels near Nyon," for ever. And that they and their successors, by and under the name of the master, brothers and sisters of the aforesaid fraternity or guild, shall be persons able and capable in law perpetually to obtain, receive and purchase lands, tenements, rents and services whatsoever, as well from us, our heirs and successors, as from others whomsoever, although they may hold immediately of us or our heirs by knight service, or by any other way whatsoever. To have and to hold to the same master, brothers and sisters of the fraternity or guild aforesaid, and their successors for ever, the statute declared concerning lands and tenements not to be bestowed in mortmain notwithstanding. And that the same master, brothers and sisters, and their successors, shall for ever have one common seal to be kept for their business causes and deeds. And moreover, that they and their successors aforesaid may plead and be impleaded by the name aforesaid, and prosecute and defend all manner of causes, complaints and actions, real, personal, and mixed, of whatsoever kind or nature they be, and that they may answer to them and be answered in them under the name aforesaid, before us, our heirs or successors, as also before our judges and justices secular and ecclesiastical whatsoever. We have moreover granted and given licence for us, our heirs and successors, as much as in us is, to the aforesaid master, brothers and sisters, that they and their successors may purchase in fee and perpetuity lands, tenements, rents, services, and other possessions whatsoever, of the value of 40*l.* per annum, although they may be held of us in chief as of others, by whatsoever service, beyond the ground or soil aforesaid, from whatsoever persons who shall be willing to give, grant or assign those things to them, for the maintenance of a chaplain in the chapel aforesaid, for the celebrating divine service for our wholesome estate and that of our dear consort Margaret Queen of England, so long as we shall live, and for the wholesome estate of the aforesaid Reginald, Nicholas, John Somerseth, Peter, William, Richard Hakeday, John Coloppe, and Richard Plokyndon, so long as they shall live, and for our soul and the soul of our said consort when we shall have departed this life; also for the souls of the aforesaid Reginald, Nicholas, John, Peter, William, Richard, John and Richard, when they shall have departed this life; and for the souls of all the faithful deceased, for ever. And for one clerk in like manner in the same chapel, to be kept for divine service, and for the said chaplain and nine poor weak and impotent men, to wit, blind, lame, decayed, weak and impotent; also for two diligent sober servants, who are to minister to the same nine poor men in the aforesaid hospital for ever, according to the ordinances and statutes of the aforesaid Reginald, Nicholas, John Somerseth, Peter, William, Richard Hakeday, John Coloppe, and Richard Plokyndon, three or two of them, in this behalf to be done. And for the same master, brothers and sisters, that they may have and hold to themselves and their successors for ever, lands, tenements, rents and services, of the annual value abovesaid, beyond reprises, from whatsoever persons willing to give, grant or assign to them from the cause aforesaid. To have and to hold to the same master, brothers, and their successors for ever, without let or hindrance of us, our heirs or successors, (a return according to custom being found, that it may be done without injury or prejudice of us, our heirs or successors or others whomsoever,) without any fee of seal, great or small, or fine whatsoever, to us, our heirs or successors, or to the use of us, our heirs and successors, to be rendered, paid or done, for the

in the said county of Middlesex. And being so seised thereof, granted the same, (as appears by a deed to them exhibited, dated at Isleworth, 22nd July, 31 Henry VI.), to Thomas Kirkby, then Master of the Rolls, and William Bredon, who by virtue of the same being seised thereof, did by their deed, also exhibited to the said jurors, bearing date the 10th July, 37 Hen. VI. demise and confirm the same to Richard Plokyndon and his heirs for ever; who by virtue of the same feoffment being seised in his demesne as of fee, did by a certain deed, in like manner exhibited to the jurors, bearing date the 21st September, 2 Edw. IV. grant and confirm the same to Philip Malpas and others, and their heirs for ever, by virtue of which they were and are at present seised thereof in their demesne as of fee. The jurors likewise say, that the aforesaid capital messuage, manor and lands, with appurtenances, are worth in all 15*l*. without reprises. The jurors further say, that the aforesaid capital messuage and the manor of Osterley, with appurtenances; also fifteen messuages, 340½ acres and one rood of pasture, 25½ acres of wood, with appurtenances in the hundred of Isleworth; also 115 acres of land, five acres of meadow, and ten acres of pasture, and ten acres of wood, with appurtenances in Heston, are held of the abbess of the monastery of St. Saviour of Syon,<sup>1</sup> who held the same immediately of the King in chief in frankalmoigne, by the service of 21*s*. per annum for all services.<sup>2</sup>

In the year 1508, Hugh Denys, esquire, died seised of the manors of Osterley, Wyke, Portpool alias Gray's Inn, Allcotts (not now known), and other lands and tenements in the county of Middlesex, and by his will bequeathed them to the Carthusian Priory of Sheen, charged with certain payments for the purpose of augmenting this institution by building additional houses for seven poor men, and to found a chantry for two honest secular priests, thenceforth to be the Church of St. Mary and St. John, and All Saints' Church, &c.

For the more convenience of the same almshouse, and in consideration that the Church of All Angels and Almshouse, the vicarage and rectory of the parishes were within the precincts of the monastery adjoining to Spau Monastery, the vicar and the monks and within the liberties of the same monastery, and therefore more likely to be kept in good order, the said government, according to the above-mentioned will, to the said vicar and his officers: the poor and convent of Chesham, by their indenture, bearing date 10th March, 1534, conveyed them, subject to the same payment, to Spau Monastery, at the yearly rent of 20*l*. According to this deed, the vicars were obliged to reside upon the spot, and not allowed to hold any other benefice. Their curacy was their houses, and manor, and fuel: the poor were 100, and a year of the value of 4*l*. every year on the feast of All Saints. The vicars were to celebrate masses daily, for the souls of King Henry VII., Henry VIII., Master John Somerseth, the said Hugh Denys and Mary his wife, their friends and benefactors, and for all christian souls.

In 1534 the revenues of All Angels' Chapel, as parcel of Spau Monastery, amounted in all to 33*l*. 12*s*. 6*d*.; and the annual fee paid to John Pilkington, bailiff of the lands belonging to the same chapel, was 13*s*. 4*d*.

These lands, which were estimated at 135 acres, were bounded on the north by Hauxwell Warren, on the north-east by the vicar's lands, on the south they extended a little beyond the Chesham Vicarage Road, and on the south-west there were only a few scattered lands west of the road leading to Osterley.

By the dissolution of Spau Monastery, this chapel fell into the hands of the Crown, and so continued until the reign of Edward VI. who, in 1547, granted (inter alia) the vicarage and the woods and advowsons belonging to the vicarage and the Duke of Somerset, his heirs and assigns (vol. 10, p. 160. The Chapel of All Angels, with all the possessions appertaining to the same, above 20*s.* for the collector's stipend, was of the yearly value of 26*l.* 16*s.* 11*d.*, whereof was reserved the yearly rent of 2*l.* 3*s.* 7*d.* paid into the Court of Augmentations, thereby making the clear yearly value 26*l.* 13*s.* 1*d.*<sup>1</sup> On the Duke's attainder and execution in 1552, it again reverted to the Crown.

wards to remain to the use of the charity-school of the parish of Isleworth for ever. Elizabeth Huggins, the survivor, died in the course of the year 1794; but, the bequest being contrary to the statute of Mortmain, it became null and void.

There were no vestiges of All Angels' Chapel remaining, when Moses Glover made his survey in 1685. A mansion on or very near the site, was the residence of Sir William Noy, Attorney General to Charles I. who lies buried at Brentford. The same house had been the residence of Thomas Viscount Savage, and is called "the Sprots" in ancient records.<sup>1</sup>

Among other residents of distinction and interest within the parish of Isleworth in former times, the following may be enumerated:

Sir Richard Wynne<sup>2</sup> resided in a house near the façade which leads to Syon House, afterwards the property and residence of Sir Nathaniel Duckenfield, Bart.<sup>3</sup> Sir Francis Darcy (Sir Richard Wynne's father-in-law) lived in an adjoining house.<sup>3</sup>

"It'm in Cur' tent' apud Istylworth Walterus Sprott admissus erat ad duas acr' terr' post mortem Joh'is Sprott fr'is ejus, et in eadem Cur' idem Walterus eorum redd' predictas duas acr' ad opus David Smyth et Johanne uxoris ejus."

It is therefore very probable that this house was called "the Sprots," after the name of that family: unfortunately no date is affixed to the MS.

<sup>2</sup> Sir Richard Wynne married Anne, daughter and co-heiress of Sir Francis Darcy, of Isleworth. He was gentleman of the Privy Chamber to Charles I. when Prince of Wales, and attended him in his romantic journey into Spain to visit his intended consort; of this journey he drew up a very interesting narrative, which is printed by Hearne, at the end of his Historia Ricardi II. 8vo. 1729, and from which several extracts will be found in Nichols's Progresses, &c. of King James I. On the accession of Charles to the throne, Sir Richard was appointed Treasurer to the Queen. He died in 1649, in the Manor-house of Wimbledon, which he held as trustee for his Royal mistress. The title became extinct in 1719. Courthope's Ext. Baronets, p. 223.

after the Restoration. At last, he was told by one Rogers<sup>1</sup> of Isleworth, that both the father and son were dead, but that the son's widow was living at Isleworth, and had many of their works. The King went privately and unknown with Rogers to see them. The widow showed several finished and unfinished, with many of which the King being pleased, asked if she would sell them: she replied, she had a mind the King should see them first, and if he did not purchase them, she should think of disposing of them. The King discovered himself, on which she produced some more pictures, which she seldom showed. The King desired her to set her price; she said, she did not care to make a price with his Majesty, she would leave it to him; but promised to look over her husband's books, and let his Majesty know what prices the late King his father had paid. The King took away what he liked, and sent Rogers to Mrs. Oliver, with the option of 1,000*l.* or an annuity of 300*l.* for her life; she chose the latter. Some years afterwards, it happened that the King's mistresses having begged all or most of these pictures, Mrs. Oliver, who was probably a prude, and apt to express herself like a prude, said, on hearing it, that if she had thought the King would have given them to such whores and strumpets, and bastards, he never should have had them. This reached the court, the poor woman's salary was stopped, and she never received it afterwards."

F. Willis, a grammarian and author of a Latin Dictionary, was 50 years a schoolmaster at Isleworth.<sup>3</sup>

Mrs. Middleton, frequently mentioned in the "Memoires de Grammont," also resided here.

Henry Jenkins, a man of the meanest education, but who, under every disadvantage of circumstances and society, became one of the best astronomical calculators of his age, dence of Benjamin Angell, Esq. since whose death it has been in the possession of Charles Allen, Esq. a reversionary legatee of the last named gentleman, and several other families for short periods.

The house called SILVER HALL (recently a school) was situated on the south side of the Twickenham road, and was built by John Smith, Esq. created a baronet 20th Ap. 1694.<sup>1</sup> His arms were over the piers of the gate: quarterly, 1 and 4, Az. a lion rampant Or, on a chief Arg. a mullet Gu. between two Torteauxes,—Smith; 2 and 3, Gules, two chevrons within a border Arg.—Deane; impaling, quarterly, 1 and 4, a fesse engrailed, in chief three fleurs de lis,—Eyles; 2 and 3, a bend engrailed between six lions rampant. After Sir John Smith's death it was in the occupation of Lady Harcourt, widow of the Chancellor. It was afterwards the property of Mrs. Oliver, whose maiden name was Silver, mother of Silver Oliver, Esq. from whom it took its name. The house was taken down and sold piece-meal in the years 1801 and 1802; in the latter year three men were killed on the site, by the falling in of a cellar.—The Silver Hall estate, after going through various hands, was in the possession of the late Joseph Dixon, Esq. who resided in an elegant mansion adjoining, now in the occupation of James Bennett, Esq. The estate consists of 4½ acres of freehold land, of very superior quality, surrounded by lofty walling, and containing brick earth. It has lately (1839) been sold in seven different lots.

On the north side of the road leading from Twickenham to London, formerly stood KENDALL HOUSE, so called from being the residence of the Duchess of Kendall, mistress to George I. After her death it was opened as a public breakfasting house. In the Daily Advertiser of April 4, 1750, the <sup>1</sup> He was created a Baronet for having advanced several sums of money towards carrying on the war with France, and was one of the gentlemen of the privy chamber to King William and to Queen Anne. branching off in two directions leads to the drawing-room and ante-rooms, fitted up in an admirable style. The windows command the most beautiful views of Richmond bridge and the celebrated hill, the Thames throughout its course from Richmond to Kew, the pagoda and observatory in Kew gardens (a vista directly facing this mansion having been expressly ordered to be made by his late majesty King William the Fourth, by felling some intervening trees on the margin of those grounds), Isleworth with its two ferries, the church with its "ivy mantled tower," and the wooded ground of Syon, with a glimpse of that noble mansion. The poor of the neighbourhood speak in glowing terms of the innumerable acts of kindness and charity which they experience from the liberal possessor of Isleworth House.

The road to Richmond, which passes Isleworth House, used, before the alterations made by Sir William Cooper in 1833, to run between that house and the Thames, and Burkitt's wharf opened into it. Near this wharf was a handsome house, the property of John Thackrah, Esq. and immediately adjoining, another, the residence of Richard Twining, Esq. In a line with Isleworth House, and a very short distance from where the stables now stand, was a villa in which David Vanderhaydon, Esq. resided, and there were three or four smaller houses on each side of the road. These were all purchased and pulled down twenty or thirty years ago by the late Mrs. Franks, who resided here; and, with the old road, their sites now form part of the pleasure grounds of this elegant mansion. It is said, that near the spot now occupied by the building, stood the ancient manor house, which belonged to Richard Earl of Cornwall, and King of the Romans.

The house, the property and residence of Mrs. Gotobed, near the principal entrance of Syon Park, built in 1592, and shortly after conveyed to Sir Francis Darcy, Knt. was afterwards occupied by the dowager Duchess of Northumberland, who died there. It is now in the possession of Messrs. Janssen and William Parsons, architects.

Also near the same entrance to Syon Lodge, an establishment for young ladies, connected by the Mares Lane.

Further to the north, and near to Bulls-Head ferry, is Syon House, formerly the residence of General Bland, afterwards of James Fortescue, Esq. then of Lord James Hay. It is now in the possession of Lord and Lady Frederick Grosvenor. The grounds and ornamental grounds attached to this mansion were laid out in a tasteful manner, after the French style, with many and choice trees meeting the eye at every turn. The avenue leading to the Thames contained a row of Elms on the right, and on the left an avenue composed of the tree in its progress towards Syon House. The house and grounds are beautiful, and the principal object is a building of great magnitude, composed of the same white marble, which is the centre of four gravel walks. The house is a truly a most interesting object, and the residence of the Duke of Devonshire has been formed under the superintendence of the late King William the Fourth, who resided in it some a comparative winter. His Majesty purchased the mansion for the sum of eight thousand pounds, and presented it to his daughter, then Lady Kensington. It is a fine house, and is the most noble in the county.

The house was a fine mansion adjoining the above mansion, and about 1751 Mr. Lane, young justice of the peace, bought it with Garrick, at the site of a former house, purchased of a Mrs. Smith. Mr. Lane was succeeded by his son, whose liberal but thoughtless hospitality was fatal to his fortune. This house was sold to the Hon. Mr. Arthur Walspole, K. B.; who, on his death, in 1784, bequeathed it to his eldest illegitimate daughter, the Hon. Mrs. Anne Walspole, the Bishop of Exeter. She resided here for many years, and it was afterwards in the occupation of the Earl of Warwick; Richard Brinsley Sheridan, Esq.; and Miss Morgan. The house has been pulled down for some years, but the estate belongs to the Marquess of Ailsa.

ST. MARGARET'S, the seat of the Marquess of Ailsa, and its extensive grounds, known by the name of Twickenham Park, next meet the view. In this park was an ancient mansion, once the residence of Sir Francis Bacon, who here passed many of his happiest days in the pursuits of science.* It was here that he entertained Queen Elizabeth, and presented her with the well known sonnet in praise of the Earl of Essex.† After Sir Francis sold the estate, it passed through various hands, till, being divided into lots, and put up to sale, the greater part was purchased by Francis Gosling, Esq. who pulled down the whole mansion, and attached a considerable part of the grounds to St. Margaret's. After his death, it became by purchase the property of Joseph Todd, Esq. who subsequently sold the mansion and a considerable quantity of ground to the Marquess of Ailsa.

This beautiful spot owes its present appearance and arrangement to its noble proprietor, who has displayed great judgment in forming out of the old buildings the delightful residence which adorns Twickenham Park, and embellishes the view down the river from Richmond, whence it is seen to great advantage. In the interior distribution and fitting up, this villa vies in elegance with any in the kingdom. The principal apartments are adorned with valuable paintings by the old masters, and enjoy a charming view up the river to Richmond Bridge, surmounted by the hill, gemmed with villas rising from luxuriant groves to the very summit. A terrace walk extends along the water to a pleasing octagon pavilion, from which Isleworth, with its ivied church, backed by the rich woods of Syon, appears to great advantage.

HEDDON HOUSE, in the road to Twickenham, formerly belonged to Mrs. Heddon, from whom it takes its name. It was bequeathed by her to the family of Colonel Clitherow; was then purchased by Matthew Stainton, Esq.; and is now the property of William Day, Esq. who has let it for a term of years to W. H. Story, Esq. In the garden of this house there is a remarkably fine tulip tree.

Immediately adjoining the above is a large and commodious house, occupied as a school by Henry Dixon, Esq.

At the back of the grounds of Worton House is WORTON HALL, formerly occupied by the Rev. Edward Scott, D.D. and late the property of Henry Cerf, Esq. who for some years has resided at Brussels. This estate, occupying altogether thirteen acres, and commanding views of Richmond Hill and the surrounding beautiful and highly picturesque scenery, was recently sold to W. H. Story, Esq. for the sum of 2,400 guineas. The house and grounds are held of the Duke of Northumberland as lord of the manor of Isleworth-Syon, upon the payment of certain small fines, and a charge of small land-tax. The gardens contain some splendid cedars, American plants, and shrubs.

Adjoining Worton House is WORTON LODGE, in the occupation of George Glenny, Esq.

DAIRY FARM HOUSE, now in the occupation of John Farnell, Esq. formerly the residence of Lady Twysden, and afterwards of Lady Boyd, is delightfully situated near the mill, and, though close to the village, is completely secluded.

The house now occupied by James Bennett, Esq. in North-street, close to the high road, was once inhabited by Richard Brinsley Sheridan, Esq. who lived there upwards of a year. In the garden is a remarkably fine elm, composed of three stems, separating about a foot above the ground, and called the "Three Sisters;" one of the stems was broken down half way by a severe gale June 11th, 1833. There is another elm of great size in a paddock belonging to Richard Hope, Esq. The house belonging to the latter gentleman was the abode of Lord Byron in his youthful days. In the garden is a very handsome golden cedar.

Adjoining Mr. Bennett's house is SOMERSET COTTAGE, the retired abode of the Rt. Hon. Lady Frances Allen, adorned with some very valuable paintings by different masters.

The cottage now occupied by George Field, Esq. called MARLBOROUGH COTTAGE, was built by the late Duchess of Marlborough as a place of occasional retirement. The walls of the principal rooms are decorated with the best engravings that could be purchased in her day. They are in an excellent state of preservation.

ALBEMARLE HOUSE, formerly called Ebdon House, situated in that part of Hounslow in the parish of Isleworth, is the property of the Rev. Joseph Benson, D.D. Perpetual Curate of Hounslow Chapel.

LOCAL OCCURRENCES.

Of the local occurrences connected with the general history of the country, the following may be noticed.

In 1263, Simon de Montfort with the refractory Barons pitched their tents in Isleworth or Thistleworth Park.<sup>1</sup>

On the 3rd and 4th of August, 1647, General Fairfax fixed his head-quarters at Isleworth for a few days.<sup>2</sup> On the 4th he received here the Parliamentary Commission, to whom "his Excellency and the Council of War propounded a way, that the Parliament might be secure from force and violence; and fears and jealousies be removed between the city and the army."<sup>3</sup>

At the famous contested Election for Middlesex in 1802, when William Mainwaring, Esq. Sir Francis Burdett, Bart. and George Byng, Esq. were the candidates, considerable attention was directed to this parish, in consequence of the following circumstances.

Mr. Mainwaring, the unsuccessful candidate, presented a petition<sup>1</sup> to the House of Commons, stating that Sir William Rawlins, Knt. and Robert Albion Cox, Esq. the Sheriff of the county and returning officer, wilfully, knowingly, and corruptly did admit to poll for Sir Francis Burdett, Bart. upwards of 300 persons, claiming to vote under a fictitious vote, as proprietors of a mill, purported to be situated in the parish of Isleworth, and called "the Good Intent Mill," by which means a colourable majority was obtained in favour of Sir Francis Burdett, whereas the petitioner had the legal majority, and ought to have been returned.* It appeared that in the months of May and June 1801, certain inhabitants of Isleworth formed themselves into a society, called "the Good Intent Society," the purpose of which was to grind corn at a cheap rate for their own use; their number was not above four or five, till the 11th June, when a meeting was held, and the 27th July fixed to be the day when their subscriptions should commence. These subscriptions, however, were not regularly made, or entered in their books, till the 4th Aug. at which time the society consisted of between eighty and ninety persons, who held among them 120 or 130 shares; the plan was to have 1002 shares, when the society should be complete.

On the 24th Aug. 1801, a memorandum of an agreement was drawn up between Richard Friday and "the inspectors of the Good Intent Society, on the behalf of the said society," by which Friday agreed to sell a certain piece of freehold land in Isleworth, with three houses standing thereon, to the said society for £360. This agreement was signed by Friday and eleven inspectors, of whom Albion Cooper was one.

society, eleven of whom had been parties to the former agreement, wherehy it was recited, that by certain rules and articles, bearing date 27th July 1801, made and entered into between the said persons and many others, a society had been agreed to be formed, called "the Good Intent," for the purpose of supplying the subscribers with bread and flour at their own houses, at prime cost; that it was necessary for that purpose to erect a mill; and that the purchase of the above-mentioned piece of land, &c. from Friday had already been contracted for; and that it was agreed that Friday, in consideration of £360 paid or secured to him, should sell and convey the premises to the said fifteen persons, and should clear away the ballast, so that a barge might moor close to the said ground. The piece of ground thus contracted for was about 90 feet long, and 45 feet wide; the three cottages, which then stood upon it, were in the occupation of yearly tenants, at the rent of six guineas each. By Friday's advice, the rent from Midsummer was given up by the society to the tenants, in consideration of their quitting at Michaelmas. Upon the premises becoming vacant, the society caused two of the cottages to be pulled down, and began to erect a mill, which, however, at the time of the election was far from being finished, being not yet covered in; so that no profit whatever had at that time accrued to the society, either from the mill, or from the land. Friday himself was the treasurer of the society from 20 Aug. 1801. On the 28th Sept. he received £100 in part payment of the consideration for the sale; a short time before the election he received £50 more; and soon after the election was finished, he received the remainder of the £360. The conveyance was made some time in the year 1803.

On the 13th July 1802, (the first day of the election) the number of subscribers was between 2 and 300; from the 27th to the 30th no fewer than 200 persons, being for the most part labourers and mechanics, entered their names as subscribers. A new member paid 2s. 6d. upon his admission, and 1s. per week afterwards for 42 weeks. Some of the persons admitted on the 27th and two following days, paid their entrance money, and at the same time advanced their payment for the 42 weeks at once; others paid for their admission, and 1s. only for the current week. Seven and eight subscribers voted for the sitting member on the 27th, and a very large number on the 28th, many of whom had been admitted only the day before; on the 29th not above 13; but several more presented themselves to vote on that day, and, being told that they had no vote, retired.

Albion Cooper, on the 13th day of the poll, 27th July, 1802, was the first person who tendered his vote for the sitting member, for his property as a member of the society which has been described. He was objected to by the assessor who attended on the part of the petitioner, and was carried round to the Sheriffs' box. Here a witness, in the presence of the Sheriffs and of the voter, gave an account of the constitution of the society, the number and nature of the shares, the present state of the mill, and that possession of the land had been delivered on the 27th July 1801. Cooper, on his examination before the Sheriffs, stated that he was possessed of two shares in the concern; that he had been in possession of them for more than twelve months, having been one of the original projectors of the plan; and the possession of the premises having been given to the society, as from Midsummer 1801; and that, although he had received no profits from them as yet, he would not part with either of them for 40s. per annum. Upon being examined as to the nature of those profits, he stated that he expected to have for each share four quartern loaves per week, at two-thirds of the market price,—the price of a quartern loaf at that time was 9d. The counsel for Mr. Mainwaring argued against his right to vote; first, upon the ground of a want of possession for twelve months; secondly, of a want of sufficient value; thirdly, that the voter was not assessed. And their arguments were controverted on the other side. Sir W. R.

on being requested by Mr. Mainwaring's counsel to reject Cooper's vote, after consulting with his Under Sheriff, refused to do so, alleging that, although his opinion was that Cooper had no right to vote, the Sheriff was only ministerial, and could not refuse either to receive the vote, or to administer the oath, if the voter was willing to take it, and insisted upon voting; that, nevertheless, he would admonish the voter of his duty, which he accordingly did. Cooper retired for half an hour, and then returned and took the oath, and his vote was admitted. The argument upon his right lasted for nearly four hours. Another person, who was said to have been admitted the night before, coming to vote the next day for a similar share, was objected to, for want of possession, and as coming within the Statute of Will. III. against splitting tenements; but the Sheriffs refused to hear any more arguments, alleging that the whole subject had already been thoroughly discussed; and from that time no questions were permitted to be asked the voters concerning the length of their possession, till on the last day of election, when the question was put to several, whether they had been in possession twelve months; upon their answering they had not, one of the Sheriffs (Sir W. R.) informed them that they could not vote, and, in consequence, they did not.*

On the 11th March 1805, the House came to the following resolution: "That the said Robert Albion Cox and Sir William Rawlins, Knt. by their conduct and practices at the said election, acted in violation of their duty, contrary to law, and in breach of the privileges of this House." And it was ordered, that they should be committed to Newgate, where they remained for two months, being discharged on the 11th May following, after receiving a severe reprimand from the Speaker.

* It was afterwards determined by the Committee that the vote of Albion Cooper was bad. Further evidence to the same purpose, was given on the vote of Thomas Durrant, the second mill voter; the votes of the rest were also struck off on the same ground.—See Peckwell's Election Cases for Middlesex, vol. ii. pt. 1, p. 1—29; and Journals of House of Commons, vol. ix.

In 1803, when the preparations for invading Britain by Bonaparte called forth the loyalty and patriotism of all classes, the inhabitants of Isleworth formed themselves into an association called "The Isleworth Loyal Volunteers." J. Thackrah, Esq. Captain; William Stanbrough, Junior, 1st Lieutenant; Charles Augustus Edwards, 2nd Lieutenant; and Richard Friday, Ensign; Serjeant Major, Thomas Campbell. This association was disbanded when the motive for its existence was no longer felt. The colours presented by the Hon. Mrs. Keppel are still preserved in the church.

Among the occurrences of recent date in the village of Isleworth, perhaps there is not one more worthy of being recorded than the loyal reception given to his late Majesty King William the Fourth, on Tuesday the 31st of July 1832, the anniversary of the accession of the House of Brunswick to the British throne, when he paid his first visit to Syon. At that period, owing to the excited state of the country on the subject of the "Reform Bill," both the King and Queen had been grossly insulted in several places between London and Windsor; but as soon as it became known that their Majesties were expected to pass through Isleworth on their way to Syon, a meeting of the inhabitants was held at the Phoenix Inn, and an unanimous desire was expressed that a strong contrast should be shown to the disloyalty manifested elsewhere. A liberal subscription was immediately entered into, and it was resolved to present addresses to both the King and Queen on the occasion. At the entrance to the square a very handsome triumphal arch, composed of evergreens, intermixed with flowers, &c. was erected, another at the eastern extremity of the square, and a third at the opening of the Thames by the church terrace. Every window and door was adorned with flowers, ribbons, loyal banners, &c. and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed through the whole village. A dinner was provided in the square for 500 poor children, and 600 others had cakes and buns given them. A rowing match for a handsome new wherry, named

"The Royal William and Adelaide," took place on the Thames, and a steam-boat and two bands were in attendance. His Majesty arrived at four o'clock, and at six o'clock, attended by the Duchess of Gloucester, the Duke and Duchess of Cumberland, the Duke of Wellington, &c. &c. appeared at the windows of the Pavilion to witness the grand heat for the wherry. At the termination of the match, a deputation, consisting of the Rev. H. Glossop, vicar, the Rev. W. H. Parker, curate, Mr. Gee, and Mr. Day, presented the addresses to His Majesty. They were most graciously received, and His Majesty, after expressing his regret that the Queen was not present to enjoy the splendid scene (her Majesty being slightly indisposed), declared he never should forget his enthusiastic reception at Isleworth, for which he was quite unprepared, and concluded by remarking that he could not wonder at the loyalty, good feeling, and liberality displayed by the inhabitants when they had so noble an example in their neighbour the Duke of Northumberland. The banquet was served on gold in the hall of verde-antique columns; and twenty persons composed the royal party. In the grand dining room were accommodated the remainder of the visitors. After dark there was a discharge of fire-works on the lawn, answered by rockets, &c. from the steam-boat, which was illuminated, as were the triumphal arches and most of the houses in the village.

Another grand entertainment was given by the Duke and Duchess of Northumberland to their Majesties William IV. and Queen Adelaide, and many of the royal family, on the 10th of June, 1833. On this occasion a purse of sovereigns, given by his Grace the Duke of Northumberland, was contended for by nine watermen of Isleworth, Twickenham, and Richmond, three from each place. A steam-boat, provided for the accommodation of the ladies and gentlemen of Isleworth, was stationed facing the pavilion; and previously to

RULE OF ST. SAVIOUR.

HUMILITY, chastity, and voluntary poverty to be the commencement of this order. To possess nothing of their own, nor touch with their hands either gold or silver, unless for works of embroidery, without advice and licence of the abbess. The sisters were daily, in reverence of the Virgin Mary, solemnly to sing her Hours, together with three lessons, as well on feast as private days. Scurrilous and idle words to be wholly avoided in all places and at all times. No secular person, male or female, to enter the monastery. Fast on the proper food from Advent to Christmas. Friday before Lent till Easter on common food. Holy-rod day till Michaelmas, fish and white-meats. All-Saints to Advent, same. On particular days, only bread and water. On all other days of the year, flesh on Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday; but for supper on those days, fish and white-meat. On Wednesdays, fish and white-meats. On Fridays throughout the year, lenten food. On Saturdays, fish and white-meats. All other fast-days according to the statutes of the Church. Persons requesting admission to be sent away successively, first, for three months, then to return, and be asked whether she continued in the same mind; the like after a longer lapse; then the rule to be proposed, its difficulties and severities, contempt of the world, forgetfulness of parents. After consecration by the bishop, her hair to be cut off by the abbess. Confession three times a year at least by the nuns, though one of the priests was every day ready to hear it. On evenings preceding the greater feasts, fasting on bread and water. Communion on Easter-day, Ascension, Pentecost, and Christmas; but those whom God had inspired with greater devotion might, with advice of the confessor, communicate every Sabbath. Chapter held every Thursday, when all offences were corrected. A sick sister owning to property was absolved by the confessor, and did penance when convalescent. One in health who did not confess it, and was convicted before three witnesses, on the first day of the chapter, was allowanced like the other sisters, but on the next Friday had bread and water. On those days she was not to enter the church, but during Divine service was to remain in the church-yard without speaking to any one, prostrating herself at the feet of all coming out of the church. Vespers being said on the Friday, and the convent going out in due order, the abbess raised her from the ground, and led her by the hand to the altar in the sisters' choir, the convent interceded for her, where, being absolved by the confessor, she (being without the gate,) returned to her place. If, however, any one died, being guilty of having property, and had not confessed it, her body being washed and placed in a coffin, was carried to the gates of the church, where the abbess (the convent being present) pronounced a denunciation of the crime. An Ave Maria was said by all, and she was absolved by the confessor. The body was then placed in the sisters' choir, and towards the end of the Mass carried by the sisters to the gate of the church, which being opened, the brothers entered, carried away the body, and buried it in due form. Neither the abbess or nuns allowed to receive gifts or jewels, or any property whatsoever, from their parents or friends. No monastery to be inhabited till fully built, and they could peaceably and quietly live there. No fewer sisters or priests to be received than were necessary for divine service, and the number to be afterwards completed. Those who entered the house after the first foundation to bring with them sufficient for their maintenance in good and bad times; and when the number was full, and they had revenues enough to furnish allowances of meat and drink annually, no more necessary to be brought in. The vestments of the dead and her daily provision given to the poor, until another was elected in her place. Annually, before the feast of All Saints, a computation was made of the value of the provisions for the next year, and the surplus of money or food given to the poor on the feast of All Souls; and for this reason, no visitors were allowed. Deductions were, however, made from this, in case of apparent necessity, for the ensuing year; but as far only as was actually necessary. Old clothes given to the poor. Abbess not to cause unnecessary or splendid buildings to be erected. Presents at admission not to be of permanent revenues; but that they might not come with empty hands before God, it was fit to offer something. Such presents not to be converted to private use, but bestowed on the poor and poor churches; exception in case of necessity. Inquiry to be made whether these gifts were honestly obtained: if not, rejected, provided the convent had no need of them. Extreme poor received gratis. There were to be thirteen altars in the church; a chalice for each altar, and two for the high altar, with two vessels for wine alike, and two candelabra alike; also one cross, and three censers, one for daily use, and the other two for feast-days; and a pix for the body of Christ. Each altar was to have two suits of furniture, one for festivals and the other for week days. It was lawful for them to have relics of saints wrought in gold, or silver, or gems, according to their proportion, without any superfluity. Also books necessary for the performance of divine service, but of no other kind, unless for learning or study. Manual labour at times not devoted to divine service or reading, and the fruits of such labour given to the poor. Disciplines rejected and reprobated. Same portion of meat and drink. The sisters to make their confessions at the windows or iron grates, so contrived that they might be heard but not seen. Confessors not to enter the monastery, unless in company with others, to give the sacrament to a dying nun. If she happened to die, all the priests and lay-brothers might enter with the confessor, singing and praying, to carry her to sepulture. The bishop of the place to be visitor, and judge in all causes and cases concerning the sisters and brethren. The prince of the kingdom in which their monastery is, to be a protector and defender in all their necessities. The pope to be a faithful guardian over both prince and bishop, if his aid should be required in any urgent necessity. A grave was to be kept constantly open, which the sisters were to visit daily after Tierce, into which the abbess cast some earth, saying the Psalm "De profundis." A coffin with some earth upon it, to be placed at the church door, that the persons entering might see it, and have a remembrance of death in their mind, and consider in their hearts that they are earth, and unto earth they will return.<sup>1</sup> singing only what was enjoined to be sung. To apply themselves to fasting and abstinence, when their strength permitted. Those incapable of fasting to take nothing beyond the dinner hour, except when sick. To listen attentively to what is read to them during meals, that so their mouth might not alone receive food, but their ears also might feed on the Word of God. Those who were infirm, if treated with better provisions and clothes, not to be molested by others. Sick to be treated on recovery as suitable. When recovered to return to their usual habit. Not to be remarkable in their dress. When walking or standing still always to be together. To do nothing that might offend any one, either in gait, habit, or gestures. [Not to fix their eyes upon women, nor wish to be seen by them. When together in any church where women were, to preserve each others chastity. Punishment by the superior for such offences.] Those who received letters or gifts secretly, to be punished, unless voluntarily confessed. To be clothed from one vestiary, and victualled from one cellar. Not to murmur if the vestment they received was worse than they previously had. Not to work for their own private advantage, but all for the common good. Nothing given them by their parents or relatives was to be received secretly, but to be in the power of the superior; that, as a thing received in common, it might be furnished to any one who required it. If any one concealed any thing brought to her, the crime was to be condemned equally with theft. Clothing to be washed according to the judgment of their superior, either by themselves, or by fullers. Bathing allowed if deemed necessary for health. Not to go to the baths, unless in company of two or three appointed by the superior. The care of the sick to be confided to some one person, who should direct the cellarer to provide what was necessary for them. Those in office to Prime began about six, and Tierce at nine; then High Mass was celebrated, which, with music, lasted one hour and a half; without music, only one hour. Sext succeeded High Mass, which lasted about twenty minutes; the monks then withdrew to their cells till dinner at eleven on fasting days, but on other days half past ten. About twelve Nones commenced, which lasted about twenty minutes; then recreation for one hour. After which they retired to their cells till three, when Vespers began, which lasted one hour; meditation followed for about another hour in the choir. Then they retired to their cells till supper, at five on common days, but on fast-days half-past five. Complin was the last office, which lasted till near eight in the evening. Then silence was rung for retirement, study, or bed.—MS. Account of Watteley Abbey, given J. B. Nichols, Esq. F.S.A

CHAPTER I.

"For asmoche as we offend in many thinges: it is nedeful that in many wysex we be correcte therfor. Wherfor whan the ordinary chaptyr is holde, the president schal come so rathe ther to, that he may correcte the lay brethren or the clerkys come, they beyng there tofore and abydyng hym. And ther chaptyr schal be holde with the same observauncys that the clerkys chapter is holde, excepte the redyng. And if any of the more greuous defautys be proclamyd in ther chaptyr: it schal be jugyd and correctyd whan the clerkys are comne. Whan therfor they come afore ther setys in the chaptyr hows: they schal inclyne religiously towarde the mageste, and aftyr that they schal inclyne a lytyl to them betwix whom they schal sitte.

"If the confessour kepe the chaptyr, al schal ryse whan he cometh, and as he goeth before hem they schal inclyne. To another president they shall aryse: but not inclyne. Aftyr this whan the president saythe "Benedicite," they bowyng somewhat down ther hedys schal answer "Dominus," and whan the president hath seyde "Loquamur de ordine nostro," al tho that fele hemself gylty in any open defeaute lital or moche, schal fal down prostrat afore the presidente. To whom the presidente schal say, "Quid dicitis, What say ye." And then al they so prostrate schal answer, as it wer but the voyce of one, "Mea culpa." To whom than the president schal say agen, "Surgite, Ryse up." And than forthwith they schal ryse up, and stonde afore the president in ther order. The eldest in the myddys. Whiche inclynyng schall knowlage hys defautys, and after hym euerych of hem do in lyke wyse in hys order, sayng ther defautys compendiously, playnly and so audibly, that they may cleerly be herde of al that ar there, and also behote amendment. If any serche haue wherof to proclame any of hem so stondyng afore the president, he schall . . . . tofore that the president enioyne any penaunce to hym, whom he schulde proclame that he be not . . . .

summed him to go to her place: they schal first inclyne, and than go to ther place. He that schal proclame other schal not in his proclamation speke derkly nor covertly, but he schal say openly and playnly the defawte, and the name of him that do it, having his face and his wordes directe to the present. Some schal proclame other of pure suspicion; or of serving only, but if he expresse the person of whom he do it, and also the same person be ther present. None schal proclame other of any crime that he may not preve by thre or two witnesses at the leste upon hym that he proclaimeth in case that he wold denye it; as he wold eschewe the same payne due to hym accused as he was founde guilty by his owen confession, or by sufficient proofe afore expresyd. Neuertheles, him that knowe livyng in suche vices be hardie boldenes to accuse, and the cytye not punished for lacke of suche proofe, wherby the vengeance of God may gretly growe, he that seith it deserve suche chastisment as to nutyfy them to the general chastisement, which may be other lawfull and honest means wold and wold cure suche sores. When the clerkys or chauntour, and the laundress refuse, yt any brother that hathe be seek, and is concerned in his sickness, and wylle joyne hym to the convente and to ther labours; he schal first ryse and take his leave for his defawtes and omisyons in the tyme of his sickness. And when he hath take his penance, he schal go to his place. And after this when the president hyddethe the lay brether to her way, they schal go forth owte of the convente. Neuertheles, yf the chauntour, or any of the convente, desire to proclame any of them, they schal do as they please. And who that is proclamyd he schal not say a word, but he schal ryse anon forthwith, and knele before the president. To whom the president schal say thus: "Thou sayst so." And than he that lyeth in the convente, schal answer thus, "Mea culpa." And after that he schal mekly say his defaute, and mekly knele before the president, and go to his place, where he is comynge. And whosoever, yt any be proclamyd and is founde to have done the president, he schal not take any excuse, nor say on taute, but ever say thus: "It is soth." Neuertheles, yf it passe lyght, he may well excuse himself of the defaute properly, and knowlege therein not guilty, or els, whylst he standeth ther, he trespassyth in hys port or in his wordes; in such cases he must take hys veyne azyne, and not els. In tho thynges that he kan not fele hymselfe gylty, he schal answer thus: "Domine, cum licencia vestra non recordor. Syr, with your licence, I haue not in mende that I seyde so or dyde so." It schal not be leful to any to excuse hym other wyse. But he oweth to thynke in hym selfe that he is gylty afore God in ful many other synnes; and in happes more greuous, whiche in this lyfe or after must be purged. And therfor he schold accepte mekly what the president enioyneth hym, but yf the defawte put upon hym be so greuous that he schuld therby be gretly defamyd, or other gretly hurte in hym, ffor in suche cases it shal be leful to euery person so accusyd, and not gylty, mekly to excuse hym in fewe wordes and softe. In the chaptyr none schal defende hys own cause, nor the cause of another, nor noon schal speke there but the president, the chauntour, the serches, and they that confesse her owen defaultes. And also they that ar charged to speke, or els haue licence to speke. And ther answer schal be but only in that that is askyd of hem. There schal no brother speke in an hygh voyce, nor inordinatly, nor inhonestly, nor wrawly, nor noon schal speke betwene themselfe one to another, al yf it be in a lowe voyce, or make any token or bek from that one syde to that other, or anylynge or wrothly behold another; who that other wyse doeth, and is perseyuyd, he schal be proclamyd, correcte, and ponyshed, like as for another defaute. So than euery worde in the chaptyr schal nowght els sauour but correccion of lyuyng, helthe of sowles, kepyng of the order, and the comen profite. None schal be so bolde to absent hym from the chaptyr or collacion withoute special licence, excepte the seeke lyeng in the fermery. Who schal take the longe veyne, he must knele first upon hys lefte kne, and after upon hys ryght kne. And than forthwith ley hymself esyly down alonge streight, somewhat more resting to the ryght syde than to the lefte, but not notably moche. Hangyng the ouer parte of the left fote upon the sole of the ryght fote, and the bakke of the lefte hande upon the palme of the ryght hande, hauyng hys handes in thys wyse, betwyxe hys face and the erthe. But he that schal take the curte veyne must fyrst knele down upon bothe hys knees, fallyng down esyly upon hys elbowes, hauyng hys face resting upon hys handes, betwix hys face and the erthe."

8. If any be neglygente in dyuynе seruyse, or be lyghte of lokyngе aboute, or be any unreligious demenyngе of hede, eyghe, hande, or fote, schew there any lyghetnes of chere, or sluggeschly slepe, or be slomry, in any conuentual acte.

9. If any in the quyer in tyme of dyuynе seruyse, or in tyme of the chapter or collacion, or in the freytour in tyme of redyng, conuentual refeccion, or drynkyng, or in the dortour in tyme of reste, make any noyse of unreste.

10. If any suster in the rere dortour, otherwyse callyd the house of esemente, behaue her unwomanly or unreligiously, schewyng any parte bare that nedeth not, whyle they stonde or sytte there.

11. If any mys trete the ornamentes of the auter, or any thyng of the quyer or chirche, vessel or other, or els lese any ustelment of the monastery, vessel, instrument or other.

12. If any come not in dewe tyme to comen obseruances, that is to say, yf they come to the chapter after tyme the beneson is yowen, or De profundis bygonne before the collacion, whan it is seyde for any persone late deceased, or els come to the freytour whan gruce is begon before mete, supper, or drynkyng.

13. If any defoyle any boke in any place, or trete it unhonestly.

14. If any lightly breke her sylence.

15. If any speke in a lowde voyce.

16. If any be yowen to ydelnes or to veyn speche, or to moche speche, or els of neglygence sayeth aught whereby other be hurte.

17. If any fynde any thyng not heres, and takethe it not to her to whom perteyneth the use therof, or to her office, or elles leyeth it not in suche a place where as suche thynges be assygned by the abbes to be leyde.

18. If any take any thyng oute of others office withe oute leue, or go in to any susters cell except her own withe oute a reasonable cause, or els in to any place that is forboden to entyr.

19. If any be founde negligent in ther office or mynystacion.

20. If any behaue them in the chapter other wyse than is expressed in thees Addicions.

21. If any lyghtly asserme any thyng with any othe, or in lyke wyse denye it, thof it be trewe that sche denyeth or assermeth.

22. If any mys kepe her thynges, clothes or other, or els rente them, or breke them, or bren them.

23. If any dissolutly laughe, or styr any other by worde or by dede to do the same.

24. If any go unconffessyd seven days togyder withe oute a reasonable impedymment known and allowed by her gostly fader.

25. If any wasche not, or take not her clothes to waschyng in dewe tyme, nor in dewe tyme chaungethe them, lyke as the comen custom and honeste of the religion wyll. [Also yf any whan the comen schauyng is had is not schauen, or els not in dewe tyme taketh his clothes to waschyng, nor in dewe tyme chaungeth hem, like as the comen custom and honeste of religion wyll.]

26. If any suster speke unrecuerently to other, or yet calle or name other by ther proper name withe oute thys worde put before Suster [Syr, or brother] or any such other worde, accordyng to her state and degre.

27. If any hurte or kette her hands or synger, or spyl any lycour up on the table, wherby the clothe is defoyled, or elles take any mete or drinke withe oute blyssyng or sayng of grace, or els takethe it oute of dewe tyme, openly in the syghte of other, or oute of dewe place.

28. If any suster loke or besyly caste her eyen in to the brethres quyer gasyng up on them, excepte the tyme of comenyng and letacions of the sacrament of the auter, and other tymes permytted by the rewle.

29. If any suster, not beyng in office, offer herselfe wyllfully and withe oute licence to the speche or syghte of seculers, whan any of tho be withe in the clausure.

Penance.

For these, and suche other lyght defaultes, to them that wylfully take ther veyne and proclame themselves, is to be enjoyned the seven psalmes, or the comen letany, or the psalmes of the passion, or a parte of the lady suter, or some other thyng accordyng ther to, after the discrecion of the presydente.

Another Penance.

But to them that proclame not themself wyllfully, but be proclamyd of other, the penance schal be the gretter; and forsothe, yf suche defaultes be had in custom, bodyly disciplyne is to be ȝouen; for than they be not to be called lyght defaultes, but in a maner greuous.

Of bodyly disciplyne.

Therfor whan the defaulte of any suster is suche that by regular sentence sche deservethe a disciplyne, the suster commaunded to make her redy ther to, schal stonde up in the same, where as sche knelyd before the abbes, doyng of her mantel, and late it fal down behynde her. And than sche under her rowle shal take the hynder extremytees therof, and ley al honestly in her nekke, drawyng her armes oute of her sleues, to the elbowes at ferdest, and baryng the scholdres of her bakke as ferre unto the bare skyn, and so knelyng aylene in the seyde place, and also enelynyng, withe alle mekenes schall take her disciplyne; whyche sche or they schal zeue whom the abbes byddethe: whiche yet schal be none of them that proclaimed her, but another suster or sustres. And whylst any disciplyne is in zeuyng for correccion, all the sustres, except the abbes or presidente, and the zeuer or zeuers ther of, schal not beholde her or them that be disciplyned, but caste downe ther hedes and syght towards the erthe, as yf they scholde beholde it at ther fete, hauyng compassion of her suster or sustres. And whylst any is disciplyned, she schal nothing say butte "Mea culpa, I wylle amende," whiche sche schal rehearse thykke and many tymes, and none other schal speke at that tyme. Whan the abbes sayethe "It suffysythe," she or they that zeue the disciplyne, shal cese forthewithe at the seyde worde. Ther shal not be zouen for the disciplyne but fyue laches; but yf the defaute be of the more greuous defaultes, or els that sche or they schewe any token of rebellyon, flor than the disciplyners shal not cese tyl the abbes chargeth them to cese. And the laches in disciplynes owe not to be to softe or to easy, but moderately scharpe, after the commaundment of the abbes. And whan the discipline is doon, sche schal clothe herself aylene, withe the helpe of her, or one of them, that zaue her the disciplyne. But she schal not remoue from the same place tylle sche haue her ful iugement, and tyl the abbes haue seyde to her "Go to your place." Suche that may not wele for age, or for any other cause reasonable take disciplyne, they schal be sette to say, in recompense therof, syftene pater nostres and syftene auces, or the seuen psalmes alone, or the letany alone, or some other thyng, after the discrecion of the presidente. And it is gretly to take hede that amonge lyghte defaultes be comprehendyd lyghter and most lyghte: wherfor the president nedethe to haue suche discrecion, that sche kan discernes betwene lyghte defaultes, lyghter, and lyghteste.

[When any therefor is commaunded to make hym redy to discipline, he schal go to the neder party of the chapter hows, and ther under hys cowle he schall preuently drawe hys armes oute of his sleuys, and under hys cowell make hys body bare from hys nekke unto his myddes, and than gyrde hymselfe streyte, that hys clothes falle downe no lowgher. Thys doon, he schall turne ajene to the place where he was to fore; and ther before the presydente castynge the utter parte of his cowle ouer hys hede, he schall fall down upon hys knees and elbowes for to receyue mekly his penaunce of disciplyne; and whilst he is disciplyned, he schal nothyng say but "Mea culpa, I wyl amende me," and thys he schal rehearse ofte and thyk. Ande when this dyscipline is doon, he schal clothe hymselfe ajene in the same place, and not go thens tyl the president hath zonen hys ful jugement, and seyde to hym "Go unto your place," ffor than he schal inclyne and go to hys sete.]

CHAPTER III.

It is a greuous defeaute yf any suster, officer, or other, licensed to speke with any brother or brethren at any place, haue or mynyster any debatous or frowarde wordes unto them at any tyme. And the same is to be obserued, and kepte to alle other, specially to outward straungers.

2. If any bere false witnes ajenste another, or be take witho a lesynge made wylfully and of purpos, or withe any foule worde, or els brekethe her sylence, or swerethe horribly be Criste, or be any parte of hys blyssed body, or unrecuerently speke of God, or of any saynte, and namely of our blyssed lady.

3. If any despyse the comen doctryne sette of holy faders, and zeuen to them of ther souereynes for to be kepte, or be to negligente to kepe them.

4. If any defende or maynten her own defeaute, or the defeaute of any other, in the chapter, or in any other place or tyme.

5. If any repreue another of her defaultes for the whiche she was corrected, or els maliciously or akornfully rehearseth it after the correccion.

6. If any say any thretynge, cursynge, or unreligious wordes to her, or of her of whom sche was proclaimed.

7. If any suster say any wordes of despyte, represe, schame, or vylony to any suster or brother.

8. If any of malice caste oute or schew oute the euellles that any suster or brother hathe doon.

9. If any put dedly synne upon any suster or brother whiche she may not preue by sufficient recorde or witnes.

10. If any lye in a wayte, or in a spyce, or els hevyly and curiously serche what other sustres or brethren speke betwene themselfe, that they afterwarde may revele or schewe the saynge of the spekers to ther grete hurte.

11. If any sowe dyscorde amonge the sustres and brethren.

12. If any be founde a preuy rowner or bakbyter.

13. If any unreasonably grudge for mete or drynke, or for any other thyng, and namely yf they sterc other to do the same.

14. If any, save suster to suster, and excepte the keepers of the [locutories,] wheyles, grates, gates, or entres into the clausures, and yet not they but for ther officers only, be founde to speke alone, confession only unyuersally excepte. Or els yf any whan they haue leue to speke take any other withe them, than suche and the same whom the souereyne assygnothe.

15. If any bryng in any tydynges withe oute leue of the souereyne.

16. If any go unconfessed fourtene dayes thorowghe ther own defaute.

17. If any suster in the dayes of precepte by the rewle withdrawe herself than from comeynge withoute licence or forbeydyng of her dayly confessour, or of the generall confessoure; or els for resonable cause expressed to one of them, and allowed by hym to whom the cause is expressyd.

18. If any suster be comened any other day than the dayes of precepte, or Saturdayes, withe oute lycence of the generall confessoure.

19. If any breke the fastes of the religion withe oute leue of the souereyne; or els the fastes of the churche withe oute leue and dispensacion of the generall confessoure.

20. If any withe oute leue of the souereyne go in to others celle whan it is no nede, or receyve any thyng of any that hathe not the cure of mynystracion of the same thyng, and also she that geueth it so withe oute leue.

21. If any hauyng mynystracion of thynges necessary, and have sufficiently in ther office to mynyster to the nedy, and do not dewly and charitably mynyster the necessaryes that be asked in dewe tyme and dewe places.

22. If any commaundyngly, or manescheynge, or unrestfully aske ther necessaryes, or els oute of dew tyme or dewe place, whan they ther nede myghte forbere, and also yf any whan they receyue newe thynges wyl not delyver ther olde.

23. If any hauynge charge of the yates and dores of the clausure lene them unschettle withoute some keper of the same eyther withe in or with oute, or bothe.

24. If any be a customable faller into lyghte defaultes.

Penance.

For these and suche other defaultes to them that wylfully proclame themself schal be zonen streyte correccion of disciplyne with the seven psalmes and letany, or oure lady sawter and sylence of one day at leste.

Other Penance.

But to them that wyl not proclame themselfe, but be proclaimed of other shal be zonen two disciplynes, with sylence of two dayes atte leste. The unresonable grudgers schalle abstayne them from that kende of mete and drynke, or of any other thyng that they grudge agenste, after that the presidente semethe it for to be doon. And yf they may not withe oute notable hurte here thys penance, they moste be ponesched other wyse after the discrecion of the presidente.

CHAPTER IV.

Of more greuous defaultes.

It is a more greuous defeaute yf any of pryde, or of open rebellyon, be inobedient to her souereyne by one hofe day, or els malapertly stryue with her as schic wer egal to her, or malyciously say any enel of her.

2. If any say any wordes of injurye to her souereyne, or to any of the serches.

3. If any suster sowe discorde betwene any sustres or brethren, and namely betwene the abbes and generall confessoure.

4. If any afferme the reuelacions of saynte Birgitte as dremes, or else detracte them.

6. If any whan thei fal a chydng or stryuyng togyder, yf the souereyne or prioress, or any serche say thus—" Sit nomen domini benedictum," wyl not cese knokkyng themselfe upon ther brestes, answeyng and saynge mekely, and withe a softe spyryte, "Mea culpa," or els, "Ex hoc nunc et usque in seculum," and so utterly cese.

6. If any be founde in any suspecte place, spekyng withe any brother, or with any seculer persone, man or woman.

7. If any publysche or revele the secretes of the religion to any outward persone.

8. If any do any dedly synne openly, excepte lechery, and the synne agenst nature, which is sette amonge moste greuous defaultes.

9. If any putte any cryme upon a nother, that is to say, dedly synne, whiche sche may not proue by sufficient witnes, or elles bere false witnes to the profe therof.

10. If any not required of her souereyne swere any grete othe in what case that ever it be, as yf they swere be the sacramente, or be the body of Cryste, or be hys passion, or be hys crosse, or be any boke, or be any other thyng lyke, or els be convicte of perjurye.

11. If any manesche by chere or wordes to smyte another at any tyme, or for to auenge her own injurye, or els by ungodly wordes repreve another of her contre, or kynrede, or of any other sclauderous fortune, or chaunse fallen at any tyme.

[If any schulder pusche or threten to smyte another with any maner of wepen be sygne, worde, or ungodly countynauce, or blame hym of nacion, or kynrede, with sclauderous wordes.]

12. If any do any thefte or sacrilege.

13. If any withoute licence and knowlage of her souereyne sende oute or receyve in from withoute any letter or jette.

14. If any make confession to any other preste than is asygned her by the general confessour, for sche that lurkyngly fleithe her proper prelate or curate schryuynge her to another not hauyng ful power to assoyle her, wyte sche welc for trouthe, that suche confession schal not auayle her, nor the penaunce therfor enjoyned her.

15. If any of contempe breke the fastes or abstynences of the churche, or of the religion.

16. If any use sorcery or witchecraft.

17. If any without knowledge, and licence of the souereyne, lat in or bryng withe in the clausure any outwarde persone, so thof the persone be not suspecte.

18. If any to the defence of her owne trespase, or of any other, reherse lawes, or alledge them, or induce any other ther to, or geve any fauour to synne.

19. If any appele from regular correccion, but yf sche openly the nexte chapter after go utterly from her appele.

20. If any with violence breke up any dore or lokke, or with any sotel crafte open it with oute licence and commaundment of the souereyne.

21. If any be impression in waxe, or in any other impresable matyre, cownterfete, or make any seal or key.

22. If any be a custumable doer of greuous defaultes.

Penance.

For these defaultes and suche other they that be defaulty, and wyllfully proclame themself, schal bere thys penance seven days. Twyes in that wyke at leste they schal take bodyly discipline, in suche tyme as the abbes wyl assigne; and the monday and wensday they shal be serued and contente with one maner of potage, and one maner of flesche or fysche, and smalle ale, but yf it be double feste, flor than they schal be serued as other be, excepte pytaunce, wyne, and frute; and the fryday they schal haue but brede and smal ale, and one maner of potage. Nevertheles in alle more double festes, lyke to cristmasday and such other, they schall be serued altogyder as other be, and they schal fulfille the fryday penance the wensday before or after. Sonday, tuesdaye, thursday, and saturday they schal be serued as in smale dowble festes with oute pytaunce, wyne, and frute, as it is seyde before; and alle these seven dayes they schal kepe streyte silence and loweste place in ther order in alle conuentualle actes [outetake in the quyer and in the processions]. And al thys tyme they schal not be comened, nor mynyster in the chirche [at awtyrs] nor come in to the quyer with oute special leue or commaundement of the souereyne. And yet suche leue is not to be graunted withoute grete nede and resonable cause for al thys tyme they stonde in maner of censures of the religion in to tyme they haue performed ther penance.

Other Penauunce.

To them that wylle not proclame themselfe, but be proclaimed of other: the seyd penaunce schal be encreasyd in every partye after the discrecion of the souereyne. If any apele from regular correccion: they schal besyde the seyd penaunce be put into pryson unto the nexte visitacion of the buschop, berynge in the meane tyme the penaunce of most greuous defaultes.

CHAPTER V.

It is a most greuous defeaute yf any be conuycet of properte for the whiche penaunce is taxed in the rewle, whiche penaunce, if any propertary refuse to do, sche schal be put into pryson.

2. If any forsake obstynatly to accept and fulfyl the penaunce enjoyned her of the presidente.

3. If any go away in apostasy, or elles attempte or assay to go over the walles of the clausure.

4. If any stonde unobedient and rebelle to her souereyne two hoole dayes.

5. If any conspire agenste her souereyne, or be confeteryd, or els werke to the subuersion of the order, or to the destruction of the pryvyleges, constitucions, addicions, statutes, ordinary injunccons, or els of ambicion, rankour, or hate, labour to the prisacon of the pryores [chauntor] serches, or of any officer of the order.

6. If any diffame or schlaunder the abbes or confessour, sister, or brother of any cryme al yf they were faulty in the same.

7. If any stele or destroy any comen register, or any comen euydence, or els put oute or sette in any thyng in the comen registryrs or comen boke wythe oute the comen deliberacion and assente.

8. If any sende oute lettres of lewde affeccion, or of schlaunder of any persone, or ther to make bylles or rymes inwarde or outewarde.

9. If any ley vyolente hande upon her souereyne or apituosly smyte or wowude her or any suster thof sche reyse no blode of them, or elles make any profer to smyte be sygne or token, lefying up her fest, stykke, staffe, stone, or any other wepen what ever it be, or els scholte, pusche, or sperne any suster from her withe armes or scholders, bandes or fete, violently, in wrekyng of her own wrethe.

10. If any do kylle or mayme another.

11. If any fal openly in to fleschly syn, kyndly or unkyndly.

12. If any do open sacrilege or thefte.

13. If any in her madnes or drunkenesse blaspheme horribly God, or our Lady, or any of hys sayntes.

14. If any be founde so moche uncorrigible that neyther she dredethe to do trespase, neyther fulfyllthe the penaunce that is enjoyned her for her defaultes, or els openly refuseth to do her penaunce, suche a persone mooste algates be commytted to pryson, leste one skabbed schepe infecte al the flokke.

Penaunce.

What houre therfor of the day that any is founde, or take in any of the seyd defaultes, or in any suche other lyke, and dewe correccion or poneschemente may not well be deferryd tyl the houre of the chapter on the morne lykly withoute hurte, for ofte sythes turyeng endurethe perelle: the chapter belle schal be ronge, or els some other wyse the couent schal be callyd togyder to the chapter. And by the commaundment of the president, sche schal put from her ber gyrdel and knyues, nedels and pynnes, cowle, mantel, crown, and veyle, and remayne in her rewle cote as it schewethe in the sevente chapter of this boke, leuyng al togyder at the president's fete. To whom the presydent schal say to her forthewithe in this wyse. "For thys trespase," expressyng it, "I enioyne zowe the peyne of prysonemente." And anone as the sentence is zoven the gylty schal withe sufficient garde assygned by the president be led to the pryson in the whiche sche shal abyde tyl sche be very repentaunte. Ande whylst sche is so led, the chapter schal be ended after the comen use.

Other Penaunce.

Nevertheles yf so be that the gylty of her own fredom meke herselfe before alle, and trewly knowlage her defaultes, behoyng amendes, so zet that sche have not in custom to fal in suche defaultes, sche schalle be pardoned of prisonmente, and fullyl the penaunce that is sett and expressed in the seyd sevente chapter for them that aren delyveryd oute of prison. Save conspiratours, schlaunders, mankyllers, violent smytys, incontynente lyvers or brekers of chastite, and apostataes, and they that be uncorrigible, schal be excepte euermore from any pardon of prisonmente. Moreover, yf any suche be, that by the selynge and dome of the souereyne, and of the more and holer parte of the congregacion, may not be sufferyd in the seyd congregacion, withe oute grete perele of sowles or of bodyes, than schal suche be schette up in pryson, or in some other stronge place. But wyful mankyllers schal be put to perpetual prison. And sche that schal be prysoned, or is in pryson, schal be under the keypyng of suche that kanne and may suerly kepe her mynstryng to her as the souereyn byddethe.

CHAPTER VI.

Of Apostataes.

She that after open apostasye turnethe home agene wyfully schal be receyved in this forme. Fyrst, sche shall come openly in the same habyte and clothyng, that sche used in her apostasy, whethyr it wer seculer or religious. And at the dore of the church of the brethren clausure, than openyd, sche schal fal downe prostrate before the confessour and his brethren ther presente, the seculer peple, seyng this and beholdyng, and so lyng prostrate sche schal aske leue to speke. And leve graunted, sche than knelyng there schal knowlage before alle the gretenes and the enormyte of her synne, concernyng only her apostasy commyttynge herself lowly to al regular correction therfore, and be Goddes grace amendemente of lyuyng and stable purpos of abydyng euerafter. Whiche doon, the confessour schal take her in witheoute zeuyng of holy water, and so forthewithe delyver her to the abbes and couent abydyng at ther dore of entre, whom the abbes than schal lede by the hande in to ther comenyng hows, and there agene sche schal openly confesse to the abbes and couente the synne of her apostasy, behotyng amendement and perpetual stableness of abydyng. And than forthwythe in the same place by the commandment of the abbes, two serches schal geve her discipline, the couente in the mene tyme distynctly and openly, quyer to quyer, knelyng withe the abbes, sayng this psalme, "Miserere mei, Deus," withe " Gloria patri, Kyrycleyson, Christecleyson, Kyrycleyson, Pater Noster, Ave Maria." And whyle Pater Noster and Ave Maria is in saynge, they that were the disciplyne schal cese, begynnynge agene and continuyng wylat the abbes saythe this preces folowynge: "Et ne nos, Domine, non secundum peccata nostra facias nobis. Domine, exaudi orationem meam. Oremus. Presta quæsumus, Domine, huic famule tue dignum penitencie fructum peragere, ut que ab ecclesie tue integritate deviauit apostatando commissorum veniam consequendo reddatur iuniora. Per Christum dominum nostrum. Amen." And al this schalle be seyde withe so open voyce, that it may be herde bothe of sutores and brethren. And than the confessour syttinge at the seyde place schal geve absolution in this wyse. Withe in the comenyng wyndowe schalle hange a clothe that may exclude hys syghte utterly, and the syght of al that be withe hym from the seyde persone, and from al the sutores, and sche lyng prostrate and the two rodde withe the whiche sche was dysceplyned lyng up on her naked bakke, the confessour schal say thus, "Auctoritate Dei patris omnipotentis et domini nostri Ihesu Christi, et cætera." And, this down, the abbes schal geve her holy water and a rewle cote yf sche haue leste it before, and than the belle schal be ronge, and al schal go to chapter, where as sche schal take the sentence of prysonnement. And after a fewe dayes sche schal be delyvered oute thereof; but yf so be that sche haue fallen in apostasy before, or that none evydence of truste appere in her of stablenes. And whan sche is thus come oute of pryson, the abbes schal asygne her a sude maystres withe discrete injuncions for a tyme, more or lasse after the disposicion and behauynge of the persone so late correctyd, and so late delyveryd.

Another Penauce.

If any suche apostata be that is broughte home with stronge hande, but sette wylfully submytteth her to regular correccion, sche schal be receyved in the forme above expressyd, but her penaunce schal be more encreased.

Another Penauce.

themselt
be anot

so broughte home, and wyl not submytte correccion, they schal be take in openly I go to pryson forthewithe withe other holsome straytnes in to tyme that they repente them of al ther herte and sorowe for ther syn, and oft tymes, and with moche instance, offer themself mekly to all maner of regular correction. And also make menes to other to pray for them, that they may be admyttyd therto, and that to suche as they suppose schal be herde and spede. And than any suche schal be brought forth with her chaynes in to the comenyng howse [the brothers were taken to the chapter house] there to be as-soyled of her apostasy after the forme before expressyd in this same chaptyr. Whiche doon, sche schal be had to prison agene, there to be ponesched and tretyd in the maner about seyde, with some encrease after the discrecion of the souereyne and of the quantite of her trespass.

Another Penance.

Whan the apostasy is prevy, and not open, sche schal be take in prevyly by some other dore, and be ponesched and entretyd after the forme before expressed.

CHAPTER VII.

Of prysoners and of their deliqueraunce.

The reclused in pryson schal not go thens tyll she repente of alle her herte, and in al thynges sche schal be treted after her demerytes as the body may bere with oute notable hurte, hauyng no mantel, nor cowle, veyle, nor crowne, tyl sche be deliuered from pryson. To whom none schal speke nor go to nor zeur, nor sende, nor any schal take aughte of her, but only by the precepte or lycence of the souereyne, who so doethe the contrarye, schal bere the poneschement dewe for a more greuous default; and yf any brynge or sende any instrumente, or any thyng els by the whiche sche myghte escape thence, schely oute of pryson, sche schal be put in pryson herselfe. Every day whylst any is in pryson, her prebende schal be brought before the presidente immediatly after that the freytour is serued of the comen prebende, but yf the abbes commaunde other wyse, that the presidente after her discrecion make it more or lasse, or els sende it forth as it is.

The souereyne goethe neuer to any that is in pryson, but in

tyme of grete nede, but other sustres of the eldest, ripest and saddest of the religion, be licence of the souereyne, two or three togyder, nowe these now thei owe of pyte and compassion amonge to visitte suche prysoners, that they be not overcome withe to grete heuynes. Examynynge and preuynge ther inward labours, and enducynge them as nede requyrethe to be veray repentaunte, and that they take not to heuily the rodde of dewe correccion, sythe it is a very token of the grete mercy of God, whan he sparethe not synners in thys lyfe, and thus and better as it fallethe to ther mendes for the tyme, they owe to comforte hem with benygne and holsom wordes. If so be that none suche sustres offer them selfe to suche visitacion, than schal the souereyne styrre surhe nowe these, nowe them, to execute suche werkes of pyte. And thof so be that suche prysoners may be confessyd of ther synnes lest they forgete hem, yet they schal not receyue sacramental absolucion like as they schal not receyue the sacramente, nor holy brede, nor holy water, nor any suche other sacramentales withe oute special licence of the generall confessour, because they scholde the more attendably study and werke the more spedyly aboute the thynges that myghte cause and haste ther delyueraunce, but yf so be that ther prysonmente be perpetual, for in suche case they may be as ofte sacramentaly as they be confessyd, save they shal not be comened but at the feste of ester, and in the artykle of dethe. And whan they be comened they schal come oute of pryson as for that day, and at even go or be brought to pryson agene. Suche as falle in to grete euident sekenes schal be broughte in to the fermyre, there for to be treted charitably, as the sekenes requyrethe; and also in case of uttermost nede to receyue al nedeful sacramentes. But yf thei rekeuer they schal go agene to pryson, and ther performe the resydewe of ther regular penaunce.

Whan sufficiente prefe is had by the general confessour, or by her keepers, or by them that visitt any suche, that any of hem hath very contricion and repentaunce of her transgression, and is in ful wyl to amende, and neuer after by our lordes grace to fal agene into any suche defeaute, thys ought to be notyfied to the souereyn, whiche gretly rejoynsing ther of, and meynd to me . . . te, schal lymytt a conuenient day and tyme for th . . . ce of suche a suster. And the seyde day come one of her keepers schal brynge her forth into the chapter, hauing in eyther hande a rodde, and in her entre sche schal encline to the mageste, ande whan sche cometh nyghe to the presydent, sche schal encline agene, leying downe the rodde that sche hathe in her ryght hande upon the lefte syde of the presidente, and that other rodde upon the ryghte seyde of the president, fallyng downe prostrate forthewithe, and askyng leue to speke as al other bewoute. And whan sche hathe leue to speke she ther knelynge schal knowlage her defaults openly, and committe herself to al regular correccion, promyttynge be the mercy of God to amende her maners. And than forthwith at the commaundmente of the president sche schal make her redy to disciplyne, whiche two sereches or two other sutores assygned by the presidente schal geve, not scharly but in a mene, the presydent and the couente knelyng, and saynge, distinctly in the mene whyle, quyer to quyer, thys psalme "Miserere mei Deus;" with "Gloria Patri. Kyrieleyson, Christeleyson, Kyrieleyson," and whilst the Pater noster and Ave Maria is in saynge, they that geue the disciplyne schal cese, begynnynge agene, and contynewyng, whilst the president saythe thys preces folowyng, whiche is to be seyde with so open voyce, that it may be herde of alle:—" Et ne nos, Domine, non secundum peccata nostra facias nobis. Domine exaudi orationem meam. Oremus. Deus, cui proprium est misceri semper et parcere, suscipe deprecationem nostram et hanc famulam tuam quam delictorum cuthena constringit misericordia tue pietatis absolvas. Per Christum dominum nostrum. Amen." Thys doon, sche schal clothe herselfe agene, with the helpe of them that geue the disciplyne, and than sche schal lye downe prostrate agene before the presidente. To whom the presidente schal say thus; "What saye ye?" And sche lyenge prostrate schal answer thus: "I aske the mercy of god and zowres that I may be deliuered fro my boundes of pryson." The presidente schal say, "Ryse up." And whan she is ryzen, the president schal declare to her, knelyng before her, the gretenes of her trespase, and the payne she hathe deservyd ther by, sayng thus in sentence. "Doughter the gretenes and greuousnes of so grete a defeaute, askethe that ge scholde have hyde lenger in pryson. Nevertheles what for your repentance, and for the pyte that I have of you, what for the manyfolde and charitable beseechynges of youre sutores overcomen: I muste nedes schew some mercy to you, I assyle youe from the bonde of pryson."

And whan sche herethe thys, anone sche schal fal downe prostrate at the fete of the president, offeryng herselfe to kesse them, but the presidente in no wyse schal suffer that, but rather put downe her ryghte hande that sche may kesse it, and than there knelynge, sche schal thanke al the sustres than beyng in the chapter, begynnyng fyrst at the ryghte syde, and after at the lefte. Thys doon, the presidente schal enjoyne to her the penance of a more greuous defeaute for a tyme, that is to say, eighte dayes at leste, of the whiche one schal be in brede and water on the flore in the myddes of the freytoure, which day at euery conuentual entrynge in to the chirche, and comyng oute from dyuynye seruyse, or at the leste at grace after mete and suppere, sche schal lye prostratt at the chirche dore, sayng in a lowe voyce mornyngly to the sustres that come in or oute, ofte rehersyng the same thus, "Goode sustres, pray for me, goode sustres, pray for me." And eche suster oute take whan they enter in with the graces schalle answer thus agene in lyke voyce thof it be sylence tyme. "Almyghty God haue mercy up on 3ow." And eche day that sche takethe disciplyne sche schal fal downe prostrate before the president, askynge some relese of her penance. And the president schal remitte now a parte, and then a parte after her discrecion, but no grete thinge in the begynnyng, nor any tyme al outake at ende, or in case of nede ineuitable, for al suche thynges ar to be doon be convenient processe. And as ofte as any is relese of any thyng sche schal fal downe prostrat, and thanke the president and al the congregacion as it is seyde before. But as touchyng to them that be openly knowen for a cursed, there schal no penance be enjoyned hem tyl they be fyrst assoyled of the general confessour after the forme of holy chirche, expressed in the sexte chapter.

CHAPTER VIII.

Of the Presidente.

By this name Presidente is understonde euery persone that amonge the couente gaderyd togyder in any conuentual acte hath there the rewle of the religion atte leste for that ceson, for they that be so gadered be neuer with oute a presidente. The sonereyne is president in euery place; and sche absente, the priora is presidente; sche absente, the eldest serche; all these thre absente, the secunde serche, and so descendyng by al the bes; which al absente, the eldest suster of hem there present is presidente. The presidente, who euer it be, in the absence of the souereyne schal do that the souereyn scholde do yf so be wer there presente, excepte in cases specially and only reserved to the souereyne. Ande who that euer be presidente, be it souereyne or other, in her jugementes about them that trespas and fal in to defautes, she owethe to have grete besynes and warnes, knowyng wel that the physicion is not nedeful to them that be hole, but to them that be scke and euell at ese; wherfor sche owethe to consyder discretly, and to ponder wysely the gretenes of the trespas withe al the circumstaunces therof, and also the disposicions of the persones that do it, and there after to enjoyne the penaunce taxed in the secunde, thryd, fourth, and fyfte chaptres of these Addicions, whiche penaunce in case sche may make more or lesse after her discrecion. But in nowyse sche owethe to leue behynde the doctryne of the holy apostle saynte Paule, whiche teachethe al souereynes how they schal behaue them to ther subiectes, saynge thus, "Repreue scharply, beseeche hertly, blame wrothly."

I. She reprevethe trespassers scharply, whan sche before other persones jenuethe monicion to suche as be unrestful, or kepe not their religion, or be neglygent in many thynges, chargyng them in alwyse that they amende hemself.

II. Sche beseegethe hertly, whan sche goodly exhortethe them that of infyrmyte, ful, and synne, that they have more warnes to kepe themselves from suche falles, and to make them stronge, that they be not so lyghte to falle, or els whan sche prayethe them that be obediente, mylde, and paciente to perseuer and contynewe, and to encrease ther in.

III. But sche blamethe wrothly, whan sche wrothely reprehendethe and moderatly chydethe them that synne and trespas of purpose, and of certayne malice, or of contempte, or of long roted custom. Nevertheles al thys is to be done mesurably, and somewhat in the spirit of softenes, leste that the gylty thorough to moche suche blamyng be so gretly chaufed and trobled, that sche wyl not gladly admytte the holsome penaunce that is enjoyned her for her defautes. Wherfor the porte of the presidente is to be manerly, meke, and sadde, and the sounde of her voyce somewhat lowe, and sche owethe to be unyuersal to al and not parcial, and in as moche as in her is, sche owethe to wynde al to God; and thof so be some tyme dewe correccion is to be differryd into another tyme, for the grete trouble of her that deserueth scharply to be blamed, yet the seyd correccion is neuer to be buryed, and that for two causes. One cause is, for yf so be that the gylty wyl not amende herselfe, sche is to be arted and constreyned ther to by paynes in to tyme sche cese to synne, ffor holy scripture saythe, "A fole is neuer chastysed by wordes." And therfor it is necessary that suche be chastysed by paynes to the delyneraunce of her sowles. Another cause is, for thof so be the gylty be uncorrigible, yet by dewe poneschemente it is prouyded for the comen wele, ffor when the comente (convent) seethe that the order of justice is kepte, they owe not to be the warse by the euell ensample of any suche, but rather they owe to refreyne themselves, and be the more aferde to do euelle. The president hath nede to be wyse, ware, and paciente, that in the execution of regular correccion and disciplyne sche may reduce the infecte schepe, and the misrewled into regular and holy conuersacion, and hurte not them that be hole and wele rewled. The souereyne only jenuethe sentence and jugemente bothe in more greuous and moste greuous defautes, but yf sche committe openly before witnes that power to another presidente. So that another presidente than the souereyne yf suche defautes come before her, sche owethe to reserue them to the dome of the souereyne, withe oute whos counsel and precepte knowen also to some other sustres, sche schal not determyn any grete thyng, nor sette any newe thyng, but al suche matyrs sche schal assigne to the dome of the souereyn. Nor sche schal in any place take the souereynes sete, but in the chapter and at the collacion, and in the freytour; sche shal kepe her own syde, syttyng at the ende of the same benche, upon the whiche the souereyne hathe her sete. But in the guyer sche schal kepe her owne stalle as sche scholde do yf sche wer not presidente, outake at graces in the absence of the abbes, ffor than sche schal stonde aboue alle in her own syde, bothe in the freytour and in the chirche, and so sche schal go to the chirche and come agene to waschyng of handes thof sche be the jongeste of alle the order.

Any man or woman mekly, deuoutly, withe instaunce, and and in the wey of charite, askyng to be admytted and receyued, to be a brother or suster of our chapter, graunte, asked and had ones for euer of the hole congregacion of sustres and brethren in special or in general, the abbes beyng at the grate may cry alone, and with any there present this psalme, "Domine miserere nostri," or els this psalme, "Ad te levavi." write - Gloria Patri, Kyrieleyson, Christeleyson, Kyrieleyson, pater noster. Ave Maria, Et ne nos, Ostende nobis. Oremus pro fratribus et sororibus nostris. Domine, exaudi. Oremus. Acciones nostras querens. Domine, asparando precens et adjuvando prosequere, ut cunctis nostris vitis et operacio a te semper incipiat, et per te opte finiat Per Christum dominum nostrum Amen." Thus doce, acle may exerte hem thus, yf seche thynke it expedient, or other wyse like. "In the name of oure lorde Jhesu Criste, and of his charyed moder our lady saynt Marye, ande of our hely m-o-rt saynt Birgittie, and of al sayntes, and in the name of al the hole congregacion of susteres and brethren, and in myne owne name, consideringe the love that is here to us and to our order and fervente deuotion by the whiche ye desire the suffrages of our congregacion, I admytte and receiue you to be partener of al spiritual subsidies of oure monastery. That is to say, of prayers, fastynges, disciplynes, and of al other good dedes, whiche it pleaseth our lorde Jhesu of his grace and mercy to werke by us and by our successors. Granting you as ferforth as we may with his pleasure, to lyve and in dethe, fyl and perpetual participacion of al the pemysses. Ad- dyng to more ouer, that whan any knowlege of our deuor cometh to us, or to our successors, the same suffrages shal be done for youe, that from the begynnyng of our religioun have or woulde to be done for brethren and susteres of our chapter. I com- tynuethe therefor in your good wyl to us wards, and when ye perceyne that any hurte is lykly to come to our monastery, yf ye may lette it, or els do us to wyte, that we may redress our harmes, and haue cause to loue you, and pray for you the more hertly." Or els thus, "In the name of our lord Jhesu Criste, and of his moste blessed moder, our lady saynt Mary, I admytte you to be partener of al spiritual subsidies of this monastery. In nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti. Amen." Ande afterwarde the names of suche persons shal be sette in the boke of the fraterne, whiche is named "Codex Caritatis." And yf they of ther owne mouynge and fre wyl do any benefete of notable substance to the monastery, this ouerthe to be wryten with ther names, and they whiche be tokened amouge to the benefactors. There was caral letters and moders, brethren and sustres, and other of our nyghe kynrede be brethren and sustres by our entres into thys religion, and schal haue the same suffrages that other haue, thof they neuer aske it by themselfe for to be of our fraternite.

CHAPTER IX.

Of the dede how they shal be buryed.

Whan any sustir is dede, the dede body schal be leyde bare, al possible honeste saued and kepte, upon a bare borde ordeyned therfor, covered with the lede yf nede be. And there sche schall be wasche with warme water by them that haue the cure of the fermery, and by other sad persones, such as the souereyne wyl assygne ther to, whiche done, they schal clothe the body with the stamen, cowle, and mantel, wymples, veyle, and crowne, with the oute rewle cote, but with the hosen and schour tanned, and with a gyrdel, whiche al schal be of the vileste gere, and in al these except the mantel, sche schal be buryed. After that the body is thus arayed; it schal be leyed upon the bere, and covered with a cheste, made in maner of a wyde latyce, that the body may be seen, and so it schal be brought in to the sustres' quyer, chapter, cloyster, or in to some other more conueniente place, and the body schal neuer be withoute two sustres at leste, prayeng for the soule, saynge, ther psalter or Dirige, or any other prayers tyl it be had to chirche, nor it schal be lefte alone at any tyme tyl it be buryed, what tyme the body schal be had to chirche or to sepulture, that is reserved to the discrecion of the confessour and hys brethren, counsel had of the abbes in thys party as for the sustres. Before that the coorse be buryed schal be seyde a masse of requiem for the soule, but yf it be so corrupte that it may not so longe be kepte aboute erthe with the oute infection of other. Other obseruances aboute the dede be sette in the fiftenthe, seventethe, and two-and-twenty chapitres of our Saviour's rewle.

Neuertheles, when any suster or brother is passed, ech day thretty dayes togyder at graces after mete and supper schal be seyde for them thys orison, "Deus cui proprium," the lesse before "Absolve, quæsumus, Domine." And euery suster ech of the thretty dayes in our lady masse tyme schal say thre pater nostres, and thre Aves; one whilste the preste sayth the fyrste collectes of the seyde masse, another before the pface, and the thryd whyle he sayth the last collectes; or els yf they wylle, it schal be leful to them to say the seyde suffrages any day withe in the monthe day whiche drawethe to an hundredthe Pater nostres and Aves saue tenne. Also besyde this, eche suster schal say for euery suster and brother so passed David psauter thryes, and sex dirigeys, thre in the quyer and thre withe oute, and ther obites schal be red euery yere as they falle in the martiloge. Moreouer, yf any dye before the fyrst masse in the mornynge, the same day schal begynne the rekenynge of the fyrst day of the seyde thritty dayes. If they passe after the fyrste masse, the rekenynge schal begynne on the morne folowynge, but the xxxii day schal euer kepe hys course. Whan therfore the body of any suster schal be had to chirche, ther bel shal be ronge, and al schal stonde in ther cloyster procession wyse, the abbes and eldeste sustres nexte the bere, and so they schal folowe the corse to the chirche, the brethren syngynge, and they deuoutly prayenge for the soule.

Before Dirige schal be lyghte two tapers at leste in the sustres' quyer to bren into the begynnyng of commendacions, or to the ende. And while the brethren synge ther Dirige, the sustres, ayde for syde, distinctly and deuoutly schal say the same Dirige withe oute note withe commendacions. In the whiche Dirige, for euery corse presente, the abbes schal execute the office, sayng the orisons and redynge the laste lesson. But other lessons schal be red of other sustres, warned and assygned ther to by the chauntres, ester tyme, and other, and on the morne al the houres schal be seyde before hyghe masse of requiem.

[Whan any of the professed be passed to God, eche lay brother that kan, schal say within xxxii days David sautyr thryes and iij Diriges, or els tenne tymes the seven psalmes and letany. They that kan not rede schal say four hundredthe and fifty Pater nostres, and as many Aves, and o Crede at eche fifty, and for eche Dirige our lady sautyr. Also besyde this, kan they rede or not rede, eche of hem xxx<sup>ii</sup> days togyder in the stede of iii orisons at masses schal say for the trintal iii Pater nostres and iii Aves withe other suffrages assygnyd be the souereyn. Or the brethren go to brynge any corse to chirche, al the bellys schal be ronge one Miserere whyle at leste, and than the chaptyr belle schal be ronge on Pater noster while, and the brethren gadryd togyder holy water and chese crosse schal go before witheoute tapers. The torches lyghte and sensour schal solow astyr before the quyer, al in regular habite excepte the confessour, the eldest goyng before. If it be the coorse of an abbesse or general confessour it schal be horn of prestys or dekons, yf it may be, or els of lay brethren, withe ii torches before and ij behynde. All other coorses schal be borne of lay brethren with ij torches only before the corse. And when the corse is sett wher it schal abide, al the bellys schal be ronge if they were not ronge in the begynnyng. Also the lay brethren schal dresse the pytte, and ley the bodyes ther in, and couer them reuerently and religiously, and not hastily or bustously, so that whilst the brethren synge "Circum dederunt me," they schal rynges al the bellys two Miserere while. And astyr that, the body schal be borne to the graue, as it was broughte to chirche, the holy water, crosse, sensour, and jongest brethren goyng before, and the body withe torchys solowyng, the quyer al in regular habite, excepte the confessour and hys dekon. At graue the crosse and torches schal stonde att the fete westwarde, and the holy water and sensour schal stonde by the preste at hede of the graue.

To Dirige for a coors presente, who euer it be, al the bellys schal be ronge ii peles, the first iiii Miserere while, the secounde on Miserere whyle, and they schal be ronge on the morne to our lady masse and hyghe masse, and astyr the gospel as they be upon Al soule day. For the abbes and confessour, the hyghe autyr, and our lady autyr, schal be arayd, and also the herse, as it is in the founder's Dirige, and besyde the iii tapers that be wonte to bren aboute al coorses, schal bren ii torches al the Dirige and Requiem masse tyme].

Of differryng of diriges.

If any corse presente fal on Christemas eues eue, or from thens in to the utas of saynte Steuen, or from saturday in Pas-sion wyke into the monday after the utas of Ester, or els from the fryday before Witsonday in to the morne after Trinite son-day, or any other tyme like, than the solempne dirige schal be differryd into suche a tyme where as it may be mooste conveniently had, withe note, after the disposicion of the general confessor, and the same tyme the sustres schal have ther fyrst dirige. Save than two sustres atte leste assygned by the abbes, schal any dirige togyder by the corse, yf it be a suster, or in the sustres quyer, yf it be a brother, to fore the corse be buryed yf it may be. Moreover it is to be knowen that how be it the fyrst dirige may be differred as it is seyde before, yet the xxxi day and jere's day schal never be differred, but yf the more soden case fall. Neuertheles they may for double festes, and for many other causes resonable contingent be ryght wele and conveniently anteferryd after the discrecion of the general confessor. In al diriges, therfor, for any corse presente, and for the monthe-day, and jere-day of buschops, kynges, lordes, abbesses, general confessours, and suche other, the abbes schal execute the dirige on her own syde, but al other diriges schal be executed by the ebdomadaries of the same wyke. So that the sustres in sayng of any diriges, cotidian and other, be bounde by ther own ordinal to say them after the use of ther cathedral chirche. Wherfor it is expediente to them to take counsel amonge of there brethren prestys, and folowe the forme sondele expressed in the foure-and-fourty chapter of thya boke.

[CHAPTER XLIII of the MS. containing the Additions for the Brothers.]

[Whan dirige is differryd for any coors presente, the ryngynges also to masses schal be differryd ther withe, et cetera.

To diriges withe oute note the grete belle or els another belle after the assygnement of the general confessor schal be ronge, and also to requiem masse on the morne in stede of prime belle, the space of iii Misereres, and whan iii tapers bren aboute the herse or crossyd clothe at dirige, thei schal also bren in the same place at requiem masse, lady masse, and hyghe masse. Fro the fest of seynt Austeyn tyll the founders obet be done, the principall apparelle of Seynt Petyr, Seynt Sauyour, and our ladys auters shalle hange styll without relykes, candylstykes, or principall tapettes; but the cheff candylstykes and principall tapettys shalle be had at the seyde obet, but no relykes. And the herse schal be couered withe a clothe of golde with iiii tapers stondyng ther aboute, and ii upon the autyr al the Dirige tyme breunnyng. At Magnificat and Benedictus the autyr schal be sensed, and therfor the confessour schal be in the chefe cope, and hys stal schal be arayd as it is wonte in principal festys. And from the sensyng of the autyr and herse in to the colectes he endyd, the taperers schal holde the tapers, turnyng westwarde, whilst the seyd herse is in sensyng. As for the bellys they schal be ronge as they be for a coors presente, saue in the sustres euensonge they schal be ronge as they be on al halowe day as it is schewet in the (forty-fourth) chapter ]

CHAPTER X.

The buschop visitethe eche thre yere yf he wylle, suche tyme as he visiteth hys diocese. But he schal neuer visitte here but in hys proper persone, hauyng with hym two or thre sad and honest persones. Of the whiche one schal be a religious manne of the order of Benett or Bernarde, chosen by the abbes and general confessour, with the counsel of sexe, the elder and hoier of eyther party, separatly of sustres and bretheren yf they thynke it expedient. But no lay man, nor wedded man, schal ever entre with the buschop in hys visitacion, but yf he be callyd by the seyd sustres and brethres' consente togyder with the buschop for some special cause, whiche may not be discussed utterly withoute the counsel of suche a man. Whan therfor the buschop schal visitte, he moste sende before hys lettres of citacion as the maner and custom is, ande whan he comethe to visitte, he schal be receyued worchipfully with the ryngyng of belles and procession. And whan the oryson is seyd ouer hym at hyghe auter, the blessing yoven, and the sermon ended, yf ther be any: he schal go to the sustres dore be the gydyng of the general confessour. Whiche dore opened the abbes with the covente schal receyue hym reuerently goyng processionally before hym withoute songe or redyng in to the chapeiter howse, whom the buschop with hys clerkes schal folowe, and whan he comethe in to the chapter, thei schal knele to hym as he goethe before them, and whan he hath take hys sete, he shal make the abbes to sytte on hys ryghte hande, and commaunde al other to sytte, hys klerkes sytting before hym up on a tapette. Thys done, the buschop schal say " Benedicite," and the conente schal answer " Dominus." Than he schal publishe the cause of his comynge as the custom is, and after that he schal purpose unto them thre thynges, to be kepte of alle. Fyrste, that none depose to hym, or to any that comethe with hym, any thyng that is corrected tofore and amended. Secunde, that none say any greuous thyng of the abbes or confessour, suster or brother, wherof they haue not charitably be warned to fore, nor that they depose aughte or accuse any, but only of suche thynges that haue be done sythe the laste visitacion. Thridde, that none of wickkednes, or of euil wyll, differre any thyng whiche they knowe to be amended, and reserue it to the comynge of the visitour, to the more sclaunder of the doers, ffor al defaultes arn to be proclaimed and corrected in dewe tyme as they falle. Wherfor they that do the contrary schal be greuously corrected by the buschop, that al other be afferd to do so at any tyme. After this the buschop schal say in thys wyse to them, " We commaunde you, in the vertu of holy obedience, that ye telle us trouthe of al tho thynges that we haue to examen and aske youe of."

Firste. Yf the regular nowmbre of sustres and brethren be complete, and yf it be not, what is the cause therof.

2. Also yf dyayne seruyse be dewly done after the religion, and deuoutly, and yf the sustres that be not seke, here dayly her masse.

3. If it be ronge in dewe and competente tyme to the seyde seruyse, and yf al come therto that may.

4. If ther be hadde sullicient bokes to do dyayne seruyse with.

5. If the chirche be serued withe lyghtes and honeste ornaments as the religion wyll.

6. If the sacramentes be dewly and charitably mynystred to the seke and hofe that deuoutly aske hem.

7. If the sustres be comenyd as the rewle wyll, and the constitucions of the order.

8. If the yere day of the founders and othez dirigex for sustres and brethren deceased be dewly obserued whan they falle.

9. If regular fastes and abstinences, silence, and other obseruaunces of the order be dewly kepte in tymes and places ordeyned ther to.

10. How sustres be occupied whan they be not atte dyuynre seruyse, nor at other conuentualle obseruaunces.

11. If ther be any discorde or contrauersy betwene the sustres amonge themself, or els betwene the sustres and brethren, and how and of whom it rose, and by whom it is noresched.

12. If any be disflamed of incontinence, or of properte, or of conspiracy agens the souereynes, or serches, or agenste any suster or brother.

13. If any disflame other of the notable defeaute that they kan not preue.

14. If any publicacion be made to any of the seculers of the preuyters of the chapter, or of the monasterye, and by whom.

15. If any be that haue been in apostasy, and how they were receyued whan they came agene.

16. If ther be a pryson or prysones for suche as deserue it.

17. If any detracte the abbes or confessour, or any suster or brother to any outwarde persone.

18. If ther be an inventory or register of the bokes of the library, and how they and other bokes of study be kepte and repayred.

19. If the chapter be dewly holde after the rewle, and other tymes whan nede is, and regular correccions had therein. Or yf any be founde rebelle and inobedient to the abbes or to the general confessour, or refuse to take correccions, and how suche be punesched.

20. If the abbes and confessour, and al other presidentes and serches trete religiously and charitably her sustres and brethren as they owe to do.

21. If the abbes or confessour be defamed of any cryme, or of dilapidacion of the goodes of the monastery agenste the prohibicion of the pope in the xiii<sup>e</sup> article of the bulle.

22. If the abbes make alienacion of unmonable goodes, or of any other thynges agens the pope's prohibicion.

23. If al regular clothynge, bothe to the bed and body, and al other necessaryes be dewly mynystred by the abbes or by her officers to the brethren and sustres after ther nede as the pope hath ordeyned.

24. If the sustres and brethren be serued charitably, and with a goode wyll, in dewe and conuenient tymes of ther necessities.

25. How the munymentes of the monastery, and the comen soeles be kepte, and by whome, or yf any selynge be made witho any comen seele, with oute certayne knowlage and assente of the couente, or of the more holer parte of sutores and brethren as the pope hath ordeyned.

26. How the fermery is kepte, and howe the seke be entreted, and yf they be serued competently withoute grudgyng.

27. If dewe distribution of the releues and broken mete be made to the poer in dewe tyme.

28. If, that after sufficient endowment and byldyng of the chirche and monastery, the necessary expenses of the yere presente, and of the yere nexte to come rekenedde, al that remainethe ouer be deled euery yere to the pooere as the rewle wyll.

The seyd examynacion made, the buschop schal procede to the acte of the visitacion, after the power zouen to hym by the rewle and by the pope. And it is to be knowen that in thre maner wyse he may procede in hys visitacion. That is to say, by wey of accusacion, by wey of denunciacion, and by wey of inquisition. The accuser schal neuer be herde, but yf sche fyrst hynde her selfe to the same payne, yf sche fayle in her profe, that sche whom sche accusethe scholde haue yf sche were founde gylty. Ande these ar to be reiecte and not to be admytted to accuse other, that is to say, stellers of holy churche godes, theues, robbers, manquellers, forsworn, they that fal to incest, cursed, wode, madde, despisers of the churche, noysed of cryme, oute of feyth and of goode name and fame, enmyes, scismatykes, heretykes, symonyers, traytours, hurtys of the kynges coyne, and suche other.

Afore denunciation ther oughte evermore to go charitable warnyng, for denunciacion intendethe and werkethe for correccion, and therfor yf charitable admonicion go not to fore, the denouncer is not to be herde, but to be repulsed, and they that be oute of gode name and fame, and be enmyes, be also to be reiecte from denunciacion. But as to inquisition ther ought to preceede a comen clamour of grete mysrewle, not ones but ofte, and thys of gode persons and saddle. And than in suche case he schal enquire of whom the seyd clamour and infamyce sprange firste.

Nevertheless, yf so be that it be answered of al to the buschop that al thynges be wele, he owethe to joy therof gretly, and to thanke God, and so to blysse them al, and gon oute as he came in. If ther answer be other wyse, he schall procede forth in hys acte of visitacion, herynge attentlylly what is seyde to hym, or to any of hys clerkes.

And whan alle be herde that wyl come, he schal schewe and publysche such defeutes as be to be corrected in suche wyse as he semethe beste. But the correcciouns, penaunces, and peynes that be to be sette and enjoyned to the trespassers, he schal committe the excecucion therof to the abbes, or to the sadder parte of the sustres, as the pope hath ordeyned, whyche ordinauncis be to be red in alle wyse amonge the sustres in the day to fore the byschopes visitacion, as it standethe in the xi chapter of these Addicions.

So than al thynges ryghtely done after the rewle, privileges, and ordynaunces of the pope, the buschoppe schal enjoyne the abbes in the vertu of holy obedience that sche haue none of her sustres in hate, nor pursuew them, nor the lasse charitably trete hem for any thyng they haue deposed or seyde agens her in the visitacion. And also he schal enjoyne the sustres in lyke wyse, that they loue not the abbes the lasse, nor withe drawe from her dewe obedience and reuerence in any thyng, and that no suster repreue other or reuenge her upon other, or greue or manesche other, for any thyng that was seyde or deposed in the visitacion. If any suche matyrs be or falle that may not sone be determyned and fynysched than, they schal be dyfferred and fynysched another tyme at the grates withoute, or els with in yf the mater requyre it. So that the buschop abyde not at the monastery ouer thre dayes.

Additions for the Brothers.]

[For as moche as the decre of your religion hathe ordeyned eghte lay brethren for to be minysters to the prestys and dekons, it is acordyng that they mynyster to them in alle thynges. Wherfor we ordeyne that they frely and honestly do alle thynges that belonge to be don by them, and that they have warenes continually, that for any uncleannes the clerkes, that is to say, prestes and dekons, abhorre not to take any ministracion or servise of them in the chirche, in the freytour, or in any other place.

Also we enjoyne and commaunde alle and eche lay brother, whiche of ther office be bounde to do servise to the clerkes, that they behaue themself more lowly to the prestes and dekons professyd, in worde, gesture, and dede, beryng themself reverently towarde them in alle ther services and ministracions in alle places and tymes, under payne taxed in the Addicions for greuous defaultes.

Also for it is an excesse to outerageous for to putte the power of the hyghest dignities to injuries, or malapertly and stybornly to speke or labour be any maner of mene for to destroy, impugne, or to make to stonde for nought any thyng graciously ordeyned and stablyshed by them; therfor we ordeyne and enjoyne, and also commande, in the vertu of holy obedience, to alle and to eche of jowc, that no suster nor brother, namely, the elder, openly or preunly, presume to dispute or interpret of the popes bulles, or of the addicions, nor in no wyse to speke any frowarde or synyster worde of them. And that no professse, expounde, schewe, or make known by wordo or writyng, or by any maner of mene, openly or preunly, any thyng of the byhaviour, dedes, wordes, or saynges of any of ther predecesours to any for to be admytted and make profession in tyme to come, wherby schaulder or suspicion of euylle myght growe to any person, or to the religion, under paynes assygned for mooste greuous defaultes, and under payne of inhabilitie to alle maner of offices usyd in the monastery on the suster or brother syde inwarde or outwarde. And under payn of lesyng of the uoyces in enery eleccion of abbesses and general confessours, and of al other men and women for to be admytted to the religion in tyme to come, and of alle other mutys of deliberacion concernyng the state of the monastery, wher in the consente of alle is to be requyred. Whom euerychone and eche trespassyng in the premysses, we unable for euermore in the self dede doyng, and adnulle, make stonde for voyde and cassatt ther voyces in eleccions and other actes, by thyes presente decrees and ordynaunces.]

CHAPTER XI.

For a perpetual memory we wylle and commaunde that the buschops of the dioecyses, in whos citees or dioecyses suche maner of monasteryes and places be sette, or in tyme to come may be sette and bylded in the reme of ynglande, that they do in alwyse ther ordynary offices, after the power that the rewle and constitucions of the same order grauntethe hem. By the whiche rewle and constitucions it is ordeyned and disposed that the buschops of the same dioecyses schal be faders and juges in al cases and causes that toche the sustres or brethren, and also visitours and proctours of the seyde monasteryes to that ende that the rewle be kepte. Neuertheles we wylle that the seyde buschops in nowyse zeue oute any maner of sentence of cursyng, suspension, or interdiccion, general or special, upon any personex of the seyde monasteryes, witheoute commission and special commundmente of our see. Nor that they aske any costes of them, nor vexen them undowly, nor trouble them in any wyse unlesfully, under payne of cursyng, yf they be warned to cese and wyl not. Whiche buschops yet by oure souereyne auctorite we straitly bydde and commaunde that they se the rewle and statutes be kepte of the order inviolably in euery parte, as it is seyde before. And also we ordeyne that whan thei visytte only personally yt schal be leful to them for to entre into the monastery withe other two or thre sadde men and honeste, and so to exercyse ther office of visitacion, as wele amonge sustres as brethren, in dewe maner and in dewe place after the lawe and dewe exigence of the rewle. To whom also it be lefulle in dowty cases of religion to aske counselle of wele named and faimed persons, professed monkes of the order of saynte Benett, or of saynt Bernarde, and so for to visytte, and that only from thre yere to thre yere; but yf he be kleydyd afore the thridde yere for an euident and profitable necessary cause of the abbes withe the sadder party of the sustres, or of the sadder party of the sustres withe oute the abbes, or elc of the general confessor, withe the sadder party of the brethren, or of the sadder party of the brethren, withoute the confessor, for then be it lesful to hym to come and visitte in the maner afore seyde. Or els yf it happe, as God forbede it, that suche trespasses and defautes soo encrese in the monastery that it breke oute in to the grete sclaunder and infamy of the monastery, and the abbes and general confessour considerynge the defautes dissymule feynnyngly for to correcte hem, be it in hem selfe or in any other, than be it lesful to the fore seyde buschops of the dioyses, thof they be not kleeped afore the thryd yere, keepyng the condicions of the rewle, as for al other thynges, for to visitte and withe dewe destresse to correcte that oweth to be corrected and reformed as ought us it nedethe in suche and other like cases as it is rehersed tofore. Wyllyng, neuertheles, that the seyde diocesanes, or any other by ther leue, or yet in other wyse than it is rehersed, takyng upon them the office of visitacion, owen and ther to be bounden for to committe the correccions, pennaunces, and paynes enjoyned by them, to hem that haue so trespassed in the monastery, to the abbes as for the sustres, and to the general confessour as for the brethren, yf they maye profitably by them be executed. Or els than to the sustres as for the sustres, and to the brethren as for the brethren, as to the sadder party of euery eyther as it may be executed by them, so that in nowyse they schal committe the execucion of suche correccions, sentences, and paynes to any other. And whan any buschop is kleeped to visitte, he schal entyr and visitte that party only and no mo, of the whiche he was kleeped. Noon other schal entyr the clausure, but yf hys entre be very necessary, as phisicians, workmen, labouers, and suche other. And whan ther entyr, they schal entyr withe some outewardo prudente persone of the housolde yf nede be, oute take phisicians, that the sustres be not greued nor troubled by them. And yf it may be that they be seen of none, excepte of the sustres that schall schew them such thinges that moste be made or repayred, and of tho that schal receyue medycynes or mynyster any medycynes to the seke. Ande, namely, they moste beware that they be not in the gardyn whiles werkemen or laboureres be there, thof they speke not to them, and thys for dyuers and preuy temptacions. But none of them that entrethe in to the clausure in nowyse schal abyde within alle nyghte, what case that euer happen. Also the buschop entrethe for geuyng of holy orders to the brethren that schal be orderyd and to halowe ther chirches, chirche yerdes, and chapelles, and for consecra-cions of abbesses, and makynge of professions, or for any other ordynary acte to be done in the monastery only of a buschop.

And as for the consecracion and installacion of the abbes, in the day of her consecracion, alle the howres of sustres and brethren schal be ended before hyghe masse. To the whiche masse al the belles ringen; the buschop in hys pontifical araymente schal conferme the abbes late chosen by hys lettres patent at the grate of her eleccion, in the presence of certayne sustres, confessour, and of the two prestes withe other persones that were presente at the same eleccion, as it schewith in the xiite chapter of thes Addicions more expressly. Neuertheles, yf sche be confermed tofore, he schal not come at the seyde grate, but he schal go streghte into the monastery be gydyng of the general confessour to the dore only, and no ferther, hauyng withe hym thre sad clerkes, honeste men for to assiste hym. Of the whiche one schal rede the epistle, another the gosbel, and the iiiide beyng in a cope schal attende upon the myter, so that one of hem be a notary: wherfor the seyde dore opened, the pryores withe another suster schalle lede the buschop and hys clerkes into the sustres quyer, the brethren than begynnynge and procedynge solemply withe masse of the Annunciacion of our Lady, and sche that is sexteyne mooste ordeyn that the awter in the sustres quyer be honestly arayed, and that the lectrans be redyly sette forth, whereupon the epistle and gosbel schal be redde of the seyde clerks as it is seyde before, whiche schallen attende to nothyng but to the buschop. The sustres, as many as may after the discrecion of the priores and saddeste sustres, schal be togyder in ther quyer, nothyng syngynge, but deuoutly praynge, behauynge them honestly as the religion askethe. Of the whiche two or thre at the leste assygned by the priories schal attende aboute the abbes alle the masse tyme. The abbes schalle knele in her prayers atte a forme, honestly arayed withe tapettes and cuschones as it is accordynge, kepyng suche maner obseruaunces in prostracions, knelynges, examynacions, makynge of obedience, subscripcion or crosse, with suche other, as sche is assygned and enformed by the buschop and hys clerkes. And whan the offertory is bygon, sche schal offer to the buschops hand, as the maner is, and go azyne to her place, tyl sche be kleped after masse to receyue the sacrament, and therfor sche moste be fastyng. And after the buschop schal install her, sayng, "Accipe potestatem," et cetera, and whan he begynneth "Te deum laudamus," the brethren schal procede withe the same, alle the helles ryngyng, and in the mene tyme the sustres, procedyng two and two to gyder, schal kysse the abbes knelyng, sche syttyng in her stalle. Thys done withe the preces folowyng, the buschop, withe hys clerkes, by the gydyng of the priores and of another suster, schal lede the abbes into ther chapter, where he schal do her to sytte on hys ryght hande, other sustres than stondyng in ther order. Ande the abbes haunyng the boke of the rewles and constitucions in her lappe, al the sustres schal make ther obedience to her, yf they have not do it before, leyng ther ryghte handes up on the seyde boke, the priores begynnyng, yf ther be any, sayng thus, eche after other.

"In nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti. Amen."
 "I suster (expreseying her own name and xyr name) byhote<sup>1</sup> to the abbes of thys monastery me for to kepe obedience after the rewle of Saynte Austyn and constitucions of Saynte Birgittie." To whom the abbes than takyng the sustres handes joyned to gyder betwene her handes, schal answer in thys wyse, "And I admitte thyne obedience. In nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti. Amen." And after thys schal come another suster and do the same wyse. And whan al have done, the buschop with hys clerkes schal goo oute like as he came in, and by the same dore, the sustres folowyng hem processionally to the seyde dore, ther takyng hys blyssyng, so that he do of hys pontifical aray withouteforth. And thus the abbes schalle be confermed, consecrate and installed by the buschop with the same blyssynges that an abbes of saynte Benettes rewle is blissed, excepte the staffe and the ryng, which ryng is blyssyd tofore in her profession.

On the morne folowyng, or another day more conveyente, the confessour withe hys brethren is wonte to speke withe the abbes to her comforte, weschyng that sche may longe contynewe in her office in helthe and prosperitie to the worchyp of God and wele of al the monasterye.

Whan so euer any abbes or general confessour decease or reasygne ther office in any of the monasteryes or places in Ynglonde, as wel nowe beyng, or in tyme to come for to be, ther schal none abbes in none of the monasteryes and places of the same order, be made by sotel wyles or violence, or in any other wyse he take up to be abbes, but suche one as al the concente of the same monasteryes or places by comen assente, or by the more party of the same sustres in nomber, and the sadder party after the drede of God, and the rewle of Saynte Sauour, chese in to ther abbes, whom also the buschop schal conferme yf sche be lawfully chosen as it is rebered. Also ther schal none be take up to be general confessour, but suche one in to whom the abbes, with al the congregacion, booth of sustres and brethren, consent and chese, after the drede of God and the same rewle of Saynte Saviour; and the same, so chosen, the buschop schal conferme after the rewle in to the general confessour. To whom also schal be graunted of the same buschop ful power and auctoryte to bynde and unbynde, to correcte and reforme, notwithstandinge any maner constitucions from the courte and other schewynge the contrary what euer they be.

(Portion of Chapter lviij. of the MS. containing the Additions for the Brothers).

[In the day of consecracion of the abbesse to hygh masse schal be ronge al the belles, and so they schal syng aftyr masse whilste the brethren syng, "Te Deum laudamus," and the grete belle schal be tollyd aftyr the gospel as it is wonte].

CHAPTER XII.

Sythe by our lordes rewle and by the ordynnanee of Pope Martyn the fyfte, it is sufficiently prouyded as it is expressed in the laste ende of the xijth chapter of thes Addicions, what persones haue entres in the eleccion of the abbes and general confessour, ther remainethe no thyng to be added ther to, but the forme of the eleccion, and the obseruances ther aboute, and that in tyme of vacacion the monastery cateche no harte. Whan therfor any abbes or general confessour resigne or decease, and the body of her or of hym after the custom is buryed, they schal within thre the nexte dayes folowyng, yf it may be in any wyse, go to the eleccion of a newe abbes or confessour, prefixing the day of the eleccion before. And the sustres, like as they by them selfe procede to the eleccion of the abbes and chese her, so they schal by themselfe prefixe the day that thei schal procede to the eleccion. But as for the eleccion of the confessour, bothe sustres and brethren schal prefixe the day of hys eleccion, bycause that hys eleccion perteyneth bothe to the sustres and brethren. When therfor it falloth that the office of the abbes is voyde, the prioress, witho the counsael and assente of eghte sustres, elder and holer in sadnes chosen by the seyd prioress, and also of the serches, schal depute a sadde suster experite in temporal rewle and gouernaunce for to assiste the tresouresses in such thynges that moste be done outwarde, and may not be delayd to the confirmacion of the nexte abbes. The prioress and the serches schal intende inward in al thynges perteynyng to the religion and keepyng therof, seyng that al officers inward execute dewly ther miniatracions as they dede before, tyl the new abbes be chosen and confermyd, nothyng addyng nor lessyng to the gouernaunce used before. The keys of the comen seales and of alle other thynges wherof the keepyng perteyne to the abbes, the chauntres or another suster chosen by the prioress and the seyd eghte sustres schal haue in keepyng in the mene tyme, which tyme yet ther schal nothyng be sealed with any comen sealle, but only the letter certificatory of the eleccion of the abbes to the buschop. Alle other thinges that the dede abbes hadde, schal remayne under suer ward and keepyng tyl the newe abbes be confermed, except suche thynges that by the rewle owe witho al godely spede to be dede to the pore and nedy; nevertheles, yf the olde abbes wylfully and frely reasgno her office, al the forseyde thynges schal remayne in her handes tyl the newe abbes be confermed. When the day of the eleccion is com, and dyuine scruyse that belongeth to them for to performe afore none is ended, the brethren immediatly schal syng masse of the holy-gost, solemply, in stede of hyghe masse, in solempne aray, as the tyme askethe. Whiche ended, the chauntres, with another suster whom sche wyl take to her, schal begynne solempnly the ymyn "Veni Creator spiritus," whiche schal be songe to the ende, quyer to quyer, of the sustres; whiche doon, the prioress, in a lowe voyce, withre note, schal say thys versicle, "Emitte spiritum tuum," and thes two collectes, "Deus qui corda," and "Actiones nostras," withre "Per Christum dominum nostrum, Amen," bothe under one. And whyles the sustres synge thys, the confessor, withre hys brethren, schal say the same withre the seyd versicle and collectes. Thys done, the brethren schal begyne ther sexte, and the sustres chapter belle ronge forthewithe, they schal spedely come to the crates<sup>1</sup> of the eleccion, where as they may speke withre the brethren and seculers togyder. To the whiche crates also schal come the general confessor withre two of hys brethren, confessours to the sustres, suche as he wyl take withre hym for to assiste, and be there than as witnesses only, and not for to have any voyce in the eleccion. And whan al be come, the xxiiith article of the bulle of pope Martyn the fyfte schal be redde, which begynneth thus, "Obstantibus vero vel cedentibus," et cetera. And this article also is to be red amonge the sustres the day before euery eleccion, as it is expressed in the xite chapter of the Addicions.

After thys, the constitucions of the thre formes of eleccion schal be declared in englysch by some wele lerned manne in the lawe of holy chirche, beynge withre oute of the seyd crates, and a notary withre hym. That is to say, the wey of the holy-goste, the wey of scrutyny, and the wey of compromys. And yf it plesse the sustres to accepte and preferre the wey of the holy-goste, than the prioress or any other suster may say thus, "What seme ze of suche a suster. N," expresynge her proper name and syr name. "Me semethe that sche is an able persone to thys office," and yf al answer "it plesethe them for to haue her abbes," or zeue any other answer, havyng the strengthe of ful consente, thys wey is welle spedde, yf so be there were no trefy nor no menes made before to chese her abbes, so that sche be of sufficient age, and born in wedlok. Nor it hurteth not thys eleccion, thof sche so chosen assente not to her nominacion. But yf any other do it, or if any trefy or compacte be made tofore for to chese her, than is this wey al to squatte. If the wey of the holy-goste prevayle, the pryores schal say in thys wyse, "In nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti. Amen." "I, suster N. N. prioress of this monastery of Saynt Saviour, and of Sayntes Mary the Virgyn and Birkitte of Syon, of the order of Saynte Austyn, kleeped of Saynte Sauour, of the diocysse of London. In the name and byhalue of al us chesers, werkyng withe us, the grace of the Holygoste before inwardly callyd and bysoughte, chese suche a suster, N. N. (expressyng her proper name), and her by name expresly professed in this monastery, beyng of sufficiente and laful age, fre of birth and borne in wedlok, wyse and discrete, in to the abbes of thys our monastery."

If it happe by the demerites of the chesers that it pleaseth not God to inspire them the wey of the Holygoste, than they schal go to the wey of scrutyny, whiche is the ordinary wey. To the laful execucion wherof, alle the sustres moste name thre sustres for to serche and knowe the wylls of alle. Whyche sustres, so named, in nowyse schal lette any suster, be sygne or worde, or be any other mene, that sche may not say and frely name whom sche wyll, nor reuele to any what other say, or whom any of hem name to be abbesse. And alle her wylls and nominacions herde in the presence of the general confessor, and of hys two seyd brethren, of the lerned man of lawe, and of the seyde notary; the same notary forthewithe schal putte in wrytyng as they come, whom euery suster namethe to be abbes. And sche than in the forme that folowethe schal be chosen in to the abbes, whom al the covente or elles the more and sadder party haue named ther to, so that the persone so named be eligible. And yf it so falle that for the dyuersite of voyces, dyuersly dyreecte in to dyuersa persones, none suche persone yet is founde, than schal they haue recourse to a newe scrutyny, and neuer cese of suche recourse tyl the more and holier party of them haue directe ther voyces in to a certayn persone able to be chosen in to the abbes. This done, and publyshed in general, one of the thre serches whom thei wyll assigne among themselves, schal pronounce and chese that persone in to whom the covente, or the more and holier party haue consentyd, saying thus, " In nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti. Amen. I, N. N. ancho a suster professyd in thys monastery of Seynte Sauour and of Sayntes Mary the Virgyn and Birgitte of Syon, of the order of Saynte Austyn, named of Seynte Sauour, of the dyocise of London, one of the serches taken and made in the acte of thys presente election, in al that I haue power as in thys acte, and in the same power of that other two serches, and in ther name, and in the name of al our sustres of thys seyde monastery, chese in comen suche a suster, N. N., of this monastery expresly professyd, beyng in sufficient and lawfull age, borne in matrimony, fre, wyse, and discrete, in to our abbes of thys oure seyde monasterye." Whiche election thus execute and fynysched, eyther be the weye of compromys, or be weye of the Holy-goste, the chauntres solempnly schal begyn forthewithe thys psalme, "Te Deum laudamus," whiche psalme the sustres schal performe withe songe, quyer to quyer, to the ende. And the electe to be abbes, schal be borne and led after the covente by the elder sustres in to ther quyer, and ther sche schal lye prostrate before the awter in the longe veyne, tyl the oryson folowyng be endede; for, whan the sayde psalme is done, the sustres knelyng in ther stalles, schal say withe oute note, "Kyrieleyson, Christeleyson, Kyrieleyson. Pater noster, Ave Maria." And than the prioress, or els the chauntres, yf the prioress be electe, schal say in a softe voyce withe note, "Et ne nos, Confirma hoc, Deus, quod operatus es in nobis. A templo tuo in Jerusalem tibi offerent reges munera. Domine exaudi. Oremus. Omnipotens sempiternus Deus, miserere huic famule tue, et dirige eam secundum clemenciam tuam in viam salutis eterne, ut, te donante, tibi placita cupiat, et tota virtute proficiat. Per Christum dominum nostrum. Amen." Thys done, the electe schal ryse, and whiles this is in doying amonge the sustres, the confessor, withe hys brethren, schall say the sam withoute note in ther quyer, al the belles ryngyng in the mene tyme. And than the confessor, or another brother preste, requiryd by the prioress, schal publysche the election, and persone that is chosen to al the peple there presente; and forthewithe after this, the electe schal come withe the covente to the crates of her election, and there schal be requyred than her consente, and sche so requyred schal aske no longe auysemente, but yet in case sche may aske respite tyl after mete. Whan her consente is had, than is the election in goodly to be notified to the buschop diocesan, or to hys vicar-general, under open writyng, sealyd withe the comen seale. Whiche election the ordynary owethe after the regular institutes and the popes ordynunce to conferme withe oute any lenger examynacion, discussion, or solempnite. Ande to th

confermed, thof sche be not yet consecratt, al the sustres schal make obedience, but sche schal in nowyse attempte for to do aughte, nor meddle of the abbes office, nor associate herselfe to the corente, tyl sche be confermed. Wherfor, yf it may be, sche schal be confermed, sacred and stalled in one day, and so in the presence of the buschop, al the sustres schal make obedience to her after the forme expressyd in the xite chapter of these addicions.

And whan the office of the confessor is voyde, ther schal no chaunge be made of under confessours, nor of any persone fyrst assygned to them, tyl the newe general confessor be chosen and confermed. Sane the sustres that wer dayly withe the confessor decesed, or for hys demerites depowed, schal make ther confession for a tyme to some of the seyde under confessours. But yf it happe that the office of the general confessor be voyde be resignacion, than al the sustres and brethren that were withe hym dayly before, schal abyde withe hym tyl a newe general confessor be chosen and confermed. For whos and in whos election al thynges schal be observed as it is expressed before aboute the election of the abbes. Excepte that the pre-fyxyng or setting of the day of hys election schal be done by the brethren and the sustres, as it is seyde in the begynnyng of this chapter, and the masse of the Holygoste schal be after al dyuine seruyse of sustres and brethryn. Also Veni Creator and Te Deum laudamus schall be songe by the brethern, and seyde by the sustres with the seyde preces, and this election schal be made at the same crates where the election of the abbes is wonte to be made. Ande yf the election procede by scrutyny, than schal al the sustres and brethren chese two sustres and two brethern prestes for to seeche and here the voyces of al the sustres and brethren. And that preste that is eligible schal be assumpt in to the general confessor of the monastery in to whom the more and the sadder party of sustres and brethern withe the abbes togyder consente, and the abbes and none other persone schal pronounce the wordes of hys election. And the ryngyng of belles, withe the publi-schyng to the peple, and certificacion to the buschop, withe al other obseruaunces, schal be done as it is expressed before of the abbes, the electe nothyng takynge up on hymselfe perteyning only to the office of the general confessor, tyl he be confermed. The buschop wher that euer he be, may be hys lettres patent conferme the electe, and in the same lettres graunte hym fulle power and auctorite to bynde and unbynde, correcte and reforme, and also committe fulle power to one of the brethren, a prelate, for to stalle hym and sette hym in hys dewe place, both in the churche and in the chapter hows. Neuertheles, yf he wyl do al thys in hys own persone, he shal conferme him atte the crates where he was chosen, executynge al other thynges in thys acte as it plesethe hym. If it fal so that the monastery be voyde at ones of an abbes and general confessour, the abbes is fyrst to be chosen and confermed, and than the general confessour withe oute delay, yf it may be.

CHAPTER XIII.

For religious persones be called officers not only for they under ther souereynes haue cure and charge of temporal thynges, but also of spiritual cures, and for the ministracion of al necessaryes longe principally to the abbes as to the covent and congregacion of this monastery, and it passethe her power to do alle alone; therfor amonge the sustres thes officers are to be hadde, that is to say, a pryores, the serches, the chauntres and sub-chauntresses, the sexteyne, and undersexteyn, the tresores and undertresores, the chambres and under-chambresse, the celeres, the fermers, the keper of the waschyng howse, the keper of the garden and of the frutes thereof, the keper of the butry and of the freytour, the keper of the whele, the keper of the grates, the keper of the reuelacion gate, the keper of the cloyster and dortour dores, withe al suche other officers, whom how be it the abbes may chaunge euery yere or as ofte as sche felethe it expedient, yet no suster schal be put in to any office, or be dischaarged utterly of any office, but in the comen chapter; but yf any grete cause or soden case arte her to do other wyse, and eche officer, yf nede be, shal haue one suster or mo depute to her, for to helpe her in her office, after the discrecion of the abbesso. Whan therfor the abbes wylle put any suster in to any office or oute, sche muste calle a chapter, and than fyrst of al telle the cause of the callinge, and after calle her by name, whom sche purposethe to put in or oute. Ande the suster callyd, anone sche schal ryse and come tofore the abbes. To whom the abbes, yf sche purpose to put her in office, schal say thus, "Suster N. N. I assign you this ministracion or occupacion," expressing it by name. And whan the suster herethe this, sche schal lye downe prostrate at the abbes fete. To whom the abbes schal say thus, "What say ye?" Sche schal answer thus, "I aske grace and licence to speke." The abbes schal say to her agene, "Rysethe up." And than the suster schal ryse and mekly say, in suche wyse, under fewe wordes, knelynge, "Moder, ye knowe ryghte wele myne undiscrecion and unhabilitie to execute this chargeful occupacion; I beseeche you therfor that ye put not this charge up on me, but that in alwyse I may be excused therof, and some other suster endowed with the discrecion and experience may be charged therewith." To whom the abbes, yf sche be utterly determyned to haue her in the seyd office, schal than say thus, "Notwithestondyng your excuse that ye make, or schal make here in, I wyll that ye accepte obediently this charge, and to your power and tynnyng fulfyl it effectuelly, wherfor presume ye nomore to excuse you here in, but go to your place." Neuertheles, yf ther loage any keys to that office, the abbes schal deliuer hem to her openly, or sche go from her. And whan sche is bode to go to her place, sche schal fyrste enclyne, and so go to her owne place, as she is wonte, but yf it be a newe priore, as it is expressed in the lvi chapter of this boke. The suster that schal be discharged schal be called forth as it is seyd before, and in her that hath wele fulfilled her obedience and occupacion, the abbesse schal say in suche wyse, "Suster N. N. I thanke you hartly that ye haue so diligently and so effectually fulfilled the mynistracion that I committed to you to execute. But for certeyn causes mouynge me, I wyll prync other in the same, how diligent they wyl be, and what habilitie they haue; and therfor I discharge you therof." Sche berynge this, anone sche schal fal downe prostrate at the abbes fete, offryng herselfe to kesse them, which the abbes in nowyse schal suffer, but rather put down her ryghte hande, that sche may kisse that, and yf sche had any keys perteynyng to her office, sche schal there openly deliuer them to the abbes, whiche done, sche schal, by the commaundement of the abbes, take her own place due to her regular profusion, that sche had be priore in office. And whan the abbes hathe dyscharged a suster of any office that keys long to, sche schal not comenly enter in to suche an office withe oute the presence and assistance both of her that is discharged and of her that is newly charged ther withe, that it may trewly und veryly be knowen in what state it is delyuered and taken. And yet for the more certeynte the abbes schal take withe her some other sustres that have mooste experience in suche occupacions for to bere witnes. If any suster be discharged of her office for open negligence, the abbes schal say to her in suche wyse, "Suster N. N. I put zow in to suche an occupacion of grete truste, and ze haue had zow negligently and euell ther in. I dyscharge zowe therof, purposyng by Goddes grace to prouyde to the couente of a better." Sche heryng thys, amone sche schal fal down prostrat at the abbes fete, and whan sche is commaunded to ryse, sche schal openly and mekly, knelyng, knowlage her negligence and unprofitable demenynges, and forthewith aske mercy and forzeuenees of the abbes and of al the sustres, than to be punysched as the trespass askethe.

None schal be sette in any office or occupacion of charge but suche as the abbes may suerly truste; that thei kan and may, and wyl do, and kepe the charge that is leyd up (on) them. Whiche eueriechone owe to be of goode name and fame amonge her sustres and brethren, and of laudable lyfe and conuersacion, swete and gentel in wordes, softe and prudente in answers, besy and patient in labours, sad and honeste in maners, not drunkelewe nor wastres, nor wretheful, nor troublous, not lyghte and veyne in wordes, nor overgrete spekers, but sober, demewre, and chereful to speke to, discrete, prayble, wyse, sad, circumspect, and well auysed in zeuyng and takyng of answers, knowyng to whom, what, how moche, and how, they delyuer or receyue any thing inwarde or owtwarde, and of whom; whos sadnes is not wonte to suffer them notably to square in ther demenyng. In distribution of necessaryes to the sustres and brethren they shal not serue one alle of the beste, another al of the werste, nor for any fauour zeue one to moche, another to lytel, but they shal delyuer to eche after ther uede withoute grudgyng and accepcion of persones, con-syderyng and ponderying more the infinite and nede than the fauour of any person, so yet that the eldest of eche degre be euer serued of the beste. When they haue not redy atte hande that is asked, they owe to excuse the goodly and honestly promytting to purvey for it as sone as thei may in al goodly haste. They that nede any thyng, they owe not to aske it commaundyngly, or with thretynge, but goodly, withe a maner reuerence praying to haue that is nedeful to them withe other circumstances expressed tofore in the thryd chapter of this boke. And thof they haue not forthewithe that they aske, or yf it be denyed hem, yet they owe not to take thys greuously, but suffer paciently, for, as saythe Seynte Austyn, "it is better to nede somewhat than to haue more than nedothe;" and Seynte Paule had a grete joy to be vexed withe hunger, thyrste, colde, and nakednes. Unreasonable or euille askers, or yf any aske any thyngs not to be asked, the officers schal not make them sory, but they may answer thus to them curteisly, "Suster or brother, yf I scholde take you that ye aske, I trowe, I scholde offende in the delyueraunce therof, and ye in the receyvyng. Neuertheles, late the souerayne say, and ye schal haue withe a goode wyll that ye desire." And so by suche demenyng and sufferance, eche persone schal be in pees, and eche officer kepe her office witheoute grete offence. Aboute the soke also, they owe to euer attendaunte and diligente, and do ther deuers that the goodes of the monastery be not spended in waste, nor deuoured and loste, wherby almes to the poer and vedy myghte be withdrawen or abated thorough ther neglygenc, knowyng for certeyn that ther is not the leste threde in the clothe, nor the lest crom in the lofe, nor the ferdynge in the tylle, nor the droppe in the vesselle, but that they schal accuse the owners at the day of dome, yf they be mys spended. Wherfor thei owe not to receiue, nor pay, nor spende any thyng outewarde or inwarde unprofitably, withe oute special or general licence, assignement, commaundement, or sufferance of the abbes, wytyngly and expressly made. Hanyng a besy warden, that whan they be kalled to rekenyng they be not to seke for to answer to euery thyng clerly with oute any colour, and feythfully that hathe be taken to them, how it is spended, and therfor it is nedeful to them that they kepe wele ther skrowes and bylles indented, lest any thyng go oute of mende. Forthermore, they owe to haue grete warnes, that they neuer speke alone otherwyse than the rewle suffrethe, and this under the perel of ther sowles. Neuertheles, whan they may gete no suster to here them, and the mater is suche that it may not conveniently be taryed withe oute hurte of the monastery, than in suche cases the abbes may licence them to speke as the mater requyrethe, in softe and fewe wordes alone, in tho thynges only that concerne the wele and honeste of the place. But none schal than enquiry after tydynges how the world goethe, or how he or sche farethe, or any suche other thyng concernyng in any wyse ther own solace and comforte, withe oute one herer at the leste, after the forme of the rewle, and as it expressed in the thryd chapter of thes addicions confirmed by the buschops injuncions.

CHAPTER XIV.

Of the places wher in silence is streytly to be kepte.

In the churche, quyer, freytour, cloyster, dortour, and in the howse of secrete nede, silence is euer to be kepte. Neuertheles, whan case comethe of very nede, the souereyne may dispense withe that silence in any of the seyde places, and that only after the mater requyrethe, and no farther. Also silence after some convenience is to be kepte in the lybrary, whyls any suster is there alone in recordyng of her redyng; also in the waschyng howse in tyme of waschyng, but yf it be in a styлле voyce for thynges necessary to be spoken, or for to be asked or had. Also in the chapter, after the begynnyng of the seconde peile to the collacion, but yf it be also in a styлле voyce for a thyng necessary, honeste, and profitable; and in al place nyghe to the churche. And therfor whan any thyng is to be asked or spoken, notyfyed, or charged in tyme or place of strayte silence, this schal be done by sygnes and not by wordes, yf it may not be expressed with any usual sygne. If it may not be so expressed, nor the place chaunged where it fallethe, than it may be expressed in a styлле voyce and fewe wordes, as it is seyde before.

[And silence is also to be kept in the belfray in tyme of ryngyng.]

Of Stylnes.

Furthermore, for ther schal be asked a strayte rekenyng of every ydel worde, therfor moche speche is to be fled of alle, namely, after meles, for than lyghtly the tunge syndethe mater to speke and trespass. And for sylence dewly kepthe is a synguler worthyppe to God, it it is ryghte that not only greuous speche be kytte away, but also that the tunge be restreyned withe the brydel of taciturnite or stylnes, whan it is leful to speke for the grete profite of silence, thof the speche be goode, for that they kanne moder ther tinges beste be mooste wyse, wherfor the speche of alle schal be meke and lowe, soft and demure, swete and trowe, euer of spiritual thynges, and of very necessaryes after the rewle, delytyng euer rather to here and be styлле, than to speke, and not use to answer but to thynges asked; and whan the sustres and brethren come to speke to gyder attes crates, they schal euer be lycensed, and associat after the rewle on eyther party, and they schal speke sadly and religiously that is to be spoken, not multiplyeng unprofitable wordes, nothing to purpos, nor dissolutly crye oute with a loude voyce, but softly, soberly, and withe a quyet schortenes, they schal say that is to be seyde, and sone take ther leue, and go ther weyes. Whan the sustres in convenient tymes and places speke any to other, they schal haue ther handes withe in ther cowlde sleues, or els, honestly and religiously joyned togyder, holde hem before them; none of hyghenesse schal thou another in spekyng, but eche schal speke reuerently to other, the jonger namely to the elder. Nor none in comen speche schal say thys is myne, but thys is oures, save eche owethe to say of hys carnal frendes thys is my fader, or my moder, or my coen, and of hys synne, thys is my synne. Whan they speke to outewarde persone or persones, they schal behaue them as it is seyde of spekyng inwarde to sustres and brethren, but withe moche more warenes, not medlyng ther speche with seculer fables and fryvoles, nor yet gladly here no suche thynges, but yf any frowles thyng be spoken they schal be styлле, dysymulyn as yf they herde it not, and eyther they schal speke of thynges more profitable, or els sone bydde them fare wele, and go from them. If they here any scurilite, or any other worldly vanyte, they mooste haue grete warenes, that they telle not this to other sustres, but schewe forthwithe that they disdeyne and lothe to here suche thynges, schewyng themselfe in al ther wordes, gestes, and maners, that they be the very spowes of Criste, thynkyng that they be euer in hys gracious presence, and haue drede to offende hys bonignte that is presente ouer alle.

Also they schal haue warnes in alwyse that they speke not withe ther syngers whan they schewe any thyng, that is, that they exercise non inordinate sygne of unstableness, ffor how be it that sygnes be necessarily ordeyned for to exclude occasion of ydel, vayne, superflue, and unprofitable speche, yet it is neuer lesful to use them witheoute some reson and profitable nede, ffor ofte tyme more hurtethe an euil sygne than an euil worde, and more offence it may be to God. The grete festes that the sustres may speke in to the seculers, be al tho festes of sayntes ordeyned by the chirche to be kepte as hyghe as the sonday.<sup>a</sup>

If any sustres frendes desire to se her, the abbes schal not lyghtly graunte thys but seldom in the yere, but yf the same suster haue a wylle to be seen of her dere and honeste frendes. And it is gode that the abbes take counsell of the general confessoure, and know by hym whan sche schal open the wyndowe, for he is conseruatour of the order, and owethe to take hede that al poyntes of the rewle be kepte. Whan any sustres schal be seen, the abbes schal warne them that namely than, they behaue them godely and religiously in countynaunce, in chere, and in al ther menynges. Neuertheles, yf they wyl make themselfe a grete crowne in heuen, late other se them, and they see none, ffor so it is redde in the lyues of holy faders, that whan the moder of one came to se her sone, he zede oute to her wyngyng that sche scholde see hym, but for sothe he wolde nott see her in any wyse. And it is seyde in our Sauours rewle, that yf the wyndowe be not opened, so moche the more plenteuous rewarde is promysed to them in tyme to come.

Moreover, for by the outewarde bodely menyng is ofte knowne the inward disposicion of the soule, they owe to moderate al ther bodely behaour in suche wyse that they neuer excede the bowndes of honeste neyther in laughyng, stondyng, saytyng, nor goyng; ffor, as saythe the wyse man, the arayment of the body, dissolute laughynge, and the entres of a person, schew what he is. And Salomon saythe, "the apostata goethe frownyng withe the mowthe, tramplethe and fyddlethe withe the fete, twynklethe with the eyen, and spekethe withe hys fyngers."

None therfor schal use presumptuously to laughe ouer moche or oute of mesure dissolutly, but whan the souereyne, or any of the elder sustres begyn to laughe upon any other suster or austres by way of recreation, curtesy, wyllc, and very loue and charite, that they smyle or laughe ajene soberly.

Of stondyng.

Wher so euer they stonde, namely in diuynе seruysе in the chirche, they schal not stonde up on oo fote alone, holdyng up that other, nor one ouer another, nor yet holde ther chynnes or chekes in ther handes, lenyngе notably with ther bakkes or armes, nor caste oute ther armes or handes, nor schrugge withe the scholders, but they schal stonde up ryghte, holdyng ther handes before them honestly withe in ther manteles or cowle sleues, unnethes lenyngе to the stalles, but yf nede compelle them to do other wyse.

Of syltynge regularly.

Also, whersomeuer they sytte they schal sytte up ryghte, gaderyngе the extremetys of ther mantels and cowles aboute hem that they flete nott abrode, holdyng ther handes withe in ther cowle sleues in places of silence, and not stretche oute ther legges to ferre, nor ley one kne ouer another, but cover ther fete honestly under ther clothes, and not sytte fyddyngе withe hem. And whan they sytte betwene two sustres, they shal sytte so ordinatly and so directly, that neyther they haue ther faces to that one, nor ther bakkes turned any dele to that other, nor yet caste lyghtely ther hedes aboute, nor lene to one syde more than to another.

In ther goyngе also, alle mooste behaue them so regularly and honestly, that they go nomore on the ryght syde than on the lefte. Not to faste, nor to softe, witheoute rennyng and harde contracte, vowes, infamy, executry, heresy, and suche other; also, yf sche desyre thys religion principally for God, or for her own ease, or for any preuy sekeneas or impotency, or els, yf schame or payne of worldly aduersite, or any suche other thyng compellethe her ther to. And after thys for the thryd thyng she schal telle her of the dures of the religion. That is to say, contempte of the worlde, forgetyng of fader and moder, and of al worldly frendschyp, but as the rewle suffrethe and the chirche determynethe, moche fastyng, many water dayes, grete watche, erly ryayng, longe seruyse, dayly labour, streyte sylence, loweste place, harde commaundementes of the souereyne, redy obedience, forsakyng of proper wylle, pacience in aduersite, sufferauce of alle scharpe correccionen, and many suche other, whiche may lyghtely be suffred for a whyle, but for to contynewe for terme of lyfe, it is harde werke to some. To the whiche thynges, yf sche be not agreable, the abbess schal honestly auoyde her. If the abbes thynke her disposed to thys religion, she schal here her habilitie in voyce, syngyng and redyng, whiche known, sche schal byd her abyde up on an answer in to another conuenient tyme, tyll sche haue had communycacion withe her sustres, ffrom whom in thys case sche may hyde nothyng for fauour or drede, or for thretenyng of any persone of what power of dignete that ener he be. After thys, the couente syttyng in the chapter howse, the abbes schal aske of eche suster in order by name, begynnynge at the eldeste, wheyther they wylle haue her admytted to the jere of profe or no. And yf the more sadder party answer "nay," tellyng resonable causes why, the abbes before alle the couente, or a parte of them, schal geue a goodly answer, and late her goo. And than the chauntres schal do thys to be wryten, that no suche be admytted in tyme to come; but yf the sadder parte of the couente be other wyse auysed, whiche also is to be obserued of hem, that wylle not renounce ther jere of profe whan they be requyred regularly, and also of them that haue habilitie to religion, but yet ther entres in to thys religion is not expedient. If the more holer and sadder party graunte to haue her admytted to the jere of profe, the abbes schal haue suche maner wordes to the seyd persone, "Doughter, ze haue cause to zelde preysynges to God, I have comenyd with my sustres, and I fynde hem ryghte glad of zour holy purpose, and agreable to zoure desire." And than sche schal say thus, be ther one, be ther many of them. " In the name of oure lorde Jhesu Criste, and of hys moste holy moder oure Lady Saynte Mary, of Saynte Birgitte, Saynt Austyn, and of Alle Sayntes, and in the name of the hole congregacion of susteres and brethren, and in myne own name, I admitte þowe to þoure þere of profe, after the tenour of the rewle of Saynte Savour; procede the therfor, and assay yourselfe how þe may accorde with some maner observaunces of the seyd holy rewle now thys þere, and after a thre monthes come agene un to vs, and in the mene tyme we schal take a more deliberacion of þow." Sche heying thys, schal þere thankynges to God, and to al the congregacion, ande after thys go with a lowe hede, and forehede couered, lyuyng under the obedience of the abbes. And it schal be seyd to her. 1. That sche kepe the tymes sette of comyng agene. 2. And also sche muste be enformed how sche schal demene and preue herself in the seyd þere with some observaunce, acording to the rewle. 3. Also sche must be counseled to speke with the general confessor amonge, for helthe of her soule. 4. And the abbes shal haue to her wordes and commaundementes some tyme of scharpenes, to preue her patience and obedience. 5. And also the rewle and statutes are to be redde to her in tho poyntes only that concerne her persone, that sche may knowe wher to sche comethe. Forthermore, the abbes in the mene whyle may enquire, or do to be enquired more diligently of other persones that know her, of her lyfe and conuersacion, desyringe, if nede be, lettres of testymony ther up on, so that the day of her admyttinge, and monthe with the þere of oure lorde, be putte in wrytyng by the chauntresse. Whan sche cometh agene the secunde tyme, the abbes schal examen her, and say to her, as it is expressyd in the rewle. Ande so sche schal do whan sche comethe agene the thrydde tyme, rehersyng to her agene, yf nede be, the dures and scharpenes of the order. Neuertheles the seyd secunde and thryd comynges agen ar not to be understonde of eche person admytted to the þere of profe, but of them that dwelle fer from the monastery, and kepe not the seyd þere in the courte withoute. And of them, moste of alle, of whose habilitie, lyfe, and conuersacion the covente yet doute the, wherof they owe to be certifyed in alwyse, or ever they fullythe consente in to any persone, for in thys hangethe alle the weght of the þere of probacion, whiche, whan it schal begyn, or whan it schall ende, thys is lefte to the arbyterment of the abbes. If any kepe her zere of profe in the courte witheoute-forthe, and be not of power by no mene to pay for her borde, skole, and other costes perteynyng to her profession, sche oweth to be founde of the monastery. If sche or els her frendes be of power to synde her, it is reson that thei pay for alle her necessaryes, and for alle the costes in the day of her profession, purueyng for her bokes, beddyng, profession, ryng, dyuer offeryng and suche other, whyche may be done lawfully, withe oute prejudice of the rewle, so that it come of ther own frewille, withe oute any counaunte made tofore agens the rewle; but yet, be they ryche, be they pore, that schal entre in to thys religion, ther regular habyte schal be ordeyned of the covente of the costes of the place.

Whan the tyme is come that the abbes and covente be fullyche determyned of the day of profession of any suster or sustres, the abbes in conveniente tyme before schal assygne a sad suster, that longe hathe be experte in regular obseruances, for to enforme them how they schal behave them in the day of ther profession. Assygnynge also another sad suster for to stonde by and see and here only, but not to speke by ryght lytel, withe oute special licence of the abbes: fyrste, they are to be enformed how they schal come to the chirrhe dore bare fote, but yf the abbes, in tyme of grete colde, commaunde otherwyse, and there to hyde the buschop, reuerently knelyng to hym whan he comethe, so to pronounce distynctly and openly the wordes of ther professayon, tofore wryten in a skrowe. Secunde, how they also reuerently and devoutly knelynge schalle beholde the rede baner, how they schal make the sygne of a crosse in ther skrowes, and receyue her rynges, how they schal make ther offryng att the auter, enclynyng bothe before and after, and turne religiously to ther former places agene. Thryd, how they schal spedyly do of ther seculer clothes, and withe oute any taryeng, do on ther regular habite, knelyng whan they take, and stondyng whylste they do it upon them. Fourth, how they schal fasten ther crownes up on ther veyles. Fyfte, how they schal take ther longe veynes, and lyeng prostrat, say ther Confiteor, whan the buschop assygnethe them with oo voyce togyder, and how they schal ryse and receyue our lord of the buschops handes, and kuele ther stylle tyl "Veni Creator Spi-

ritus" be ended. Sexte, how they shal folow the buschop to the dore, where they schal entre, and how they schal knele down, and take hys blyssynge, whan he hathe delyvered hem into the abbes handes. Seventhe, how they schal folow the abbes into the chapter, and receyve the sygne of pece, and how they shal behaue them in the freytour, at the table, and other places. Also prouision is to be made, or they come, in what syde they schalle kepe in the chirche, chapter, freytour, dourtour, and in al other places, that they fynde noo thyng wherof they myght take any euil ensample.

Noo renouncyng of the zere of profe, nor any bonde of any party to other is to be made in any wyse, but the day goyng before the profession day, or els in the selfe profession day, whiche is moste syker for dyuers casuelteys that myghte falle in the mene tyme, ffor after the renouncyng of both partys regularly, they may aske ther syndyng of the monastery lawfully as longe as they lyue, thof they be neuer professed ther in, whiche, be longe processe, myghte turne to importable charge to the monastery. They, therfor, enformed of the maner of renouncyng, and suerte had of the buschops comyng, the abbes and conente schal go to the crates in a tyme moste conueniente, and they that schal be professed knelyng at the wyndowe, than beyng open, the abbes schal say to them, be ther many, or be ther but one of them, thus, "What aske ye." The fyrst of them schal answer, sayng in thys wyse, "I aske in the wey of charite, that I may be receyued to lyue withe zowe in thys holy congregacion alle the dayes of my lyfe." And than, yf ther be mo, eche of them schal say thus, "I aske the same for myne owne parte." And than the abbes, yf nede be, may reherse compendiously what hathe be seyde to them from the begynnyng of the zere of profe, concludyng thus at the laste ende, "Doughtres, ye moste knowlage zowe dewly admitted to your zere of profe, and sufficiently proued in the same, and that ye holde zowe fullyche contente ther wythe. Renouncyng it and al other zeres of profe whiche be wonte to be had in other religiona withe in the monastery, for entres in to thys religion, after the tenour of the rewle of Saynte Sauyour. Promyttynge for to abyde the day of your profession, and for to accepte withoute contradiccion suche a day as we schal assigne zowe, and mekly for to obey after your power to the seyde rewle, addicions, and statutes, alle and som, lyke as your predecessours haue done to fore zowe." Than sche, or any other suster for her at her prayer, schal answer thus, after her skrowe, "In nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti. Amen. I, N. N. moued and styrred, I hope of God, perpetually to serue hym in holy religion, and specially in thys religion of Saynt Sauyours, after my manyfolde desyres, and often prayers to your ryghte deuoute and honorable ladyschyp, and to the grete haboundaunte charite of alle my ladyes your sustres, knowlage me of your grete graces dewly admytted in to the zere of profse, suche a day of suche a monthe and suche a zere of our lorde (and suche a zere of myne age'), and sufficiently proued in the same after the rewle of Saynte Sauyours and statutes of thys monastery. Whiche zere, withemore ouer now passed, yf it please zowe to do the same, I accepte for a zere of sufficiente probacion, and renounce alle and eche other probacion for entres in to thys religion, notwithstanding that any custome in other religion, or comen lawe, sownde or be in to the contrary; and wher your reuerent ladyschyp desyrethe that I schalle withoute contradiccion accepte and abyde suche a day as ze wyl asygue me for my profession, withe goddys grace and your supportacion, I accepte it with al myne herte, and promytte to abyde it to my power. Also, reuerent lady, I, purposyng to be a childe of obedience, promytte veryly to obey and obserue the seyd rewle, awtentyk declaracion and interpretation of the same, or of any parte therof, addicions, pryuyleges, ordinary injunccions, local statutes, and alle other ordynaunces, wylfully admytted, and resonably approued, by the comen consente of sustres and brethren, professed to fore me, wylst I lyue, as ferre as my powers wyl stretch. In to wytnes of alle and eche of the seyd premysses I have made my sygno manuelle in thys present wrytyng."

Whiche sygne may be made to fore for lettynge of tyme, and yf ther be mo than one, eche of them schal say as it is expressed in other writynges aboute the renounsing of the jere of profe, and after thys the abbes schal renounce also the seyde jere for her parte sayng thus as wele to one as to alle.

"Almyghty Godde, whyche is endytour of our rewle, conferme zow in thys holy purpos, ande I, in the name of our Lorde Jhesu Criste, and of hys mooste holy moder our lady Saynte Mary, and in the name of the hole congregacion of sustres and brethren, and in myne own name, renounce also the seyde jere, and consente in to zow for to receyue you to be professyd in thys monastery to morne, but yf any laful cause of lettynge fal in the mene whyle."

To the whiche wordes al the couente schal encline in token that they consente to the same. But noo suster schal presume to speke ther moche with oute special licence of the abbes. This done, one of them schal say in thys wyse,

"I gelde thankynges to God and to hys blyssed moder Mary, alway virgyn, to Saynt Birgitte and to zoure ryghte reuerent ladyschyp, and to the hole congregacion of thys monastery, and thys grace by zow schewed to me, I mekely accepte." If ther be mo other by and by, schal say thus, "I do the same for myne own parte." And aftyr thys they schal kease the scrowe, and withe ther own handes, delyuer it in to the abbes handes.

[Before the day of profession of any brother, provision is to be made for hys celle, and for al other necessaryes longyng to hym, and that every place be clene and honeste, that he fynde nothyng wherof he may take any ensample of enyll.

Also he [the mynyster of the sextry], or els another lay brother, schal purvey that ther lakke no holy water at schauyng of the newe brother or brethren. If the buschop diocesan or the archbuschop of Cauntyrbery make the profession, al the bellys schal be rongen at hys fyrst comyng and last goyng, but neuer for none other buschop, archbuschop, nor suffrygan, but yf the confessor commaunde other wyse.]

CHAPTER XVI.

Of the obseruaunce aboute and in the day of profession.

Moreouer the sexteynes schal ordeyne be fore the profession the bere with fayre newe erthe, and make a crosse therupon, withe a smothe lathe or withe some other instrumente made ther for of purpos, that it may wele be seyn fer of, and thys here sche schal sette forthe at the dore, that it may be borne oute in conuenient tyme.

Also it is gode that eche persone be professsed in ther own arayment that they used in the worlde, and not in borrowed gere, nevertheles, thys is left to the discrecion of the abbes and general confessour, both for the sustres and brethren.

[On eche profession day after morowe masse, the hygh autyr schal be arayd as it is wonte in doble festys, except reliques, and yf it be sonday, the water schal be halowed after the same masse. Before the sermon, yf ther be any, the grete bell schal be tollyd xiii strukes to the same aboute the laste ende of the sustrys last houre, and at ende of the sermon, or at least er the buschop begyn the profession, al the belles schal be ronge to hygh masse ij miserere while, and than the ryngers schal hye them fast to chirche, and stonde amonge ther brethren at the gettya in procession wyse, euery man in hys order, kepyng ther systh, and ther countynaunce saddly and religiously. When the buschop entreth, the crosse berer of that wyke schal take the rede baner, and bere it to the southe syde of the hygh auter, and sette it wher it shal stonde al the masse tyme, and the ij taperers of the same wyke schal take the two torches, and folowe the banerer al thre in surplys, and sette them wher they schal bren al the masse tyme. After hem schal folow al the buschops' mynystrys, he comyng behynde, and so goynge in to the reuestry. And whan the chaunter begynneth masse, foure sustres assygned be the abbes, or foure lay brethren, yf the profession be of brethren assygned be the confessour, schal open the dore in the cloyster syde, and in ther regular habite bere oute betwene hem in ther handes religiously two before and two behynde the seyde beere that is spoken of afore, and sette it before the newe brethren, that they may beholde it. And than they schal inclyne to the awter, and turne in agene in to the cloyster by the same dore, after the seyde foorme, and schett the dore after them, hygheng himself to the church as fast as they may, so that euery brother do hys office aboute the auter in holdyng of tapers, sensor, torches, and in tollynges after the gosbel, and att leuacion as they be wonte, takyng bede diligently that euery thyng be redy at hande, and nothing to seke. The keper of hyghe masse, or els another sad lay brother, depute by the con-season, schal be in hys surpys at the masse tyme, and attende diligently that no thyng wante, and he must take hede to the buschops see, that it be honestly arayd, and sette it in hys dewe place anone after the fyrst collectes of the masse, leying a clothe of gold or of sylke in the buschop's lappe, nerhande down to hys fete, and take al away whan tyme is. He also must hold the boke to the buschop, knelyng or stondyng, as the case requireth, and bere it from that one syde of the autyr to that other, whan it is nede. After the offeryng, the lay brother that kepeth the chaumbre, beyng in hys surpys schal brynge the habite to the autyr before the buschop to be blyssyd, and he must delyuer to the subdekon euery persons habite by and by with all thynges that longe ther to wrappyd in the same, and take goode hede that none haue others gere.

Abowte the last ende of Agnus Dei, the mynyster of the sextry schal sprede a clothe, up on the which the professours must lygh prostrat whylst the letany is in syngyng after masse. And whan they receyue the sacrament, two lay brethren in surpys schal holde the towel before hem, one knelyng at one ende, and another att other, so that no brother do any mynystacion aboute the autyr, neuer withe oute a surpys at the leste. Whan Veni Creator is bygonne after the comonyng, the seyd four sustres or foure lay brethren that bare oute the bere before masse, schal brynge it in agene by the same way, and after the same soorme in ther regular habite. And whan Veni Creator is endyd, the two taperers in surpys schal take the seyd ij torches afore expressyd, and bere them before the professours, behynde the buschop, folowyng hym to the dore, by the whyche the professour or professours schal entyr. And whan the buschop hath delyuered hem in to ther souereynes handys, they schal go thens and quenche the seyd torches, and hie them to the chapter hows in ther regular habite, yf the profession be of the brethren syde, kepyng the same obseruaunce ther as the clerkys do.]

The keeper of the high mass must se that nothing lakke aboute the awter, and se that the bisschop chair be sette att the frst collect of the masse anenst the myddell of the awter, so that the mynystres may go esely betwene it and the awter. And so that ye haue a bawdryk be redy to lay it with reuerence in the bisshops lappe whan he is set downe, so that it may come doun to his fete. Than loke that ye be redy to holde the boke to hym, knelyng, takyng gode hede to his commandments. And whan he hath redde that he wele than forthwith be redy with wyne and water to the mynystres, knelyng asidelyngs afore the bisshop and mynystres, for to delyuer them redy to ther handes at ther will, and that done, make redy for censyng afore the gospell, and so that the deske, with the gospeler, be set atte south ende of that awter anenst his dore there asidelyngs a fowre fote. And whan the "Crede" is doon, be redy ayeyn with cense and aftirward holde the boke to the bisshop, whan the habittes shal be halewed, and haue ye ther holy water redy. And whan the professed be called up ayeyn, after there offryng be redy to holde the boke to the bysshop stondyng, your reuerence to hym done afore, and if he sitte knele ye bifore hym. And whan thei shalbe called to receyue there crownes, be redy ayeyn to holde the boke to the bisshops benedictions afore "Agnus Dei." And as sone as "Ite missa est" is songe, set the stole or chayr there as ye sette it at at firste, and ley the boke upon it knelyng, and therewith toche it with your fyn-gers reuerently, or the chayr, and kysse them so knelyng. And after, whan the letany is songe almoste, and thei bigyne "Ut Episcopus et Abbates nostros," et cetera, with "Te rogamus nos" be redy at hand to holde the boke to the bisshop, and after he haue said iii verses, than toward the professed lay the boke ayeyn on the chaer, and after remoue the stole, whan thei shalbe commined. And whan thei be commined, set the chayr ayeyn, and ley the boke thereon, and whan Veni Creator is done, take the boke and here it bifore the bisshop and his mynystres in procession wise to the profession dore, and there holde the boke to the bisshope, and there an ende.

Forthermore to fore any be presented to the buschop for to be consecrate, thei schal be klypped the here by the abbes, after the maner of other monyales under thys forme. The abbes and couent as many as may folowyng her, schal go to the crates the day tofore the profession after our lady masse, or after complen, or any other tyme moste conueniente, wher they schal stonde in order religiously, with the al maner of sadnes, with-oute grete sterynge or noyse, that other be edyfyed by ther religious behauynge, so that the abbes be in the myddes of the wyndowe, and the elder sustres nexte her on euery syde. The sexteyn schalle brynge forthe holywater and a fayre kerchief with a klene payre of scheres, or scissours. And the wyndowe opened, and ther here dressed honestly behynde ther hedes, the abbes schal sprynge holy water up on ther hedes, sayng thus, be ther many, or be there but one, "Aqua benedicta sit vobis salus et vita. In nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti." The couente schalle answer, "Amen." And than the abbes schal say este sones, "Almyghty God, to whom ye shal now be spoused, moyster your sowles with the dewe of hys holy spirite, and marke you with the token of hys swete breunnyng love." The couente schal answer "Amen." And than, whylste the abbes clyppethe ther hedes, the couent shal say ayde for ayde thys ympne, "Veni Creator Spiritus," tretably and distynctly, whiche ended, and ther hedes alle clypped, the abbes and couente schal say thys *proce*s folowynge:—The abbes, "Emitte spiritum tuum et creabuntur." The couente, "Et renovabis faciem terre." The abbess, "Salvam fac ancillam tuam." The couente "Deus meus, sperantem in te." The abbes, "Domine exaudi." The couent, "Et clamor." The abbes, "Oremus, Deus, qui corda fidelium Sancti Spiritus illustratione docuisti, da nobis in eodem spiritu recta sapere et de ejus semper consolacione gaudere. Per Christum dominum nostrum. Amen."

In the day of profession, all the howres schal be doon before hyghe masse, ande whan the buschop is entred in to the brethres quyer, foure sustres assygned by the abbes schal brynge oute religiously betwene them in ther handes the seyde bere, a lytel sette up from the erthe, two before and two behynde, and sett it downe fayre and easly before the newe professed sustres. Ande inclynacion made toward the hyghe auter, they schal turne azyne in to the monastery, the dore to be schet after them, and after the same forme they schal brynge it in azyne after masse, whan the seyde sustres be comyned, or whan thys ympne "Veni Creator" is bygon, and in synngnyng. Whiche ended, the abbes schal see that the seyde dore be sette open to the buschop azyne he schal come to the same dore, sche stondyng there with al the couent procession wyse, the eldste nexte the dore, and the sustres take in, and the dore schette, the chauntres schal begyn thys ympne, "Sponse juugete filii," and then alle schal go to the chapter procession wyse, the youngest before and the abbes after, with the newe professed sustres folowyng her, the chauntres assygnyng them where they schal knele before the abbes in myddes of the chapter. And the seyd ympn, with the response, "Regnum mundi" and antem "O jucundissimam" ended, the abbes, turnyng to the mageste, with al the couente, schal say thys preces folowyng in a soft voyce, with note, "Salvam fac, Domine, ancillam tuam, Deus meus sperantem in te. Mitte ei, Domine, auxilium de sancto, et de Syon tuere eam. Domine, exaudi orationem meam, et clamor meus ad te veniat. Oremus. Deus, qui famulam tuam a seculi vanitate conversam ad superne vocacionis accendis amorem, pectori illius purificando illabere, et gratiam qua in te perseveret infunde, ut proteccionis tue munita presidio quod te donante promisit te juvante implere valeat, et sue promissionis executrix effecta ad ea que perseverantibus in te dignatus es promittere pertingere mereatur. Per Christum dominum nostrum. Amen." Thys done, and al the couente sette, the abbes may say to them what sche wylle, and than the chauntres schal lode them to the abbes to take the token of pees, or kysse of charite, and afterwarde to the pryores, and to al other sustres, fyrst at one syde, and than at other, and after make them to knele azone where they kneled to fore, so that both the zeuers and takers of the seyd token of pece schal take eche other by the handes, a lytle enclynnyng ther hedes eche to other; but to the abbes they schal knele down to the grounde. Noo speche is to be had there but of the souereyne, outake thes wordes, "ye be welles come," and "I thanke yowe."

Neuertheles, yf the tyme wylle suffise it, the abbes before the seyd kysse of pece, or els after, may exorte them in thys wyse, saynge thus, "Loo, doughtres, nowe remembrethe what ye haue take up on yowe, and see that lyke as ye haue chaunged your seculer habite, so ye nowe chaunge worldly maners and customs in to exercise of spiritual vertues, castynge away the olde garment of synne, and doynge up on yow the habite of oure Lorde Jhesu Criste. And principally labour ye to come to the begynnyng of our Lodes rewle, that is very mekenes, pure chastyte, and wylful pouerte, as it schal be tolde un to yowe by oure Lodes grace more expresly another tyme. Whiche rewle wylle that thes eghte dayes ye schal not be arted to any streytnes of the order, but that ze in the quyer stonde loweste, whiche I wyl that ze lowly observe, and that ze sytte lowest in the freytour, and keep silence to alle excepte to me and to the suster under whos gouernaunce ze schal be assygned to be; but if I zeue yowe special licence to speke. And thys is ordeyned to be kepte amonge us, that ze scholde the more bysyly study to lerne your regular obseruances, wher to ze muste be streytly bounde after the eight days of your profession. Be ze, therfor, the gode discipules of our lord Jhesu Criste, meke, softe, paciente and obediende, that so ze may fele the swetnes of religion, and be confermed in alle gode werkes. Amen." After thys, the abbes schal assygne them to suche a maystres or maystresses that by ensample of gode lyfe kan and may enforme them, and teche them the order to the helthe of the sowles by thes eght dayes, and after, in to tyme they be discharged of them agene in the ful chapter. Whiche, withr oute any contradiccion or excusacion schal mekely obey to the precepte of ther souereyne, and thes eght dayes they schal stonde by ther discipulesses in the churche, and sytte by them at the table, and go with hem or nyghe them in processions, so that echo of them schal enforme suche as be assygned to them in regular obseruances and holy disciplynes and doctrynes, charitably and tendably, as it is accordyng to euery persone, and as nede requyrethe, after the comandement of the souereyne. Neuertheles al thes viijte dayes they may be under the rewle of one maystres, yf the abbes wyl it so be.

"When the bishop (or another by his licence, or of any other who had the ordinary jurisdiction in that diocess) came to the gate of the church, and found the novice there kneeling, he addressed her, saying, 'Art thou free, and unfettered by any bond of the church, or of wedlock; of vow, or of excommunication?' To whom she answered, 'I am truly free;' the bishop then added, 'Doth not shame, or perchance grief of worldly adversity, urge thee to a religious profession, or perhaps the multitude of thy debts compels thee.' She answering, 'Neither grief nor shame moves me to this, but a fervent love of Christ, and I have already paid all my debts, according to my power,' then the bishop further added,

' Seekest thou ingress into this religion in the name of Jesus Christ, and in honor of his most holy mother the Virgin Mary?' She saying, ' I seek it,' the bishop introduced her into the church, saying, ' Behold, now, she worthily enters this religion.' And when she entered the church, a red banner was borne before her, on one side of which was represented the body of Christ crucified, and the image of the Blessed Virgin on the other; that the new bride, regarding the image of the new bridegroom suffering on the cross, might learn patience and poverty; and regarding the Virgin Mother, might learn chastity and humility. She, therefore, being introduced into the church, was placed before the doors of the church, and the bishop receding a little from her to another part, consecrated her ring. Two small torches being lighted, were carried before the banner, and continued burning during the celebration of the mass; the bishop saying this prayer, 'Omnipotens sempiterne Deus, qui desponsasti tibi sponsam novam in misericordia et miserationibus, benedic annulum istum; ut sicut exterius famula tua signum novæ sponsæ portat in manibus, sic interius fidem tuam, et caritatem portare mereatur. In nomine Patris, &c.' The ring being thereupon blessed, the bishop approached the handmaid of God, saying ' Thou oughtest to promise to God, and to me on his part, that thou wilt obey thy prelates, and live according to the rule of St. Augustine and the constitutions of the blessed Bridget to the end of thy life.' And the nun (or brother) to be received, answered, ' I, sister (or brother), N. do make profession and promise obedience to God omnipotent and the blessed Mary Virgin eternal, blessed Augustine, and blessed Bridget, and to thee bishop on their part, and to the abbess (or to the general confessor of the monastery, if he be a brother), and to thy successors; to live without property, and in chastity, according to the rule of St. Augustine and the constitutions of the blessed Bridget, in as far as they are not repugnant to the prerogative of the most illustrious King and the laws of the kingdom unto my death.' And then the bishop added, ' With such intention it becometh thee to pledge thy faith to God, and to vow that thou wilt not love any thing so entirely as thy God, and with so great a desire it becometh thee to assent to this.' Then she shall answer, ' I do assent in God with my whole heart and mind, offering myself to him in all simplicity of heart.' To whom the bishop replied,

‘ And I on the part of God omnipotent, and of his only begotten son, our Lord Jesus Christ, do assent for thee.’ After reading this prayer, ‘ Deus omnipotens Jhesus Christus, verus Deus et verus homo, qui in utero virginis descendere dignatus est, firmetur in anima tua et tu in ipso. In nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti.’ The bishop placed the ring upon the finger of her right hand, saying, ‘ I bless thee as a bride of God, and in the perpetual possession of this. In the name of the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost.’ After this the bishop advancing to the altar commenced singing Sancta Trinitas, the handmaid of God standing in the meantime below, near the sanctuary. But when he began the offertory, she made her offering at the altar, and immediately returned to her place. The offertory said, her vestments, which the rule required her to have prepared by the convent, was brought to the altar before the bishop, which he blessed, reading this prayer, ‘ Domine Jhesu Christe, qui non vis mortem peccatorum sed desideras penitentiam, quesumus clemenciam tuam, ut hæc vestimenta quæ in signum humilitatis et penitentiæ hæc famula tua ferre proponit, tu benedicere digneris, ut, vanitate hujus sæculi relicta, te per veram humilitatem unduere mereatur. In nomine Patris, &c.’ The vestments, therefore, being sanctified, one of the clerks called the handmaid of God to the altar before the bishop, who, walking barefooted, and putting off her external vestments before the altar, remained in a tunic only, ready to receive the consecrated habit. Thereupon the bishop invested her with the regular gown, saying, ‘ God omnipotent grant thee true penitence in thy conscience, and perfect contrition of heart. In the name of the Father, &c.’ When, however, she was invested with the hood, the bishop said, ‘ The Lord Jesus Christ, the hope of all Christians, give thee hope and confidence in thy mind, that so thou mayest hope for the mercy of God that thou mayest not forget his justice, and so thou shalt fear his severity, that thou shalt not forget his love and goodness. In the name of the Father, &c.’ The mantle being thereupon adapted, the bishop said, ‘ May the Lord God Omnipotent, of the principles of truth faith, establish and confirm thy soul in the true faith, and give thee to believe those things which are to be believed; and to persist unto the end in the good work begun. In the name of the Father, &c.’ Then the mantle being fastened with a wooden clasp, the bishop said, ' May our Lord Jesus Christ, who of his exceeding charity was for us whom he loved affixed to a cross of wood, and condemned to a most cruel death, fix thy soul, and transpierce it with the remembrance of his passion, that thy charity may burn for God alone, and the fire of divine charity embracing thee, give thee rest on his blessed arm upon which all Saints rest. In the name of the Father, &c.' Afterwards her head being covered with a cap, the bishop pinning it, said, ' Our Lord Jesus Christ be to thy soul a shade and refreshment, that no hurtful things may prevail against it. In the name of the Father, &c.' But the veil being put on, the bishop said, ' May the Lord Jesus Christ give to thy soul spiritual light and wisdom, that, as all earthly and hurtful things to thy soul may become dead to thine eyes, and the way which leadeth to heaven may shine before thy soul, inasmuch as thou mayest know him who hath chosen thee. In the name of the Father, &c.' These concluded, the handmaid of God returned to the place where she first stood, and the bishop continued his mass, who, when he came to that part of the mass, in which the priest, in the mass of matrimony, is accustomed to turn himself, and bless the bride and bridegroom, both the bishop himself and one clerk calling the handmaid of God to the altar, put on her the crown upon the veil, saying, ' May our Lord Jesus Christ establish his sign in thee, which I place upon thine head, and may he direct thy will in all things which thou hast vowed to me, that thou mayest be firm and constant, and that he may cause thee to be crowned with a crown of joy according to his good will, that thy soul may be inseparably united with him, who in three persons is one God. In the name of the Father, &c.' Then he pinned the crown, saying, ' May Jesus Christ fix of his love thy heart and soul, that they may not fear the incentives of any temptation. In the name of the Father, &c.' These being finished, the handmaid of God remained to her first place, until the end of the mass, which being finished, one of the clerks called her to the altar, saying, ' Proceed, spouse of Christ, to the altar of Christ.' She therefore proceeding humbled herself upon her face for pardon, and the bishop, kneeling, with his clerks, read the Litany, praying all Saints for the handmaid of God. The Litany finished, the bishop rising, approached the prostrate handmaid of God, and read over her the absolution of nuns, and the absolution thus received, she rising, took the sacrament, which taken, four sisters, the gates being opened by which the handmaid entered, went out quickly, and brought into the monastery the coffin which was ordered to be placed on the ground before the gate previous to the commencement of the mass. Then the bishop advancing to the same gate, the handmaid of God following with the two torches, and clerks chaunting the hymn 'Veni Creator Spiritus,' assigned her to the abbess (who was waiting for her at the gate of the convent), saying these words to the abbess, 'Behold, before God and All Saints, and in the face of Holy Church, I commend the soul of this spouse of God into the custody of thy hand, which, if it should become lapsed through thy negligence, her spouse Jesus Christ shall require it of thee. Preserve, therefore, and keep the deposited of God, that when a reason shall be required, thou mayest restore her more holy than holy thou didst receive her.' To whom the abbess answered, 'This is a great treasure and difficult labour, most dear father, nor does my strength suffice thereunto; but, nevertheless, aided by thy prayers, and confiding in the help of God, I shall do what thou commandest;' and thus the handmaid of God consequently introduced, the gates were shut, and she was immediately led to the chapter, and thereupon for eight days exempted from any discipline, but stood at the bottom of the choir. The eight days, however, being completed, she was bound like the rest to the observance of the order; and accordingly was placed last in the choir and at table."

CHAPTER XVII.

Eighte dayes fullyche complete of enery profession, the chapter belle shal be ronge, and the chapter holde as it is woute, yf it be thursday. Or els, after the ronyng of the seyde belle, al the couente gadered togyder in the chapter, the susteres new professyd at the commaundmente of the abbes shal be brought in by one of ther maystresses before the abbes, fyrst inclynyn to her, and than knelynge before her in the myddes, as they be taught, and assygned by ther gyde, to whom the abbes shal say thus, "Doughtres &c shal understonde it is used amonge us of longe and laudable custom, and also or-deyned and streytly enjoyned by our diocesan buschop of London, that enery professe the eight day after the day of ther profession, schal make obedience to the souereyne, promyttynge to obey feythfully to her in al thyng after the rewle, and to kepe the statutes of the place and al other thynges as ther predecessours haue done tofore them." They heryng thys, the fyrst of them, or some other suster in her name, schal open the register, and make her obedience in suche maner of wysse as folowith, or any other lyke maner.

"In nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti. Amen. I N. N. (of suche an age) after the fyrst profession, suche a suster in number, professed in the order of Saynte Sauyour, suche a day of suche a monthe, suche a yere of our lorde, and suche a profession after the fyrste by suche a buschop or suffragan, knowlage me dewly admytted to the yere of profe, and solempnly professed after lausful renouncyng of the seyd yere, after the rewle of Saynte Sauyour and statutes of thys monastery. Therfor I, holdynge me fullliche contente of al the premysses, promytte to the abbes of thys monastery, and to thy successours, me to kepe obedience after the rewle of Saynt Austyn and constitucions of Saynte Birgitte. Acceptyng, allowyng, and also admyttinge the pope's letters or bulles, and namely that bulle whiche among us is kyled 'Bulla Reformatoria,' with other autentyk wrytinges not discrepante nor disordynge to the seyd bulle, acceptyng also, allowyng and admyttinge the addicions addyd to the seyd rowle, pryvileges, ordynary injuncions, local statutes, laudable customes, decrees, and al other ordinaunces after the forme expressyd in the fourtenthe lefe of thys register, wylfully admytted and reasonably approued by the comen consent of sustres and brethren professed to fore me, byndynge myselfe wylfully and not constreyned, veryly to observe alle the seyd premysses to my power to the deithe. In to witnesse whereof I delyuer and betake to your reuerent moderhode thys wrytyng, writen at myne instance in thys comen registre, and marked withe my signe manuelle the viijte day after the day of my profession, in the yere of our lorde aboue seyd."

And, her sygne made in the seyd register, sche schal kesse the boke, and ley it open in the abbes lappe withe bothe handes.

without that other, nor the chastite of suche one is plesau[n]te to God.

“ Wylfulle poerte (sic) also stonde the not only in forsakyng of worldly riches, but also in forsakyng of wylle to have any worldly riches, worchypes, or dignyteys agenst the wylle of God and ordynaunce of the rewle.

“ Moreover, for 3e be nowe admytted to knowe the secrecyes of our chapter, 3e shal understonde that the chapter is an howse of counselle and confession, where the secretes of the monastery and of the chapter arn to be treted, and defaultes proclaimed and corrected, lyke as the trespas askethe. Haue 3e warenes therfor that 3e comen nothing that is seyed or done here, or in any other place of the monastery by way of counselle to any other, seculer or religious, but only to your susteres professed, or to your confessours, yf it longe to your consciences. And that sette ryght warely, leste 3e deme your souereyne, and haply cause other to grudge agenat her by your speche. Wherfor late the drede of God be your gyde in alle your wordes and dedes, for yf it be preuyd that any open the secrecyes of the chapter, she is to be sequestred ther from tyl we thynke her wordy to be kalled agene, besyde other paynes. Our lord Jhesu therfor geue you grace to eschew al perelles. Amen.”

After this the abbes schal assaygne hem a maystres or maystresses, after the forme expressed to fore in the sixtenth chapter of this booke; and than the chauntres at the bydding of the abbes, schal sette echo of them in ther order in the chapter, chirche, and other places, after the precepte of the rewle. Neuertheles, neyther the abbes, nor none other suster, schal be bound to say the seyed exhortacion always, but after ther discrecion and disposicion, and after the tyme 3eue the and mater requyrethe.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Of dyuine seruyse and obseruaunces ther in.

Sethe every religion is therfor ordeyned principally that dyuine seruyse schold be dewly contynued in holychirche, therfor it is acordyng that it be performed in suche wyse, that not only the doers therof, but also the herers be edyfied ther by. Wherfor, that dyuine seruyse may be contynued in this religion after a dewe order and forme, the susteres schal haue ther matens after the brethres matens, ther evensong after the brethres evensonge, complen after complen, so that nerhande ther be neuer oesynge; ther songe schal be sadde, sober, ande aymple withe out brekyng of notes, and gay relesynge, withe alle mekenes and deuocion; but organs schal thei neuer haue none; ther psalmody schal be dystynete and open, and althyng schal be mesured and moderyd after discrecion. In the quyer all schalle be as angels enclynyng togyder, rysynge togyder, knelyng togyder, stondynge, turnynge and sytting togyder, al after oo forme goynge and comynge togyder. In openyng also and schetting of booke, turnyng of leues, leftynge up and puttyng down of stalles, sayng of ther bedes or deuocions, and in al other suche thynges doynge, they schal haue warones of any grete sounde or noyse makynge, by whisperyng, syghyng, or sobbyng, or ratlyng of bedes, wherby any other myght be unrested, and resonably take occasion for to deme them of ypocrysy, or of any unsadnes; ther syght also, sylence and sygnes they schal kepe moste of alle there, and not go oute tyl the seruyse be ended, with oute a resonable cause not feyned, and by licence or commaundement of her that is president there for the tyme. There also none shal use to spytte over the stalles, nor in any other place wher any suster is wonte to pray, but yf it anone be done oute, for defoylyng of ther clothes. If any falle gretly in to coughynge or bledynge, or habounde withe flewme, sche shal go oute by licence of the presidente, and the passion cesed, and place made cleene come agene, so that none feyne any cause to go oute, nor make no lenger taryeng withe oute than very nede requirethe. To dnyne servise none schal come withe oute her hole habite honestly upon her, as it is expressyd tofore in the secunde chapter, her mantel buttended with a button of tre after the rowle, nor yet to the speche of seculers withe oute or with in.

Of inclynacions.

As ofte as they enter the quyer, they schal deuoutly encline in the place ther to assygned, not hekkyng withe the hede, and lyghtely sterte forth, but sadly, be leyser withe dewe reuerence and worchyp, gadryng togyder the sydes of ther mantelles before them, withe both handes that they fle not abroad, hauyng the ryghte hande in crosse wyse ouer the lefte, not bowyng they bakkes rownde, lyke a bowe bente, but hauynge ther scholdres and lendes euen streghte and playne oute, enclynyng so lowe that ther handes withe oute violent stretchyng oute may towche both knees, which is to be observed whan soever they enclyne in ther mantelles, so that yf ther be two togyder, they schal enclyne togyder, and turne face to face as ofte as they turne bakwarde, after ther inclination, and so they schal do whan they enclyne withoute mantelles, saue than they schal kepe ther handes crosse wyse in ther cowlle sleues. And thes be the tymes and places that thei schal enclyne inne, and the thynges wher to thei schal enclyne, that is to say, in the chirche, chapter, and freytour, as ofte as they come in or oute, namely, before and after conuentual actes; and in the quyer as ofte as they come in or go oute of ther stalles, and also they schal enclyne in the myddes, whan they go from one syde to another of any of the seyde places; also they schal enclyne profoundly to the hyghe auter, by cause of the sacramente beyng ther, and to our lady auter, and to the crucifixe, and to the ymage of our lady, as ofte as they passe by, namely, in the chirche, and also to the names of Jhesu and Maria, as ofte as they here them pronounced any where amonge the couent, withe all deuocion and reuerence, sayte thei, stonde they, or which wey ever they turne. Also, whan they have made ther inclination in the quyer to the este, they schal turne them and enclyne to the abbes, bothe inwarde and outewarde the quyer. Also whan any auster goethe before another in the quyer, or in any other streyte place, sche schal bowe the hede, and lefte up the hande in maner, askyng leue to go by her, to whom other schalle bowe ther hedes aȝene in token of grauntyng of leue.

[In tyme of dyuyne seruyse the lay brethren schal conforme hemself to the clerkys, as it is more openly expressyd in the seven-and-fourty chapter folowyng, keping the same forme in makyng of inclynacions and of other observauncys, but yf it be any where other wyse sette. Whan therfor they come in to the chirche they schal inclyne to the autyr in ther place assygned hem, not makyng styght bekke and aterne away, but saddy and manerly they schal, with dewe reuerence and worchyp, gader to gyder the sydes of ther mantles, with bothe handys before hem, hauyng them in crosse wyse with in ther mantels, the ryght hand ouer the lefte, and they schal inclyne so lowe that ther handys, with oute any stretchyng owte of armys, may toche bothe kneys, bowyng the bak with the loynes not lyke a bowe bente, but euen playn and streght oute, that yf nede were a staffe myght lye ther upon, and thys maner of inclynyng they schal obserue as ought (often) as they inclyne in ther mantels, and as ofte as they passe by the sacrament, or by the myddys of the hygh autyr or quyer, or by the ymage of our lady, or by the general confessour. And whan they inclyne with oute mantels, they schal holde ther handes in ther cowell sleues one caste ouer another in crosse wyse, and inclyne as it is seyde before. Also eche brother schal do reuerence to other as ofte as they mete togyder, or receyue any thyng, or any seruyse of other analyng ther bodys, and somewhat bowyng down with her hedys and bodyes, the yonger, namely, to the elder; but to this names Jhesu and Maria, they schal inclyne profoundly as ofte as they here them reliersyd.)

And for dyuyne seruyse is to be preferred before al other thyng, therfor, whan they here the ryngyng ther to they schal come to chirche be tymes, that they mow make redy ther hertes to God before the begynnyng, as they mow the more dewly preyse hym. If any come after "Deus in adiutorium" is bygonne, sche schal encline, and go to her place. If "Gloria patri" be bygonne, sche schal encline tyl "Sicut erat," and than go to her stalle with the oute sygne of the president. If any come whan the ympne is bygonne or after, sche schal encline tyl the president make a sygne to ryse, and than go to her stalle or to another place wher none other suster be lette of her office, which is to be observed also, yf the office of our lady masse be bygon, so that alle suche must proclame and telle the causes of ther late comyng in dewe place and tyme. Suche as ofte come late with oute resonable cause, schal be more scharly corrected; neuertheles, come any neuer so late whan ther is litel helpe in the quyer, they schal encline and lyghtely go to ther place, thof the president make no sygne, helpyng forth what they may, and after that seruyse or houre they schal say to the place wher they began, and proclame and confesse ther late comyng whan they se ther tyme. So yet that after the thryd psalme is ended of any of the small howres, none schalle enter in to the stalles but in tyme of grete nede.

If any fayle in redyng or syngyng in the quyer, sche schal as ofte as it is perseyued of other, knele down towards the auter whilst they syng at other syde, namely in psalmody, toche the grounde withe her hand, knokke herself on the breste, rise and enclyne also to the auter, and than syng forthe as sche dyd before, hauyng alway a warenes, that the knelyng down for one defeaute be not cause of mo, whiche yet defautes also sche most proclame whan tyme comethe, and take correccion for them, namely, yf the defeaute be so grete that al the quyer is distracte ther by. But none schal knele down at lectrones tyll the lesson or verse be ended; nor in any proccession goyng. Sche that wyl not knele down whan sche faylethe, Scynt Benette sayth, "sche is to proude, for sche wyl not meke herself in the presence of other, wherfor sche is to be chastysed the more scharply in the chapter." Neuertheles aged and very feble schal do in thys obseruance and other lyke as the abbes asygnethe hem, the causes fyrst known openly in the chapter that none occasion of euil be mynystred to other.

CHAPTER XIX.

Aboute the laste ende of the brethres matens, the tapers lyghte, the abbes or priores in her absence, or els the chodmody in bothe ther absence, schal make the termynacion, smytyn her ryghte hande upon the deske or a boke not ouer harde, but in suche a mene as al the quyer may here it. At the whyche sygne al the quyer schal knefe downe, and styllly say one pater noster, one ave maria, and oo crede, eche by themselves alone. And whan sche makethe another sygne withe her hande as sche dyd tofore; alle must ryse and stonde turned to the este, enclynyng and makyng the sygne of the crosse of Jhesu in ther forhedes and brestes, prayng hym inwardly that ther scruyse may be acceptable to hym and to hys blyssed moder. And thys is to be obserued before euery houre, outake the sayng of the crede, whiche is not seyde comenly but before matens. As sone therfor as the brethren cese of syngynge, the ebdomodary schalle begynne "Dignare me laudare te," turnyng to the este with alle the quyer, answeryng to the same, and to "Domine, labia" and "Deus in adjutorium." At "Gloria Patri" al schal enclyne face to face as ofte as it is had, outake in processions, rysyng up azene at "Sicut erat," and thanne stonde quyer to quyer tyll "Allelujah," saue whyls they synge "Laus tibi, Domine," they schall enclyne to the ende thereof quyer to quyer. From the begynnynge of the Inuitatory in to Gloria Patri after Venite, they schal stonde turned to the este, and than they schalle turne quyer to quyer in to the last verse of the ympe; than enclynynge face to face stondyng up, and turnynge to the este at Amen, which is to be obserued at the laste verse of euery ympe in the zero. The secunde and thryd antemes and matens schal be bygon of them that be tabled un to them, but the fyrst antem, and all other antems at laudes, prime, and houres, euensonge, and complen, schal be hygon by the ebdomodary. Sche that begynneth any antem schal turne to the este, and enclyne the same wey whan sche hathe done; but the quyer schal stonde face to face, saue whan the ebdomodary begynneth her antems, al schal turne to the este as sche doeth. At the entunynge of euery psalme the quyer schal stonde face to face, outake the begynners in hyghe dowble feates. In the psalmody the quyer schal sytte one psalme and stonde another, begynnynge ever with the fyrst psalme, so that, the fyrst psalme entuned to the myddes of the fyrst verse they schal sytte down, rysyng azene at Gloria Patri, and enclynynge as it is seyde before, and stondyng quyer to quyer whylst they synge the antemes after the psalmes. Aboute the myddes of the thryd antem the susires that schal synge the versicle schal go oute of ther stalles religiously turnyng to the este with al the quyer, whylst they synge it at the deske, enclynynge bothe before and after, whiche also is to be obserued of alle sustres as ofte as they synge or rede any thyng at the deske or lectryne. The answer of the versicle ended, al the quyer schal enclyne to the este like as they stonde in the answer of the versicle, and than they schal turne quyer to quyer, and say pater noster and ave maria enclynynge. Whyche done, the ebdomodary schalle stonde upryght wythe al the quyer, and turnynge alle to the este, sche schal begynne Et ne nos wythe precibus et meritis as it scheweth in the ordynalle. If the abbes be presente al must conforme them to her. They that schal rede the lessons at the lectryne schal after Jube, Domine, benedicere enclyne to the este, tyl the benediccions be endyd. And the quyer answeryng Amen, before the first lesson, anone they must sytte down withooute any taryeng, or euer the lesson begynne, that the rede may so moche the better be herde of alle, and they muste sytte styll tyl Gloria Patri of the last response. Neuortheles the sustres that schal synge the verses of the responses at the lectrin, schal go oute of ther stalles religiously aboute the myddes of every response, and for they may not enclyne with the quyer whyle they synge Gloria Patri of the thryd response, they schal enclyne before, whyle the quyer syngethe the repete, whiche is to be observed in alle other responses that be songen with Gloria Patri, and in al other thynges whereof the syngers may not conveniently enclyne with the quyer. Atte begynnynge of Te Deum laudamus al the quyer schal stonde to the este with the ebdomodary that begynneth it; and at Te eternum Patrem, they schal stonde quyer to quyer in to the laste ende of the psalme, saue at Sanctus, Sanctus, Sanctus, Dominus Deus Sabaothe and at Non horruisti virginis uterum, and in thys verse, Te ergo quamu, al schal enclyne face to face, and atte thys worde In eternum they schal turne to the este, and so stonde tylle Gloria Patri after Deus in adiutorium at laudes. Whan Te deum is not had they schal in stede therof synge thys psalme Misere mei Deus, knelynge quyer to quyer as it is specyfied in the ordynalle. Atte laudes alle thyng schal folowe the obseruaunces expressed at euensonge in the xxiiiith chapter of thys boke, saue in the laste ende of thys psalme Benedicite they schal enclyne quyer to quyer whyle they synge thys verse Benedicamus Patrem, rysyng up agene at Benedictus es, Domine. And whan the sustres haue ended ther matens, the brethern schal begyn their prime.

[Whylst they ryng allyn to matens, the tapers schal be lyght by the lay brethren as it is expressyd in the eght and fourti chapter folowyng. And whan allyn is longe they schal hye them fast to the chirche, and stonde in the quyer in the lower stallis, keping the same stondynges and syttyngs that the quer doth, and none to depurt thens without special licence. The ebdomodary of duty schal hyde in the quyer euermore, and lay the legende on the lectron, and see that the quyer haue lyght whan it is nede, and that nothyng lakke whan it schal be sett awerk. Whan the lessons be done, he schal take away the legende, and other bokes and deskas as the tyme requyrethe, and quenche the skonses. And it is to be markyd that whan he leyth any boke up on any lectron or deske, he schal open it in the myddes, and so schelt it ajene whan he taketh it away. Of the ryngyng to the sustrys matens, it schewyth in the nyen and fourty chaptyr, and whan the autyrs schal be made redy to the brethren masses in the seven and fourty. Of inclynacions and other observaunces it schewith of the chaptyr goyng tofore.}

CHAPTER XX.

Whan the brethren have ended ther houre of teer, the sustres schalle begynne ther pryme, outake Wytsunday. kepyng ther observaunces as they dyd in lyke thynges at matens, so that the executrice of ther scruyse schalle begynne the antems at pryme and howres, and they that synge the versicles of the same day schal synge Jhesu Christe and responses of the seyde howres at the lectryn, turnyng to the este with the quyer. After pryme, schal folowe masse of our lady, at the begynnyng wherof alle schal stonde quyer to quyer, saue att thes wordes Salve sancta parens alle schal knele downe and devoutly enclyne at both tymes, doyng worthyp and reuerence to the moder of God, rysyng up ajene att Ecce puerpera, the two begynners that begynne masse, or any thyng els in myddes of the quyer, schall at eche inclynacion enclyne to the este, and sytte to the este, whiche way that ever the quyer stonde, sytte, or enclyne, kepyng ther inclynacion before Gloria Patri, as it is seyde before at matens. Also the quyer schal stonde quyer to quyer whyls they synge the Kyrie, and atte begynnyng of Gloria in excelsis they shal turne to the este, and ajene quyer to quyer at Et in terra, so enclynynge at Adoramus te and at Suscipe deprecationem nostram, saue whyles they synge Amen; and as ofte as they say, Et cum spiritu tuo, or answer the preste or dekon of any other thyng in the masse, they schal turne to the este. Att the fyrst collectes they schal enclyne quyer to quyer, stondyng up ajene to the este at Qui tecum vivis, but in the memories they schal knele down lonyng to ther desks, and stondyng up at Qui tecum, as it is seyde before. From the begynnyng of the psalle in to the sequence be ended, they schal sytte in ther stalles, saue the sustres that schal synge the verse of the grael, and verse of allelujah, schal synge them stondynge at the lectren. Also from septuagesym in to ester this tracte Gaude Maria schal be songe at lectren; and this prose Inviolata in the quyer, syde for syde, syttinge. But at thes wordes, O Maria, O benigna, O Maria, al muste knele down syttinge up azeue at Que sola. The prose or sequence ended, they schal turne to the auter, so enclynnyng at Gloria tibi, Domine, whan the preste enclynethe, makynge a token of the crosse in ther forchedes and upon ther brestes, as the maner is. When Credo in unum Deum is bygonne, they schal turne azeue quyer to quyer, so knelyng down at thes wordes, Et incarnatus, and rysynge up azeue at Et resurrexit. The offertory they schal synge quyer to quyer stondynge, and knele down after lenynge to ther deskes, but from Per omnia into Sanctus they schal stonde to the este, so enclynnyng at thes wordes, Gratias agamus Domino Deo nostro. From the ende of the preface in to Benedictus they schal stonde quyer to quyer, enclynnyng so at the fyrst Sanctus, wherof the begynners schal encline before they begynne it. And the fyrst Osanna in excelsis ended, they schal knele down into Pater noster, begynnyng Benedictus euermore at the leuacion of the sacramente, saue when it is sine regimine chori amonge the brethren they schal synge it forth immediately with the Sanctus, turning to the este, and not abyde the seyd leuacion, as in al series and festes of thre lessons, outake the thre commemoracions, and certeyn festes in ester tyme. At the begynnyng of the Pater noster they schal ryse and encline quyer to quyer, but they schal synge Sed libera nos a malo stondynge to the este. Also they schal synge the thre Agnus quyer to quyer, turnynge to the este azeue at the ende of the thryd, and face to face, whyls they synge the comen. At the laste colectes they schal kepe the same obseruaunces they dyd at the fyrst colectes, save at the laste colecte of alle the terminacion schal be made that the sustres may say ther Pater noster before the howre of teer, stondynge to the este at Qui tecum vivit, as it is seyd before; but after Deo gracias they schal knele down azeue in to the blyssynge of masse be goun, and Seynte John gosbel ended, saynge iii Pater noster and iii Ave for the pres, towarde the este. After the seyd gosbel is ended, they schal anon forthwith, outake on Saturdayes, begynne ther howre of teer, and procede with the dewe obseruaunce expressed tofore at pryme.

Whan any schal be comenyd they schal come togyder religiously, and at the assignement of the preste say ther Confiteor togyder ones; for as many as shall be comened at one ceson, be it in or after any masse, and the absolucion zoven, they schal ryse and knele at the comenyng wyndowe togyder as many as may religiously, enclynyng bothe before and after ther comenyng. The houre of teer ended, thei schal make ther inclynacions, and go in procession wyse to the graue, two and two togyder, the youngest before. And the abbes or prioress, or president in her absence, stondyng at the graue, and eldest suster nexte un to her on euery syde, sche schal withe two syngres take oute a lytel orthe, begynnyng this psalme De profundis her own syde, sayng withe her, and that other syde answeryng, face to face, so enclynyng at Gloria Patri, and whyle the abbes saythe the collecte Domine sancte Pater withe In nomine Patris. After this the abbes schal say Benedicite. The couente schal answer, Dominus. And than the chauntries schal rede the obitus yf ther be any in the martiloge on the morne, which redde, the abbes say thus, Anima ejus or anima eorum, or earum, et animæ omnium fidelium defunctorum, per misericordiam Jhesu Christi in pace requiescant. The couente schal answer Amen, and than silence is lowsed, and the suster may take ther veynes, and proclame ther defautes, or els by lycence of the abbes or president go take ther myxatom.

[Of ryngyng to prime and to our lady masse it schewith in the nyen and fourty chaptyr, and also of tollyng De profundis at graue. To the whiche alle the brethren schal go in procession wyse, and whan it is endyd the lay brethren schal go streght in to the chirche for to mynyster to the prestys att masse; after the whyche masses, yf it be comonyng day, they schal be comonyd, eche brother of the preste he helpethe atte masse, sayng Confiteor before as the maner is. And yf ther be many brethren comonyd att one masse, they schal say Confiteor togyder, and be comonyd togyder after the prestys or dekons, yf any be than comonyd at the same masses, for no lay brother schal be comonyd with hem. Att ende of our lady masse, after the benediccion is scyd, the lay brother that mynystreth at the hye masse schal tolle the Aue belle, nyen strokys att thre tymes, kopyng the space of one Pater noster and one Aue betwene eche thre tollynges, and after this he that kepythe the lady masse schal quenche the tapers there, and make up the awltar.]

CHAPTER XXI.

Of the seven psalmes it schal be schewed in the nyen and twenty chapter of this boke. When the brethren haue ended ther howre of sexte, the sustres schal go forth with thetheres, and when the sustres haue ended ther howre of sexte, the brethren schal begyn hygh masse.

[To the seven psalmes it schal be tollyd as it is wonte to De profundis. And when the houre of sexte or none is done before hygh masse, the crosse berer schal here the crosse in his regular habite before the procession with oute tapers and holy-water, turning in to the quyer agene at the sygne of the chaunter. And when he perceyue that the presidente or eldeste preste of that procession is in his stalle, he schal sette up the crosse in the reuestry, and come and knele amonge his brethren in the quyer with oute the stallys. Of the ryngyng to hygh masse; it schewyth in the nyen and fourty chapter folowyng. They that kan not rede, in stede of the seven psalmes and letany schal say our lady sawtyr.]

CHAPTERS XXII, XXIII.

The obseruaunces at the autyrs longeth to the brethren and not to the sustres. Moreouer, when the couente is in any conuentual acte, none schal presume of her own hede to go oute to se any sacryng at any auter, but they schal kepe ther wonte obseruaunce, or els knele down yf it be in the quyer, and se our lord in ther sowles, lokinge upon ther bokes, that no defaulte be made in redyng or syngyng, for God louethe more to be worchipped and seyn with the eyen of the soule than with the eyen of the body, sayng our lorde, "Veri adoratores adorabunt Deum in spiritu et veritate." After the brothres houre of none the sustres schal procede with thetheres, and with oute any longe taryeng after that, alle schal go to mete.

[As ofte as tapers ar to beholde, the taperers schal joyne hemself to the preste as sone as he is come to the gree of the autyr, stondyng by the dekon and subdekon, hauyng ther facys to the autyr, and somewhat inclynyng, as they may for holdyng of the candstykkes. The mynysters of hygh masse and lady masse schal helpe at mynystryng of the chalyce, and they schal bere the masse bokys from corner to corner of the autyrs whan tyme is, doyng other mynystracions aboute the autyrs as they be enformyd and taughte. Of sensyng of the autyr in the begynnyng of masse, and before and aftyr the gosabel, it schewyth in the seuen and twenty chaptyr folowyng. Whan the dekon or subdekon comethe from the quyer to the auter after the sensyng of the quyer, the lay brethren schal stonde in order at ende of the lefte syde, offryng them selfe to kysse the pax, so that none of hem mynyster aboute these ij autyrs withoute surpys, but yf it be in a sodeyn case of nede.

Of bodyly disciplines.

Every fryday in the yere, whan it is sine regimine chori amonge the brethren, outake christemas eue, and from thens in to the utas of purificacion of oure lady, and from estren in to the utas of corpes (sic) christi, and every Wednesday of lence, whan the brethren say of the fery, and after the passage of any suster or brother, and on ol soule day, and other tymes accustomed, or assygned by the abbes, the dortour belle schal be tolled, and the sustres schal take bodyly dyscipline in dewe tyme and place, after the forme expresayd before in the secunde chapter, eche knelyng arewe in ther order; and in the tyme of dyscipline the ebdomodary, or another suster, schal say this preces folowyng, the couente answerynge, Psalmus (51 und 56) Miserere mei Deus. Psalmus (67) Deus misereatur. Psalmus (130) De profundis. So that eche psalme be seyde wythe Gloria Patri and Ave Maria, and after the laste they schal say this antem,—“Ne reminiscaris wythe Kyrieleyson, Christeleyson, Kyrieleyson. Pater noster. Ave Maria. Et ne nos, Ostende nobis. Ora pro nobis, sancta Dei genitrix. Peccavimus cum patribus. Domine, non secundum. Ne memineris iniquitatum. Adjuva nos Deus. Oremus pro fratribus. Pro cuncto populo. Anime fundatorum. Domine, exaudi orationem meam. Oremus. Exaudi quamvis, domine, supplicum preces. Deus, cui proprium est misereri semper et parcere, suscipe deprecationem. Deus, qui caritatis. Fidelium Deus omnium. Anime fundatorum nostrorum.” And they that jeeue the dyscipline schal cese at

Pater noster, and say it knelyng as it is sette before in the seuenthe chapter, begynnynge agene at Et ne nos. Ande they muste moder the disciplyne in suche wyse, that they may go ones aboute before the Pater noster, and ones after. If any suster for any cause resonable may not take her disciplyne, she schal say the seyd preces alone, or with a felawe wher sche wylle. But when the abbes in tyme of grete colde, or for any other resonable cause, wyl pardon the sustres of ther discyplynes that they schal none take, yet they schal say the seyd preces under the schorte veyne togyder in the chapter, but they schal not bare the scholdres.

As it is seyde in the eghtenthe chapyr goyng before, and in the seuen and fourty chapyr folowyng aftyr, the lay brethren schal conforme hemself to the clerkys in syttyng, in stondyng, in knelyng, and in enclynyng at matens, masse, and euensonge, and at al other hourys. Neuertheless none of hem schal be aensyd, but the taperers at Magnificat and Benedictus. Thyse must take gode hede among hem, that the bokes be leyde open on the deskys be tymes, and that euery thyng be redy at hande. Whan there is any dyscipline ȝouen before or aftyr hyghe masse, one of hem schal tolle the belle ther, to lyke as it is tollyd to De profundis, that al the brethren may be ther atte.]

CHAPTER XXIV.

Of observaunce at evensong.

Aboute the last ende of the brethres euensonge the sustres schal make ther termynacion, and say ther Pater noster and Ave Maria, as thei dyd before matens, but withe oute a crede. And alle stondyng up quyer to quyer, the ryghte syde schal fyrst encline profoundly to that other, saynge Ave Maria and Indulgete nobis; and in the mene tyme, the lefte syde stondyng up ryghte, schal ȝeue deuoute audience to the ryghte syde, and so muste the ryghte syde do afterwarde to the lefte. Thys doon, and the brethres euensonge alle ended, they schal begynne ther euensonge as ther ordynalle schewethe, turnyng to the este at ende of the antem after the psalmes. And the chapter ended with the Deo gracias, they schal turne quyer to quyer, so stondyng whyle they syng the response, whan ther is any; but whyle the verse is in syngyng, they schalle sytte, kepyng ther obseruance at Gloria Patri, at ympne, and at the versicle, as it is expressyd tofore at matens. At Magnificat, they schalle turne quyer to quyer, stondyng upryghte, lytel or nothyng lenyng, with ther bakkes or armes to the stalles, and so they owe to do at Nunc dimittis, Te Deum, and Benedictus. From the ende of the antems after the seyd psalmes in to the ende of euensonge and complen, matens and laudes, they schal stonde to the este, but yf it be in the orysones or collectes, flor than they schal enclyne quyer to quyer, stondyng to the este agene at Qui tecum vivit, which is to be obserued in alle orysons seyd in the quyer thorow the yere with the note. Neuertheles, sche that executethe the seruise schal stonde styl in her stalle to the este, saue atte begynnyng of thys antem Ave Maria, and from thens in to the laste ende of euery houre in the yere; al moste reverently and devoutly knele down, enclynynge also to this name Maria. Also after euensonge, matens, and after euery houre the abbes, or the ebdomadary in her absence, schal say thys litel prayer. "Anime fundatorum nostrorum et anima famulorum famularumque tuarum, et omnium fidelium defunctorum, per misericordiam Ihesu Christi in pace requiescant." The couente schal answer Amen, also with the oute note. And than after euensonge the priores or another serche in absence of the abbes, after the space of this psalme Deus misereatur nostri, schal smyte with her hande as sche dyd before euensonge, and than al schal ryse and enclyne religiously before the deske towards the auter, and so go ther weyes; so yet that none go to any other place than enenforthe down to the freytour, with the oute special leue asked and had of the presidente, but the ebdomadarye schal entende the chyme, as it is expressyd in the fyfthe chapter of thes present Addicions.

[From Indulgete none schal absente hymself wyllfully at any tyme, nor go to hys place behynd the quyer tyl Gloria Patri is endyd, after Deus in adiutorium. On saturdays, in somer tyme, whan procession is had to the crosse, he that kepeth the sensor and he that holdeth the boke schal abyde styl in ther surplys tyl after the procession, but no crosse is to be had excepte in ester wyke.]

Whan they here the secunde peie to the collacion they schal come togyder, and sytte in order in the chapter, kepyng ther sylence as it is seyde before in the xiiith chapyr of this boke, and whan the president at last ende of the peles goethe to her place, alle muste stonde up, but not enclyne, save only to the abbes, and whan sche hath enclyned to the majeste, and take her sete, the couente also at her assygnement schal sytte down agene. And than yf ther be any brother or suster of the chapter late passed to God, the presidente schalle open it to the couente; whiche anon, stondyng to the mageste, schal ayde for ayde say De profundis for the soule, with the suffrages and dewe regular obseruance, ordeyned therfore, and than sytte down agene. And alle thynges tretyd than to be tretyd, that is to say, tho thynges that may not congruously be deferryd in to another tyme, the legister at the hyddyng of the presydenste schal say " Jube, Domine," after the forme expressyd in the fyrst chapter tofore, to whom the presidente schal answer thus, " Noctem quietam et vitam beatam tribuat nobis Spiritus, Pater pius, et misericors Dominus." The couente schal answer " Amen." and than the legister schal rede what someuer the abbes assygnethe after the forme expressyd in the seyde chapter; and Deo gratias ended, the couente schal ryse and turne to the mageste, the presidente sayng with the lowe inclynacion Adjutorium nostrum, and the couente in lyke wyse answeryng with the note, al under oo tunc, Qui fecit celum et terram. And after this they schal go to the quyer processyon wyse, the yongest before; and aboute the last ende of the brethres complen, the president, or the ebdomadary in her absence, schal make the termynacions bothe before and after Pater noster, and they schal kepe the same obseruances at complen as be expressed tofore in lyke thynges at matens, prime, and houres, begynnyng whan the brethren haue endyd ther oryson after the antem of our lady; save, after the laste Deo gratias, the ebdomadary schal say this versicle Ave Maria enclynnyng, so that from the begynnyng of the antem of our lady in to the ende of seruyse, alle schalle knele excepte tho sustres that schal synge the versicle while they synge it, and tho sustres that be tabled or assygned by the chauntres to synge the verses of Salve regina or Regina celi, which schal be songen standyng at the deske; and whan the laste collecte is ended, alle schal putte downe ther veyles, and so kepe them in to the morne.

[None schal absent hym from the collacion nor complyn with oute special licence of the presidente, nor none schal go to his place behynde the quyer tyl . . . is begon atte the collecte aftyr the antem of our lady, or att Tibi, Domine, commendamus, whan commendacions be seyde after complyn of the day, they schal inclyne two and two togyder in the comen place assygned un to them, and go forth in procession wyse to the holy water stoppe, and as they receyue holy water, they schal enclyne to the preste that zeueth it, so that the mynyster of hygh masse holde lyght un to hym whan nede is, and also to the breithren whan they go from the collacion if it be derke, turnyng the lyght in the skonses euermore fro mennys faces.]

Of verses at complen in lenten.

In lenten, after Nunc dimittis, thys antem, O mitissime, schal he songe, with the verses, the quyer knelyng at these wordes, O benigne Creator and O pie Redemptor; but at O mitissime Triumphator, alle shal stonde up azyne. So yet, that the sustres that schal synge the verses stonde at the lectron whyle they synge them.

Of holy water after complen.

Alle seruyse ended with the Anima fundatorum, they schal echone turne up in to ther stalles, and say eche of hem knelynge fystene Aues softly, not abydyng the Aue belle. But the presidente only may lene to the forme or deske, and knele, and whan sche makethe a sygne with her hande, they shal ryse, and go processionally to take holy water, the eldest goyng before; and as they take it two and two togyder, the eldest fyrste, they shal enclyne to the president that zeueth it, namely, yf it be the abbesse that zeueth it; and after thys they schal go to the dortour as it scheweth in the thre and ffty chapter of this boke.

In alle principal and hyghe festes the abbes stalle is to be arayed more honestly than other tymes, and the chauntres with the one of her felawes in al suche festes schal kepe the myddes of the quyer, al seruyse tyme, occupyng the office of the rectrices or two begynnners, begynnynge alle thyng towards the exte, save at Indulgete they schal conforme them to the quyer. Alle maner of chaptres at euensonge, complen, matens, pryme, and howres, schal euer be seyde in a lowe sober voyce. Also in alle hyghe festes the chauntres schal assygne one of the eldest sutores to rede the fyrste leson at matens, the pryores to the secunde, and the abbes to the thrydde, and foure at the leste of the eldest sutores, beste disposed in the brestes to synge the verses of the response at the fyrst euensonge, and the thrydde verses at matens, and Allelujah at masse and Benedicite at euensonge in feates of our lady. In alle other double festes and dayes sche schulle assygne other sutores to do the seyd thynges, and al other after the feste or day is. So that on sondayes and festes of nyen lessons, or of the strenghte of nyen lessons, as Seynt John Portlatyn, Inuitatorium triplex, and suche other, sche schal assigne a nother suster to synge the venite withe the sutores that be tabled ther to, and so sche schal do to the thryd response at matens, and allelujah at masse, but in double festes foure at leste schal synge the venite.

[Euery dowble feste that is callyd by the table maius duplex, the confessours stalle is wonte to be honestly arayd with clothes as it is acordyng for to be by the mynyster of the sextry, whiche also schal ordeyn for the deske in myddes of the quyer, stolys, cuschens, and slauys for the rectours, and the lay brethren at the preface of hygh masse schal sette forth the seyd stolys before the rectours that they may knele at hem, and atte Agnus Dei they schal sette hem in ther places azeue, or els folde hem togyder, and sett hem in suche place that the brethren be not lette goyng by them.]

Of makynge of the table.

Wherefor that the more certeynte be had in our lordes seruyse in the chirche, chapter, and freytour, the chauntres schal euery fryday make the table, and sette it in suche a place of the quyer that alle the sutores may loke ther up on, and so what they schal do. Hanyng a besy attendaunce that no sutores be tabled to any thyng but suche as haue habilitie and sufficiencie to kepe it in euery place in redyng and syngyng, wyke by wyke, as they be in order after ther profession. And zet for the more sykernes sche schal aske of the sutores whom sche is purposed to table, wheyther they may kepe ther wykes or no, so that yf they be notte disposed to kepe ther tymes, sche may purvey and make a chaunge withe some other susters, eache kepynge for other as ther course comethe aboute, what syde that ouer they be of. But none schal be ouer skyped in any wyse for any suche chaunge, withe oute a very resonable cause known to the couente, and allowed by the abbes. Also it is to be marked that in the table schal neuer be sette past two sutores to any thyng, nor no mo schal synge it but yf they be assygned by the abbes or chauntres.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Of prayer in stede of sensyng.

Also, for as moche as the sutores use no sensyng, it is acordyng that instead of encense they use deuoute prayer, sayng with the prophete, "Dirigatur, Domine, ad te oratio mea sicut incensum in conspectu tuo." And therfor Seynte Benet saytho in hys rewle "that the sondayes, namely, and holy dayes, al the couente scholde be occupied in deuoute prayers and holy redynges, wherfor yf any be founde mys occupied, as withe ydelnes or vayne tales, suche one is unprofitable, not only to her selfe, but also sche hyndrethe other," and therfor he commaundetbe that "yf any suche be founde in the congregacion, they schal after certeyn monyeions to leue, and wylle not amende, be scharply corrected, openly in the chapter." By thys worde correccion after Seynte Benettes rewle, is understonde euermore a disciplyne, suche also, moreover, as may be at the seruyse of the day, namely, the holy dayes, withoute preiudice of ther own seruyse. It is accordyng that thei stonde up at "Magnificat, Nunc dimittis, Te Deum, Benedictus gosbelles, and suche other, conformyng thei selfe as moche as they may to the comen ordynaunce of al holy chirche.

[In al dowble festes and sondays generally, and whan it is Inuitatorium triplex, after the table, also al ester wyke, and in the festes of Seynt Katerine and of the enleuen thowsande virgyns, the taperers schal be holde, and the hygh autyr and quyer sensyd at matens, masse, and euensonge, and in the begynnyng of masse after confiteor, and agene before the gosbel. Also after the gosbel the sacryfyse schal be sensyd eche day in the zere; but the quyer schal neuer be sensed in masse tyme, but whylat the crede is in syngyng, yf ther be any. And in eche of the seyde festys and days a tapete schal be leyd before the hygh autyr. Lyke obseruaunce is to be kepte at oure lady autyr in oure lady masse tyme, except certayn days expressyd in ther placys. The taperers schal go before the preste, or stond by hym as they be informyd. And he that kepeth the sensour schal say Benedicite, oute take at hyghe masse and lady masse, for than the dekon schal say it. Also he that kepeth the sensour schal holde up the rygthe syde of the cope whylst the preste senseth at eucensonge and at matens. And after the sensyng of the auter he schal sense the preste in hys place iij castes, and than he schal go in to the quyer and sense the confessour in hys stalle as many inclynnyng to hem bothe before and aftyr. Than he schal sense the quyer, fyrst the rygth syde, and aftyr the lefte, eche preste and dekon two castys, and eche voyde stalle except the confessours one. And than he schal sense eche taperer two castys inclynnyng before and aftyr, but neuer no mo of the lay brethren. Whyche doon, he schal inclyne at the lowest gree of the autyr, and bere up the sensour in to the reuestry azene, or els stonde styl ther tyl the procession goeth forth to the crosse, yf any procession be, doyng such obseruance as belongeth ther to. In festys clepyd Maius duplex ther schal be two sensours at eucensonge and matyns, and a schyp berer. And he schal than say Benedicite to the preste tofore encense be put in to the sensours; but at fyrste eucensonge schal be ij schyp berers, so that in sensyng of the autys one of hem, and oo taperer, and oo sensour go before the preste of the rygth syde, and ther felaws the same wyse before the preste of the lefte syde, al in surpys. Whan al be comne in to the quyer azene, the secondary preste schal sense the fyrste, and the principal senser of the lay brethern schal sense the seyde secondary preste thre castys. Whych done, they schal, one at oo syde and another at othe syde, sense the rectours, the quyer and taperers, as it is seyde before, eche of hem two castys, and eche voyde stalle one, with dewe inclynacions, and than go ther ways. If so be that the confessour be presente in the quyer, and not executeth seruyse, he schal be sensyd iij castys, aftyr the rectours, by the pryncipal sensour. The taperers, aftyr tyme they be sensyd, they schal stonde by the preste conformyng hem to the obseruances of the quyer as moche as they may. And it is to be markyd that in our Lady masse schal be holde no tapers, but at the dysposicion of the general confessour, he cause the prestys than beying at masse schal not be lefte a lone with oute helpe.]

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Also for holy water is renewed euery sonday, it is accordyng that they take no bodyly mete tyl they haue take holy water and holy brede (deuoutly and with reuerence of the abbes or priores or ebdomadaryes handes'), for ther to euery cristen man and woman is bounde by the lawe (outetake comenyng dayes').

[On sondays, whan holy watyr is halowyd in the quyer, the mynyster of the sextry schall ordeyne for water and salte, and so he schal do also whan it is to be halowyd with oute note in the reuestry. The crosse berer with tapers lyght schal stonde at the lowest gre of the hygh autyr, and the mynyster of our lady masse schal (sette forth watyr and <sup>1</sup>) holde the salte on the ryght syde of the preste. And he schal powre holy water in to the holy water stop, and holde it al togyder in the sleue of hys surpys whylst he sprenkleth it in the left syde of the quyer. The keper of hygh masse schal (bryng forth the towel and cope, and he schal) putt the cope up on the preste, and caste it ouer hys scholders, and holde it up behynde hym, whylst he zeueth holy water, and the holder of the boke schal take hede to the same, and se that the deske be remonyd and sett agene whan tyme is, but to the confessour he schal holde the boke hymself, and al thes schal be in ther surpys. In takyng of holy water, the lay brethren schal conforme hem to the clerkys, saue none of hem schal go with any preste or dekon at any tyme. And it is to be known that in al dowble feytys and profession days, and in the feste of saynte Anne yf it fal on the sonday, also the fourth sonday of lenton, palme sonday, secunde sonday aftyr ester day, sonday with in the ntas of Seynt Petyr ad vincula, and al other sondays as the confessour semeth best, holy water schal be made in the reuestry after morow masse; wher as euery sonday thorow the yere holy water is wonte to be made after the seyd masse and holy brede, the brother that kepeth the wheyle ordeynyng for al thynges longyng ther to, for austres and lay brethren. So that euery sonday holy brede is to be taken reuerently before al other bodyly sustynnaunce.—Se more in the fyue and fourty and sex and fourty chaptys folowyng.]

CHAPTER XXIX.

As for processions, whan the sustres haue any, they schall kepe thys forme. The response or antem, or Salve feste dies hygonne, the crosse schal go be fore, or els holy water, as in the rogacion dayes, as it schewith in the fourtyethe chapter. And in al hyghe and principal festes the sextayn, or another suster at here assygnement, schal bere an ymage of our lady after the crosse, and two torches schal be borne on enery syde a lytle before the ymage. After them schal folowe the sustres that synge not, and after them the hole quyer, the songest before, and the abbes comynge behynde in the ende of the procession, al beyng in ther hole regular habite. And they muste take hede that ther pace be not to faste, neyther to softe, and that two and two go euer togyder asmoche as they may, none scholdryng other, and that ther be euer two or thre fete space betwene them that go before and hem that folowe after, that eche may here other and beware of discorde. And as they passe oute by the abbes, thei schal enclyne to her, and whan they come in agene, they schal enclyne before the deske, and agene whan they take ther stalles. And thes be the dayes that the sustres schal haue procession, that is to say, in the feste of Circumcision, Translacion of Saynt Birgitt, and Seynt John Baptist, whan ther festes fal on the sonday, and not elles. Also on Palme sonday, Seynt Markes day, Rogacion days, Peter and Paule, Saynt Anur day, Mykelmasday, and in al the festes of our Lady, and principal or hyghe double festes of the yere, keepyng the same tyme that the brethren do. So that the brethren go forthe withe masse after the procession, and neuer tary for the sustres.

[Euery sonday and in the Concepcion and Annunciacion of our Lady, and in the feste of Petyr and Paule, and on Mychael masse day be fore hyghe masse, schal be procession in thys wyse. The holy water berer schal go before, castyng holy water on euery syde as he goeth; the cross berer schall folowe, and after hym the taperers with tapers brennyng. After the taperers schal go the boke berer in somer tyme, and behynde the prest schal come the mynyster of hyghe masse beryng up the cope, al in surplys goyng bare hede. Other brethren schal folowe in ther reguler habite, ther hedys coueryd, goyng so ferre a sondyr that none scholdyr another, and kepyng the space of a mannys lengthe, or at lest fyue fote space be twene hem and them that go before hem. Ouer thys, in every feste that is klepyd Maius duplex, ij lay brethren in surplys, here-hede, schal here ij torches before the sacrament, of the whyche two the jongest schal bere the lytel belle, and ryng it continually. But on Estyr day and on Corpus Cristy day, four lay brethren schal here foure torches after the seyd soforme, ij before and ij behynde the sacrament. And whan the procession is ended, the crosse schal go hys way, and the tapers schall be sett up on the autyr, but the torches schal abyde by the sacrament, and not be quenched tyl it be sett agene in hys place.—Of the procession on the frydays it schewyth in the one and twenty chaptyr goyng before, and of other in her own places.]

Every sonday the sustres schal say matens and houres of the Holygoste, every munday, tuesday, and wensday dunge, with thre lessons, after the use of the cathedral church, and every thursday thes thre psalms, Confitebor tibi, Domine the firste, Diligam te, Domine, and Deus, Deus meus, respice. Also ech a fryday comeuily, after ther matens, they schal say the seven psalmes and comen letany, for ther synnes and others, and after that take a discipline, yf it be a discipline day, from the whiche observance non schal absente herselfe wythe oute special licence. Wherfor they that be not at matens schal dyspose hem to come be tymes ther to, that they mowe go in procession wythe ther sustres aboute the cloyster, the crosse goyng before. And whan al be come in agene into ther stalles, the crosse schal go hys way, and the eblomadari schal rede the letany in suche a place assygned to her by the abbesse wher sche may be herde of al the quyer. And whan thier is any suster or brother passed, sche shal say thys collecte, Deus cui proprium (the lasse') to fore

CHAPTER XXX.

In Advente ther is no chaunge of obseruaunces. Saue on cristmas eue, al seruise is wonte to be done by tenne of the klokke afore none, and the sustres complen by fyue.

[To the fyrst euensong of the fyrst sonday of Aduento the fyrst pele schal be with oo belle, and the secunde with two only, thof the feste of Seynt Andrew fal the same saturday. At whiche euensong schal be no procession, nor from thens to estyr. But to the sustres euensong it schal be ronge with thre bellys, and the autyrs schal not be chaungyd tyl after the brethres complyn as they be wonte.]

CHAPTER XXXI.

On Cristemas day our Lady mas schal be Lux fulgebit, whiche is not wonte to be sunge ouer longe, but of a sadde and goodly mone mesure, and two torches schalle bren at our lady auter al the masse tyme.

[At ende of the nyenth lesson of matens, on Cryst masse day, ther schal be two torches lyght, and sett in conuenient places wher they schal bren, whylst the genelogy is in syngyng. And att begynnyng of the last response the crosse with two tapers and a sensour, but no holy water, schal stonde att the lowest gre of the hyghe autyr al in surplys. And after sensyng of the seyd autyr they schal goo down by the sowth syde of the quyer in procession wyse rounde aboute the rectours deske fayre and esyly, the crosse be fore, and tapers and sensour after, stondyng styl eche one whylst the dekon taketh the blyssyng of the confessour or preste. Thys doon, they schal go up agene by the nor syde of the quyer to the hygh autyr, stondyng ther as they be wonte at gosbel tyme whylst the genelogy is in redyng, saue the crosse schal stonde bebyude the subdekon, turnyng the ymage to the dekon, and the sensour schal stonde be hynde the dekon about the ryght corner of the autyr. The genealogy endyd, they al schal turne in to revestry ajene in procession wyse, lyke as they came oute. And than the seyde torches schal be quenched, and al the bellys rongen to the fyrst masse and sustres matens under oo pole ij miserere whyle. So that some of the brethren tukke the mynysters, and holde the tapers and sensour in the begynnyng of masse, and also tuk the confessor whan he taketh the cope aboute the ende of the same masse. Attē our lady masse two torches schal be lyght, and bren in conveniente place al the masse tyme. Alle other observauces at matens, masses, and euensonge schal be kepte as they be wont in other principal festys. Also on Twelfte day the same observauce schal be kept than abowte the genealogy that was on Cristmasse day, but than the confessor taketh hys cope aboute the laste therof.]

CHAPTER XXXII.

In the feast of the Purificacion the abbes is to be served of her taper fyrst amonge the sustres, and after her the priores. Ande after them the elder sustres as they be in order, and at laste the songeste.

[In the fest of Purificacion before halowynge of candels schalbe light ij tapers upon the autor of Saynt Sauour, whiche the taperers shall ber afore the executour to the autir, wher he shall halowe the candels, and ther sett them downe, and if it be sonday they shall hold them at the zeuyng of holy water, and after that bryng the executour to the auter as is afore sayde. Att the halowynge of candels muste be the sensour with colys and holy water, and the mynyster of the sextry and other lay brethren must helpe in distribucion of tapers and candels to the quyer, sustrys, and seculers. After the brethren haue receyuyd ther tapers, they schal reuerently holde them styl in ther handes, ye also the taperebererars as moche as they may, in reuerence of the feste, in to tyme they haue offred hem at autyr to the preste. In the whiche offryng they schal conforme hemselfe to the ps. but no lay brother schal go nor offer with any pr u. The mynyster of the sextry schal quenche the t ie offryd.]

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Of Aschewensaday.

On Aschewensaday, and so forth that wyke outake fryday, the sustres schal haue Te Drum at mutens, and eche wensday and fryday from thens in to Ester they schal take a disciplyne, excepte the utas of our Ladyes Festes, double festes, and Cathedra sancti Petri. Also eche suster alone or withe a felawe, before takyng of asches or after, shal knele and say deuoutly in the quyer the seuen psalmes and the letany, that they may be the more abyll to the general absolucion. And whan the asches be halowed, and in jeynyng to the brethren, they schal come downe barefoted procession wyse, the eldeste folowyng the abbes goyng before, to the comenyng wyndows. And ther the abbes and the priores schalle take ther asches to gyder, but alle other sustres schal take hem as many togyder as may religiously knele at the seyde wyndowes, after the forme of comenyng, from the eldeste in to the yongeste. And they schal not go from dyuynne seruyse tyl hygh masse be ended, praynge to our Lorde deuoutli for remission of ther own synnes and of others.

[On Asche wensday before hygh masse a tapett schal be caste to fore the hygh autyr only, and a lytel forme sett by the mynyster of the sextry at the gre of the same, with a cloth and cusschens, and boke ther up on for the preste and his mynysters. Also before the seuen psalmys schal be lyght ij tapers up on the autyr, and ij in the grete candelstykes. The seuen psalmys endyd, the seyde brother schal take away the sayd lytyl forme, and the keper of hygh masse schal holde the boke to the preste, and sett holy watyr at the dekons hande when the sustres take asches. The lay brethren schal take ther asches after the dekons, conformyng them to the same obseruaunces in the takyng, and the tapers schal be holde and auters sensyd as it is on sondayes. And it is to be markyd that thyas asches schal be made the same day by the mynyster of the sextry, of palme halowyd on palme sonday goyng before, whiche schall sett hem up on the autyr in the ryght corner therof in an honcat basen be fore masse, with holy water besyde it. He also schal ordeyn for salte and branne in two sayr saucers, and for a towel and a klene basen wilke warme water for the preste to wasche his handys after jeynyng of asches.]

CHAPTER XXXIV.

In lenton, the verses at compleen schal be songen after the forme expressed tofore in the fyue and twenty chapter. And whan the brethron haue Dirige in the sustres euensonge tyme, thei schal not make ther terminacion to Pater noster tyllle allyn withe the tollynge after be fullyche cased.

[In al processions in lenton, except the fyrste sonday, our Lady day, and processions of deuocion or worthyp, as in the receyuyng of the kyng, quene, buschop, corse present, and suche other, the lente crosse is to be borne, 3e on Seynt Mathy day also, and on Seynt Gregory day, when they fal on the fryday. The keper of hygh masse schal drawe the veyle at the same; after sacryng of the whyche masse, his felawe schal bere oute and quenche bothe torches, whylst he schetteth the seyd veyle and ryngeth the fyrst pele to euensong ys it be tofore mete, and after that he must help to ryng e allyn, whiche must enermore be at suche a tyme that alle may be at Indulgete. To the sustres euensonge schal be two pele as ofte as the brethren euensong is before none, and the dortour hel schal be ronge before as it is wonte, whyche is to be obserued thof the kyng, or any suche other person, be comyng or goyng in lenton, only with in the wyke days, and in the sustres euensonge tyme, al schal kepe sylence tyl after drynkyng. In al dowble festys, and festys of nyen lessons, the veyle schal be drawen at morowe masse, or masse of the nine in to the goshel, and than it schal be opend, and so abyde styl, lyke as it is wonte on the saterdays, ys so be that masse of the nine be sayd at hyghe autyr. Mydlent sonday al the bellys schal be rong to the seruyse of brothren and sustren, as they be wonte in principal festys; and the hyghe autyr and our lady autyr schal be solempnly arayd only withe the chiefe cundstykkys; but no tapers schal be lyghte up on the autyr but at Magnificat and Benedictus, and the holy water schal be made in the reuestry. To the sermon the grete bell schal be tollyd, but no bell herd in the sermon tyme excepte the sacry
the f the s whomsoeuer come or go, whiche is to be obnyd. To the fyrst euensonges of Passion onday schal neuer be ronge but on bell for o for allyn, thof a dowble feste be seruyd

CHAPTER XXXV.

On Palme sonday the sustres schal haue procession, before the whyche the palme schal be distribute after the forme of distribution of tapers on Candelmasse day or Purificacion of our Lady. And this wyke alle schal zeue himself to deuoute prayer, remembryng our Lordes passion, and that he prayed for synners in the crosse.

[On Palme sonday the holy watyr schal be made in the reuestry, and about the ende of the sustres houre of sexte, two tapers and no mo schal be lyght up on the autyr. When holy water is zouen, the mynyster of hygh masse schal set a lectron under the lower gre of the hye autyr agens the ryght corner of the same este-ward, and ley the epistle boke open ther up on, and he schal sett a nother lectron estewarde with the gosbel boke ther up on, up on the hyghest gre of the seyde autyr, wher the two taperers schal stonde face to face whilst the gosbel is in redyng; whyche endyd, he schal sette a lectron up on the same gre wher as the palme lyeth to be halowd, at whiche most be a sensour and holi watyr. In distribution of palme schal be kept the obseruance that is had in distribution of tapers on Candel masse day. In the procession the seyde brother schal se that ther be a lectron set in the zendyr corner of the ambryus for redyng of the gosbel towards the este, but the taperers schal stonde ther as they dyd in the churche face to face, and after this he schal sprede a tapet or a clothe, wher up on the preste schal knele with his mynysters toward the sacrament. Before the whiche two lay brethren in surpys schal bere two torches with a saccyng bell ryngyng contynually. And when the chauntour begynneth Dignus es, Domine, the crosse berer schal leue the lenton crosse, and bere the chefe crosse before the sacrament, and tyl al the procession is endyd. The wensday before ester the veyle schal be let fall at high masse, or if it be dowble fest at morowe masse at the wordys of the passion, Velum templi scissum est. And the first pele to euensonge for thurseday schal euer be with oo bell, and the secunde pele with ij as it is on sondays, thof ther fal a dowble feste the seyde wensday, but to the sustrys euensonge it schal be rouge as it is wonte.]

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Of Schyrthursday.

A Schirthursday the sustres shal say the seven psalmes, as they dyd on aschewenaday. And that day al schal be comened at hyghmasse, and none at our Lady masse, with the oute special licence of the general confessoure. Azenst that day the pryores schalle warne the sustres that hote water be redy for the conente, that they may wasche ther fete and come honestly to the maundy, for who so comethe other wise schal be corrected. And the sextayne schal ordeyn for two towels and two busens at leste of warme water, that nothyng be to seke whan it schal be sette a werke. Also from the begynnyng of euensonge on schyrthursday in to euensonge on ester eue, the sustres schal synge ther seruyse more lower and more deuoutly in reuerence of our Lordea passion, with a maner of mornynge, not to lowe, nor to styll, but in a mene as it is most accordyng.

Forthermore, for our lord Jhesu Criste, souereyne mayster of al mekenes, of hys inestymable and profounde mekenesse, fyrste and principally began and taught un to hys dere and wel-hyloured disciplys in tyme of that moste worthy feste and laste supper on Schirthursday, the moste excellent and singular obseruaunce of hys mawnday to be kepte; therfor the abbes, pretending by office after her degre hys astate, owethe to folowe the steppes of hym in all that she may, in kepyng and fulfyllynge of the seyd obseruaunce, waschyng and wyptyng the fete of al her gostly doughtres and disciplesses, lyke as it is kepte for a perpetual memory and ensample in other places of religion. In what maner it is to be observed our Lorde schewethe hymselfe, in that he dyd water in to the basen, and broughte it also, and sette it down by the fete of hys disciplys, and full mekly and lowly, with an inwarde seruent charite, knelyng and bowyng down hys most holy body and sweetest handes to ther fete, wasched them personally, and wyped them loungly, as of hys moste familiar and special chosen mayne, with the oute any maner obsequye or mynystryng of other. Nevertheless, considering how insufficient and unworthy we be to the perfection of hym, and also beholding and obeyng to the olde usages and customes of holy faders of religion, this forme is and ought to be kepte in thys monastery foreuermore. The sustres euensoenge ended on Schirthursday, al schal go processionally to the chapter hows in ther hole habite, the yongeste before, and ther take ther places ordinatly, withoute any taryenge. So that the syngers sytte togyder syde to syde, lesse any discorde be made in the syngyng. And whilat the abbes doethe of her mantel, and tyethe up her sleues of her cowle, and araythe her by helpe of her sustres, the couente schal here ther fete to waschyng, and so sytte and schew the former parte of ther toes bare that alle may se hem. And whan the abbess comethe in atte the dore, with two sustres folowyng her in ther cowles, and beryng two basens of warme water after her, no suster schal than aryse, nor encline to her, for sche comethe than as a mynyster, but the chauntries anone schal begyn thys antem, Domine Ihesus. Whiche antem, with alle other thynges folowyng, is to be songe of suche a mesure that nothyng be ouerskyped, and that they cese not of syngyng tyl the prioress be come in azene after the waschyng of the abbes fete. First, therfor, the abbes schal go to the prioress, or to her that is president for that tyme, and knelyng downe with alle mekenes and inwarde deuocion, sche schal take her ryght fete in her lefte hande, and pouryng water ther up on thryes, with her ryght hande wasche it, and with the towel aboute her mydde wye it, and with her mouth kysse it; the suster that is so wasche somdele holdyng up her fete to the abbes, that sche may the more easly do her office of mekenes. Whiche done, sche schal leue the ryght fete, and do the same wyse to the lefte fete. And than bothe rysyng and enclynyng eche to other, sche that is wasche schal say to the abbes, Misereatur vatri spiritus Deus. To whom the abbes schal answer, Et dimittat vobis omnia peccata vestra. And after thys, sche that is to wasche schal sytte down azene, and the abbes schal serue al other sustres the same wyse, and after the same forme, begynnyng with the eldeste first on the ryghte syde, and that syde al serued sche schal turne ouer to the lefte syde, and do as sche dyd to the ryghte, enclynyng religiously in the mydde whan sche turnethe ouer. And whan sche hath wasche bothe sydes, sche schal wasche the fete of her mynystres, other two sustres holdyng the basens to her in the mene whyle, and than sche schal enclyne azene in the middes, and do of her towel withe oute, and anone come in azene in her hole regular habite, and dresse her own fete to be wasche. Whan, therfor, the abbes comethe in azene, the couente schal ryse, and enclyne to her as they be wonte, aytyng azene whan sche is sette. And than the prioress or presidente schal enclyne, and go oute and aray her withe another longe towel aboute her mydde, aboue her coule, and so come in and wasche the abbes fete, by the ministracion of the seyd two sustres folowyng her that mynystred to the abbess. And whan sche hathe done, sche schalle enclyne azene, and go oute with the seyd sustres, and doynge of her towel, they schal withe oute any taryenge come in azene in ther hole regular habite, enclyne and take ther places, and than the couent shal cese of syngyng, and no erste. Whiche done, the abbes schal ryse withe al the sustres, and turnyng to the mageste, they schal say the proces with note as it schewethe in ther processionales. And al thyng ended, they schal enclyne and go ther weys, and than the ebdomadary schal make the fyrst sygne to the potacion of charite. Attē the whiche al owe to be, bothe seke and hole yf they may, for the sollempnyte of the holy maundy of our lord Jhesu Criste.

[To matens and masse on Schyrthursday the bellys schal be ronge as they be wonte on the sondays, and than cese tyl estrye. Before matens schal be lyght xxiiiith tapers only, before the lower gre of the autyr, and at the begynnyng of reche antem and response, the keper of hyghe masse schal quenche one of hem aftyr the sydys of the quyer, begynnyng benethe, and goyng up from syde to syde. At the seven salmys the same obseruaunce schal be kepte that was on Aschewensday, al the brethren knelyng in the quyer in the mene tyme, and atte begynnyng of masse the tapers schal beholde, at the whiche masse al the lay brethren schal be comonyd aftyr the clerkys in ther regular habite with oute surplis, so that the mynyster of the sextry ley forth a stole before euery preste that schal be comonyd at the same masse, before the sacryng or anone aftyr, of the best stuly. The keper of the waschyng hows must ordeyn that ther be hote watyr at the comonyng for the brethres fete, and cleue towels to wype withe, and he schal ordeyn for watyr, both hote and colde, and for a cleue basyn for the maundy e hygh masse, or els aftyr mete, al the autyrs schal be made bare, and the mynyster of the sextry schal ordeyn for two bysoms made of boxe and ewe that was halowyd on pulme sonday for waschyng of the autyrs, and he, or els the mynyster of hygh masse, schal helpe the sextayn to halowe the holy watyr, and ordeyn for crueltys of wyne and cuppys for to powre watyr up on the autyr. To the sustrya eucensonge schal be two pele ronge withe the clappe be the seyd keepers of the sextry and of hyghe masse, and whan the last pele is ceyd, the taperers in surplys schal holde the tapers, turnyng to the autyr behynd the mynystris of the same, but none of the lay brethren schal kysse any autyr after the waschyng. Whan al the autyrs be wasche, the crosse berer and taperers withe the chefe crosse, al in surplys, schal go before the dekon and subdekon in the chaptyr hows, thorow the chirche, wher muste be sette a lectron before by the keeper of hyghe masse, and whan the gosbel is red, he schal take it away, the seyd crosse and other goyng in to the reuestry nyene as they cam oute in procession wyse. In waschyng of tete, the lay brethren schal conforme hem to the prestys, sayng Miserere tui spiritus Deus as they do, saue the mynyster of hyghe masse schal bere the basyn, and holde it to the confessour, or serche, whylst he waschoth the brethres fete, excepte whylst hymselfe is in waschyng, chaungyng the watyr whan one syde is waschen. At complyn the tapers schal be lyght as they be woute up on the bare autyr.—[Of the clap it schewith more playnly in the nyen and fourty chaptyr.]

CHAPTER XXXVII.

On Godefriday it is the custom to kepe silence tyl after mete, but yf it be in a case of nede, and to be occupied only in deuote prayers and sayng of Dauid sawter. That day schal be no masse of our Lady, but after the brethers teer, the suatres schal syng ther prime and teer, and after the brethres none, they schal do ther sexte and none. And forthewithe thei schal go in procession withe the seuen psalmes, barefote al the couente excepte the seke and suche as be licensed by the abbes. The letany is to be red of the abbes in the myddes of the quyer, al the couent lyeng prostrat aboute her. Also it is to be take hede, that ther prostracions in worchyppe of the crosse be religiously and ordynatly done, two and two togyder, as thei be in order, echone barfote. Saue the abbes schal be alone, and after her the prioress withe an elder suster. The sexteyn, also, moste take hede that the crosse be redy with tapettes and cuschens, and withe a taper brennyng up on a candelstyk on the syde of the crosse. And scho schal sylte and kepe it, and geue it to the worchippers thereof, that they may kysse it. Saue whilst scho worchippethe it another suster schal holde it, and geue it to her, and whan scho hathe done, scho schal kepe it aȝene as scho dyd firste.

[A Goode friday before matens the tapers schal be lyght as they wer a Schyrthursday at lute pele of the clappe, and that day schal be kept streyte silence, and occupied in prayer, tyl that aftyr none, but yf it be for a nedeful thyng that may not be done withoute speche. The sygne to hygh masse schal be made whan the sustres begyn ther letany aftyr ther seuen psalmes; whyche endyd, iij tapers schal be lyght, and the two taperers schal holde two of hem in surplys, when the preate cometh forth as they be wonte with owte sensour as gette. And when the dekon in the passion sayth Partita sunt vestimenta mea, the mynyster of hygh masse on the ryght syde, and mynyster of our Lady masse on the lefte syde of the awtyr, bothe of them in surplys, schal take away two linnen towels lyeng in the corners of the awtyr religiously, and, in lyncacion made before the myddles of the awtyr, bere them into the reuestry. Before the worchyping of the crosse, the mynyster of the sextry schal ley a clothe with cuschens ther up on at the lowest gree of the hyghe awtyr, and than he schal sprede the pawment with clothes doune to the quyer dore, wher up on the ministrys of the awtyr reuest, and general confessour, though he be not reuest, schal take ther veynes, but all other schal take ther veynes up on the bare pamente, al bryng bare fote. At ech longe veyne is one Pater Noster, one Aue, and Adoramus te, Christe, and at curte veyne at the crosse is only Adoramus te, Christe. They that kan not say Adoramus schal say in stede ther of one Aue, and in stede of Domine Ihesu Christe they schal say one Pater Noster and one Aue Maria at ende of seruise, aftyr the whyche the tapers schal be lyghte abowte the sepulchre be the minister of t
v. Whan the quyer is come to the awtyr ther schal
ur redy wythe colys, but at seruysing of the sepulch
o, and the seyd tapers schall bren styll tyl after n, excepte at Benedictus at matens on

Ester eue, and at blissing of the new fyre, saue a nyghtes tyme they shal be do owte, and ij other tapers schal bren in stede of them in a more syker place for eschewyng of perelle, and aftyr complen at ferdeste the paschal schal be reysed up.)

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

On Ester eue the sustres schal synge ther euensonge solemply as they be wonte in hyghe festes.

[On Ester eue, atte matens, al schal be after the fore seyde rewles, so that al tapers be qwenched be fore Benedictus. After matens al the awtyrs schal stonde open in ther principal aray, and the sygne to De profundis schal be as it is wonte, and the signe to our Lady masse schal be in the brethres houre of teers, at whyche masse no tapers schal be holde, thof the chefe tapett be leyd forth, and the chefe candelstyckes stond upon the autyr. Aftyr our Lady masse, the mynyster of the sextry schal ordeyn for fyre of coles to be halowyd, smyten out of the flynte stone, and in the sustres laste howre the sygne schal be made to hyghe masae. Whiche houre fullyche endyd, and the tapers aboute the sepulchre quenched, and al other lyghtes in the chirche, the quyer schal go to halowyng of the fyre under thys forme (by the north dore of the awter'), the holy water schal go before, the schafte after with ij tapers unlyght, the sensour aftyr with oute colys, goyng with the frankencense, and the boke laste before the subdekon et cetera. At halowyng of the fyre, the holy water schal stonde on the ryght syde of the preste, and by hym (on hys righthond') frankence and sensour before the preste, the boke berer, and behynde hym oo taper, behynde the preste another taper, and behynde hym the schafte, euerychone turnyng to the preste. And aftyr the sensyng of the fyre the schafte schal be lyght only, and than the holy water, schafte, taper, sensour, and cense schal go before the procession in to the quyer, ther stondyng as they be wonte aftyr procession on sondayes tyl the ympne be endyd, callyd Inuentor rutili (comyng by the south dore ynto the qwyre'). At halowyng of the paschal, the dekon schal stonde at a lectron northwarde, haunyng the paschal on hys ryghte hande, and tapers on euery syde unlyght. Behynde the subdekon schal stonde the schafte, and be hynde the dekon the sensour, with coles and frankencense, all turnyng to the dekon. The mynyster of the sextry schal lyght the paschal lampes, tapers, and other lyghtes as he is assygned. And after the dekon hath done, the schafte schal be sette on the south syde of the hyghe autyr, wher it schal bren tyl masse be endyd. Atte begynnyng of the whyche masse the tapers schal be holde lyghte, and at Gloria in excelsis, after the Kyrie, at the bellys schal be ronge; also at gosbel the tapers schal be holde agene quenched, and they schal be lyght agene after the gosbel, and than the bell schal be tollyd xiii strokes, and other bellys schal be tollyd and rongen as they be wonte in principal festys, et cetera; saue from curfewe bell in to the resurreccion, no bel schal be herd for any cause. As for the paschal, whan it is Majus or Minus duplex by the table, it schal be lyght at bothe euensonges of the day, complens, matens, and masse, and so it schal be lyghte al Ester wyke, excepte at complyn, thursday, and fryday. In al other dowble festys, sondays sengle, and sermon dayes, it schal be lyghte only at hyghe masse. But in sermon tymes it schal be quenched, oute take Ester day and Ascesion day, so that aftyr the sermon it be lyghte agene, so also that from the tyme it is lyghte on Ester eue in to the ende of the brethera complyn on Ester day, it schal bren continually, or els another taper halowyd ther with in stede therof anyghtes tyme. After the resurreccion, the tapers aboute the sepulchre schal be lyght and quenched as other tapers ar wonte to be, saue at complyn they schal not be lyght as it schewyth in the nexte chaptyr folowyng.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

Also on Ester day, after the resurreccion, they schal worschyp the crosse with prostracions barfote, as thei dyd on Gode fryday.

[The first sygne to the resurreccion schal be at . . . twelve, fyrst aboute the steple, than thorowe the dortour, and aftyr by the horloge. The . . . strokes schal be in the cloyster, and the secunde sygne schal be made at suche tyme that it may be endyd be twelve, and than the clappe schal be leyd up tyl the nexte yere. Betwene the seyd sygnes, clothes, and cuschens, and al other thynges necessary to the worchyping of the crosse, schal be made redy at our Lady autyr by the mynyster of the sextry, or by another brother. Whiche also schal sett the principal candelstyckes wythe tapers up on the hyghe autyr, and brynge torches in to the brethers quyer, that eche preste and dekon unreveste may here one aboute in the procession. The seyde torches therfor, and al other lyghtes lyght thorough the chirche, and iii lay brethren redy in ther surpys with ii censours and encense, al schal take ther curte veyne, and say a Pater Noster, an Aue, and a Crede, with Adoramus te, Christe. And anone atte begynnyng of the resurreccion, al the bellys schal be ronge the space of oo miserere, whiche also schal stonde for the fyrst pele to matens, and than the ryngers schal hye them . . . . . to the worchyping of the crosse. Atte the whiche al must be bare fote, so that the mynyster of the autyr and confessor take ther veynes up on clothes, but al other up on the bare pawemente. Ande ther schal be ii curte veynes at fyrst of the whyche the brethren ij and ii to gyder schal say oo Pater Noster, one Aue, and Adoramus te, Christe, and at secunde Adoramus, kepyng the same obseruaunce that the clerkys do at eche veyne. And whilst the crosse is in worchyping, ii torches schal bren, and other lyghtes, excepte the paschal schal be quenched, and al the ymages in the chirche schal be uncovered, and whan the chauntour begynneth the anthem . . . . . the brethern schal ryngc allyn to matens. In the procession before masse schal be iiiij torches, ii goyng before and ii behynde the sacramente. Allyn to the sustres euensonge thys day, and al the wyke aftyr un to saturday, schal be at begynnyng of the iiide psalme of euensonge of the day, and the crosse bothe at euensonge and at matens schal come oute of the reuestry to go before the procession to our Lady masse and to the crosse, and aftyr in to quyer azene, lyke as it is wonte on saturdays in somer tyme with tapers, sensour, and boke, et cetera. But at matens it schal not go no farther than to the grete crosse in the church. And the brethren most be ware that they come not to late aftyr ther ryngynge to sensyng of the autyr at Magnificat on Ester day et cetera.]

CHAPTER XI.

Seynt Marke fallyng in Ester wyke, or up on any sonday, he schal neyther haue faste nor procession that yere. Alle other tymes, and also the Rogacion dayes, hyghe masse al ended, the chauntres anone after the brethren schal begyn thys antem, Eswrge Domine. Secunde antem on seynt Marke day and Rogacion Monday schal be Surgite, sancti. Tuesday De Jerusalem, and Wensday In nomine Domini. The thryd antem schal be what the abbes, or chauntres in her abcesse, wylle, or els a response for pece, or for the weder, or for the cesyng of pestilence, or of any other skorges of God, or incommodytees, as nede requy- reth. The fyrst antem al ended in the quyer with Gloria Patri, and repeticion, the procession schal go forth after the forme expresyd to fore in the nyen and twenty chapter; saue the four procession dayes at leste, the holy water schal go before, castyng holy water before her and on euery syde as sche goethe, and the baner and ymage of our Lady schal folowe. And whan the seyd antems or responses be ended, two sustres schal syng one of the letanyes, stondyng in ther processionalles, in order, as they be assygned. And the chauntres muste take hede that they turne home agene be tymes, that they haue none nede to adde to mo seyntes than be expressed in ther hokes. At the entres in to the quyer they schal syng Ab inimicis nostris or Regina cali, or what they wyl els, and the abbes schal say the versicle and collecte folowyng. Whan they haue any procession any other tymes of the yere, for any nedeful thyng, yf the hyghe mas be hygon they schalle syng Ab inimicis alto- gyder, saue the laste verse, wythe oute the chirche, for stonyng of the preste at auter.

[ Alle fyrste euen-song of the first sonday aftyr Ester day, and euery saturday in to the Ascension, excepte at secunde euen- songe in the feste of the Inuencion of the Crosse, schal be pro- cession as it is wonte in somer tyme wythe oute crosse. Se- cunde sonday, the hyghe autyr and our Lady autyr, aftyr morn masse, schal be arayd as they be wonte in dowble festys excepte relikes, and holy water schal be made in the reuestry. And to the seyd masses only, alle the bellys schal be ronge. Whiche solempnite schal be kepte jerly, be cause of the first profession that was made the seyd sonday, and for the encrease of the religion. Aftyr the seyd masses, the autyrs schal be chaunged, but yf it be dowble feste the same day.

[ In the feste of Seynte Marke, and in the Rogacion days, after the incrynge of hyghe masse, schal be thre tollynges, echc of hem the space of oo Pater Nosters, one Aue, and a Crede, and as moche betwene echc tollyng; the fyrst tolle schal be with iii the smallest bellys, the ii<sup>d</sup>e with foure, and the iii<sup>d</sup>e with al syue of one acorde. So that the crosse and holy water be redy at lowest gre of the hyghe autyr to go forth withe the procession at ende of masse with al other brethren, al in ther regular habite. And they schal go fyrste aboute the ambites of the chirche, than aboute the cloyster, as ofte as the chauntour assygnethe, and whan the letany is begon, they schal go aboute the gardyn tyl the chauntour make assygne to turne home. And whan the brethren in the chirche begyn Mater, ora Filium, the crosse schal go in to the reuistry, and not before.]

CHAPTER XLI.

On Witsonday the sutores shal begyn ther pryme after the brethren pryme, bycause of the solempne obseruaunce to be hadde that day, after our lady masse, before the brothers teer. From the whiche obseruaunce none schal presume to absente hemselfe withe oute special licence of the abbes for a grete resonable cause. But alle in the mene tyme schal geue hemselfe swetly to prayer, and withe hertly and inwarde deuotion aske grace and comforte of the Holy Goste, sayng styllly echc of them alone thys holy ympne, Veni, Creator Spiritus, and thys antem, Veni, Sancte Spiritus, and versiele Emite spiritum tuum, with thes two collectes, Deus, qui corda and Deus, qui omne cor patet, knelyng al the whyle in ther stalles, or in some other place more conueniente. On relike sonday, the relikes schal be born aboute in procession, withe alle dewe worship and reuerence. Not bare but couered with golde or syluer after the rewle, or at leste withe clothe of gold or sylke.

[On Witson-eue, after our Lady mas, the hyghe autyr schal be arayd, as it is wonte in principal festys, but not our Lady autyr. Nor no relikes schal be sett forth in to fore euensonge. Al the houres schal be had before masse, wher to it schal be ronge withe the i<sup>d</sup>e and ii<sup>d</sup>e belle only, bot to other seruise of the day withe ii small bellys. Att begynnyng of masse iij tapers lyghte as it is wonte, ij of them schal beholde be the taperers, and azene at Confiteor. At Gloria in excelsis, al the bellys schal be ronge, and after grace the grete belle. On Witsonday the ryngyng to our Lady masse schal be at begynnyng of Jhesu Christe, and att Agnus Dei of the same masse the grete belle shal be ronge ij minerers whyle to Veni, Creator Spiritus. Whan masse is endyd, the schyp and iij sensours, al in surplys, schal go before the prestys oute of the reuestry, to the autyr, of the whiche the fyrst taperer schal holde one of the sensours, al stondyng behynd the prestys in order, and euer redy to mynster ther sensours whan tyme askethe, holdyng up the copes as it is acordyng, whylst the autyr is in sensyng. Before the first verse of the seyde ympne the confessour schal blysse the encense and put it in to the sensours, but at al other verse the schyp berer schal do it with oute blyasyng; and the ympne al endyd, they schal inclyne and bere in ther sensours agene, and than the tapers schal be quenched and not before. In the feste of Corpus Christi foure torches schal be borne in the procession as they wer on Ester day. In the feste of Seynt Anne and Decollacion of Seynt John Baptiste, to the seruise of the sustres, it schal be ronge as it is in principal festys, but to seruise of the day as it is wonte. Lammas day, and the sonday within the vtas, no belle schal be herde, as it scheweth of that is seyde before in myd lente sonday. On Seynt Laurence day the belle schal be tollyd the sermon in the sequence tyme, but whan it is sonday, it schal be tollyd aftyr the gospel as it is wonte. In the feste of Assumpcion and Natiuite of oure Lady, and every day withe in bothe vtasses, outake holy rode day, the minister of hyghe masse schal bryng the legende in to the chaptyr house for the collacion, and bere it in to the chirche agene whan it is doon.]

CHAPTERS XLII, XLIII, XLIV.

Al Soule day the sustres schal haue Te Deum at ther matens, and a disciplyne at the brethers pryme. And that day al schal kepe silence, but yf it be for a nedeful thyng, occupyng themselves in saynge of David souter and diriges, with other prayers and deuocions. Neuertheles, after mete they may speke, suche as haue endyd ther dewte and none els. That day ther schal be seyde no mo colectes at placeto and laudes, prime and haures, thof there be a corse present; but thys collecte, Fidelium

Deus. The iiiith and vth responses shal be seyde aȝene after the repete of the verses, and so they shal be in diriges for al corsos presente. And for al buschops and kynges. After the ixth response Libera me, Domine, the verses schal be Dies illa. Quando cali moventi sunt et terra. Ardentes animæ. Dum veneris judicare seculum per ignem. Creator omnium. Dum veneris. And than the response schal be seyde aȝene to the verses, alle other tymes the verses schal be Dies illa. Quando cali. Quid ergo. Dum veneris. Nunc, Christe. Libera me. Neuertheles, for euery corse presente, and for buschops, kynges, lordes, abbes, and confessours, after Nunc, Christe is to be seyde Dum veneris, and than the response schal be seyde aȝene with Requiescant in pace and laudes folowyng. Saue from Al Soule day in to the wensday tofore Ester, Exaltabo with hys orisons schal be seyde before laudes, and Voce mea after laudes.

In al diriges after Al Soule day, schal be seyde euermore at Placebo foure collectes, and as many at laudes, and neuer mo in the quier, and yet one of hem schal be Adjura nos for the founders and her frendes, or els Deus cui proprium the lasse, withe this addicion, propiciare animabus fundatorum nostrorum, et animabus famulorum famularumque tuarum, et omnia eorum peccata dimitte. So that the collectes for the buschops be leste unseyde, but whan the buschops and founder may be had toȝyder withe oute excesse of the number of foure, as it schewith in the comen boke ordeyned for saynge of diriges in the quier. In cotidian diriges withe thre lessons oute of the quier thes schal be the four collectes :

Neuertheles, withe in the tryntal of euery suster and brother the fyrst schal be for the tryntal, secunde for the founders, and none for the buschops, iiiith and iiijth as it is seyde before. The versicle before the lessons schal be Complaceat tibi, Domine, ut cruas, and the ixth respons Libera me, Domine, de cæcis inferni. Saue in Ester tyme at the autens schal be seyð withe ther psalmes at Placebo, Dirige, and Laudes, and with ther own versicles before every nocturne, and the vijth respons after every nocturne, schal be Libera me, Domine, de morte eterna. Moreover the firste dirige that is seyð in the quyer after the utas of Ester, it schal be seyð with the psalmes, autens, versicle, and lessons of the fyrst nocturne, what day that euer it be, and so it schal be for every corse present, and for buschops and kynges, al Ester tyme. But after that wyke on the monday schal be seyð the ijth nocturne, Tuesday the thryd, Wensday the firste, Thursday the secunde, Fryday the thryd, with Libera me, Domine, in every nocturne as it seyð before. Other obseruaunces schew before in the nyenth chapter of this boke.

[Of Al Halowe day and Al Soule day.

[Up on Al Halowe day it schal not be ronge to the sustres euensonge, oute take it be saturday as it is wonte, but aftyr euensonge whan the brethren begyn Placebo. At Magnificat the taperers schal holde the tapers besyde the confessour, but neyther the autyr schal be sensyd, neyther the quyer, saue at euensonge of the day. Moreover al the bellys schal be ronge in the sustres euensonge tyme, iij or v miserere while, or els more or lasse as the brethren be disposyd.

[Al Soule day the autyrs schal be arayed as they be wonte on werke dayes, and to servise both of sustres and brethren it schal be ronge as it is wonte whan it is inferius duplex, and ii tapers schal bren up on the autyr in secondary candelstyckes, and ii in the pamente al matens tyme and masses, withe oute holdyng of tapers and sensyng at Benedictus; but to our Lady masse and to hyghe masse it schal be ronge withe alle the bellys, [the sustres two houres tyme, or els as the space wyl yeue after the day is,] and aftyr the tolling after the gosbel, al the bellys schal be ronge in to Agnus Dei, or in to masse be almost doo; aftyr the whiche the brethren schal go in procession aboute the ambites and cloyster, the crosse and holy watyr goyng ith oute tapers, the sensour and schyp folowyng aftyr r habyt. Oute of mete it schal be ronge withe the

CHAPTER XLV.

In the entres of the quyer on the ryghte syde at the weste ende schal be the abbes stalle, and on the leste syde the prioress. Other sustres schal stonde, the eldeste nexte the abbes and prioress, halfe at oo syde, halfe at other, as they be in order of profession. Not al the weke yet to gyder, but so egaly departed that eche syde be lyke in byggenes of voyce and kunnyng. But at our Lady masse, the abbes and prioress and elder sustres may stonde at este ende, and the zonger sustres after them.

In al principal festes, the abbes shal execute the seruyse, syngyng the verse and benedicite at euensonge, and the thrydde verse at matens, and Allelujah, or the laste verse of the tracte, at our lady masse. Also sche schal rede the trydde lesson in al principal festes, and so sche may in alle other festes, what euer they be, and syng any thyng at euensonge, matens, and masse, whan sche felethe herselfe disposed. Also sche schal make al the terminacions in the chirche, jeue the thrid blyssyng at matens, whan sche redethe not the lesson, and al other blyssynges in the quyer, chapter, and freytour say Anima regis and Domine sancte Pater, and jeue holy water after complen. Also it lyethe in her charge to se that al regular obseruaunces be dewly kepte in the quyer and in al other places, conformyng herself to the same in all poyntes, and to admitte secular women to the religion, as it is seyde before in the fyfteenth chapter, or in to sustres and brethren of the chapter, suche as deuoutly aske it of her, after the forme expressed in the righte chapter, withe many other thynges here and there in this booke sette oute. If sche be absente from the quyer, or undisposed to syng, the prioress, or the obdomadaryes, schal fulfyl her stede, as it is most accordyng.

The chauntres and subchauntresses euerychone owe to be cunnyng and perfyte in redyng and syngyng, hauyng experience of the ordinal and makyng of the table for the quyer, with habilitie of voyce, of the whyche one whom the abbes assygnethe schal be the chiefe chauntresse. To whos charge principally it belongeth for to haue beay attendaunce aboute dyuyns servyse, that al thyng be done in goode rewle, and that nothyng be omittted thoroughe her negligence or of any other to her power. Also to sette the songe euen and mensurably, neyther to hyghe nor to lowe, neyther to faste nor to slowe, but sadly and devoutly after the solennyte of the feste or day, and after the leughte of bothe seruyses of sustres and brethern, and after the disposicion of ther brestes; for to syng so hyghe oo day, that they may nomore, or to longe and lowe, that they enwery and brynge a slepe bothe themself and ther herers, thys wantethe discrecion and doctryne of our Lord, whiche teche the in hys holy rewle that al thyng scholde be done reasonably. Therefore it is accordyng that sche haue alwey two or thre, or attle leste one note before al other, in setting of euery thyng, that they may the better understonde what heght and mesure they schal kepe. Sche also muste haue a grete warnes that no defaute be made in dyuyns servyse, so that whan any suster in ryngyng or redyng happethe to make any defaute notably perceyued of other, and doethe not amende it forthwith, sche schal fayre and easyly amende the defaute. But yf sche perceyue that it may not be mended with oute grete disturbaunce or taryeng of the quyer, than in al suche cases it is better to procede, and latt eche suster prenyly by herself amende the defaute, in awnter the herers be rather harte than edysyd by suche unwonte gerrynges, and the chauntres, whan sche seeth her tyme, schal proclame such a defaute, for the whyle dissimuled. Also it is her parte to se that the quyer be euen on euery syde in nowmber, voyce, and kunnyng, by kallyng ouer from oo syde to another as nede is, and this in moste conuenient tyme sche may, that the quyer be not distracte ther by (and to rewle the processions, et cetera<sup>1</sup>). Also to entune to the abbes softly alle the antems that sche is to begyn in double festes and other, and to remembre her whan sche schal rede any lesson, or syng any verse yf nede be, or do any other thinge in any conuentual acte. Also to write or make to be written all the names of sustres that aske the religion, expressing the day with the jere of our Lord whan they be admytted to th vrose, and to ordeyn for the skrowes of ther re-

Also it is her charge to haue alle the bokes in kepyng that longe to dyuine seruyse, chapter, and freytour, and to se that they be corrected, and made of one acorde; and also to correcte the reders, so that withoute her knowlage nothing be corrected in any of the seyd bokes, nor chaunged in the ordynal, withe oute the consente of the abbes, and assente of al the couente, by the counsel of the general confessour in that party as tochyng to the chaunge of the ordynalle. Also to haue the fyrst proclamacions in the chapter of al defaultes made openly any where in dyuine seruyse, and therfor sche owethe to be ware that sche do nothyng troblesly or commaundyngly, and that sche be not to importune in her assignacions, nor sette any thyng hygher or lower, lenger or schorter, but yf it be veray nede, doyng al thyng quietly, pesyibly, religiously, and charitably, withe goodly wordes or sygnes, and withe maner of a mylde hesechyng, that the sustres haue a joy to do any thyng after her. For often tymes statly and unreligious porte causeth murmur and grudgyng to other, and excludethe grace from bothe partyes. None ther for schal presumptuously take any note before her, but to her setting hygher or lower, lenger or schorter, tabulyng and assygnementes, alle owe redyly to obey as in dyuine seruyse. Suche as do the contrary, to the disturbance and lettyng of Goddes seruyse, they schal be corrected as they that do more grevous defaultes.

The office of the chefe subchauntres is for to assiste the chauntres in myddes of the quyer in hyghe festes, and for to fulfyl her office in al places as ofte as she is absente, or hathe any impedimente, and also to sette the table after the forme expressed to fore in the sex and twentyeth chapter.

[The chauntors office is to proclame the lay brethren of al defautea, made in the chirche or in any other place longing to diuine seruise only.]

CHAPTER XLVI.

Of the alternacion of the quyer and of the ebdomaryes.

Euery other wyke the quyer schal vary, so that it be on the abbesse syde oo wyke, and on the priores syde another wyke, begynnynge euermore the saturday at euesonge. Neuertheles in al principal festes it schal be on the ryght syde as for that day, so that yf the ebdomary be than of that other syde, sche schal come ouer in the absence of the abbes, and fulfil her office on the abbes syde, as for that day only and nomore, and so sche schal do also, the abbes beyng presente, and not disposed to synge, but yf the abbes ordeyne otherwyse.

Of the ebdomary.

The ebdomary is bounde euermore to be one of the fyrst in the quyer, and to absteyn and withedrawe herself from alle thynges that wyke that myght lette her to performe her office. Ande when the abbes executethe not the seruyse sche schal begyn the Inventary, and geue the thrydde blyssing when the abbes redethe the thrydde lesson, and also fulfyl the office of the abbes in principal festes, as it is seyde before, excepte in suche thynges as belonge to the priores or serges, as it schewethe in dyuers places of thes Addicions, and in the Ordynalle.

Of the begynners.

The rectours of the two begynners of masse, or of any other thyng by the wyke, schal begyn the ympnes, psalmes, antemes, and responses in ther stalles, but at masse they schalle do ther office in myddes of the quyer, stondyng, syttyng, and enclynnyng alway to the este, saue at matens they schal conforme ther of the ser
 yer as moche as they may, as it schewethe

it is seyed in the xliii chaptyr. The secunde taperer also schal helpe to sette forth the pulpet and to remoue it, and to ryng in double festes whan it is nede. The crosse berer schal go before in al processions whan the crosse is had, excepte holy watyr, and he schal turne home agene as the chauntour assignethe hym, and he schal bere the rede baner in profession days, as it schewethe in the sextenth chaptyr. The boke berer schal bere it in processions, and holde it to the preste whan nede is. The schyp berer schal bere the schyp with encense as ofte as ther be mo sensours than one behynd the sensours. Oute of the chirche they schal begynne ther offices on the sondays in the mornynge, and kepe forth al the wyke solowynge. Amen.]

CHAPTER XLVII.

Of the versiculers for the wyke.

The two sustres that be tabled to syng the versicles schal syng the Venite and the first verse at matens, and also the smale responses at pryme, houres and complen, withe al the Benedicamus, euer togyder and neuer alone.

Of the servise of sustres unlettred, et cætera.

Sustres that be not lettred, or syng not for a tyme, schal not occupye the stalles, witheoute special dispensacion of the abbes. But they with other officers schal stonde before the stalles, eche in ther order, and in ther hole habite, kepyng the same observances that the quyer doethe. Sauē after Indulgete they schal do as the abbes assignethe hem. They that kan not rede schal say dayly in stede of matens fourty Pater nostres, with as many aves, and oo crede; and for eche euesonge as many; for pryme, teor, sexte, none, and complen, for eche of them tenne Pater nostres, with as many aves, and oo crede; for our lady masse fyfene Pater nostres, with as many aves, and oo crede. Euery sonday, in stede of matens of the Holy Goste, seven Pater nostres, with seven aves, and oo crede; for pryme, teor, sexte, none, and complen, for eche of them oo Pater, with one ave, and a crede; and onge, thre Pater nostres, with thre aves, and oo crede. iday, tuesday, and wensday, in stede of stres, withe as many aves, and oo crede, butte whan the sustres haue Dirige in the quyer they schal say our Lady sauter. Euery thursday, in stede of the thre psalmes for synners, fyue Pater nostres, with fyue aues, and a crede. Euery fryday, in stede of the seuen psalmes and letany, seuen Pater, with seuen aues, and thre credes. And eche saturday, in stede of the thre psalmes for the ryghtwea, seuen Pater nostres, with seuen aues, and oo crede. Also for euery sustre and brother aneled eche day nyen days togyder, butt yf they decease in the mene whyle, they schal say nyen Pater nostres, with nyen aues, and a crede. But whan they be pasaed, in stede of eche sawter, an hundreth and fyfty Pater nostres, with as many aues, and a crede after eche fyfty, heayde other suffrages expressed in the nyenthe chapter. Neuertheles, suche as kan say our Lady matens after seculer use, they by the assygnement of the abbes and general confessour, in stede of the seyd Pater nostres, aues, and credes, schal say our Lady seruyse, seuen psalmes and letany, dirige, and such other prayers that they kan say. And yf they kan not say Dauid psalter, they schal say the seuen psalmes and letany ten tymes in stede ther of, or els the seyd Pater nostres and aues.

Of yonge sustres.

Yonge sustres schal haue the elder in dewe reuerence, and zelde hem self seruisable to them at alle tymes in alle places, zeuyng them way to go wher euer they mete hem, and puttyng to ther handes to helpe them in beryng of heuy bookes, or of any other grete berdons, and in alle other thynges assygned them by the abbes. Also tho sustres that be withe maystres owe to behaue them un to hem reuerently, and take hede diligently what is taught hem; ffor as they be taughte now, so they may teche other in tyme to come.

[They that kanne rede schal dayly say our Lady seruyse, seuen salmes, fyften psalmes, and letany, or any other thyng lymyt hem by the general confessour, so that the quyer be not interrupte be ther lowde sayng, whisperyng, or any other noyse. They that kan not rede, schal in stede of matens say dayly fourty Pater nostres, with as many aues, and oo crede, and as many for euensonge; for pryme, houres, and complen they schal say for eche of hem tenne Pater nostres, with tenne aues, and oo crede; and for hyghe masse xv Pater nostres, and xv anes, and oo crede. Of the prayers for them that be anelyd it schewith in lviijth chaptyr, and for them that be passyd in the lxiijth chaptyr. Thes also hothe werke-day and holyday schal be at seruise of the day, there stondyng in the lower stullis reuerently before the preists and dekons, eche in hys order after their seniorite in religion, kepyng the same obseruances, in standyng, sytting, inclynyng, and knelyng, and other, as the quyer doethe; so that none of hem presume to absente hymselfe from any houre of the day, or from our Lady masse, witheoute a resonable cause allowyd by the general confessor. If any come late, they schal inclyne wher as they be assygned, and go to ther places, or aboute ther ministracion in the chirche, and make amendys in the chaptyr the next chaptyr day. And yf they use suche defaultes customably, or els wilfully and of purpose with draw them selfe, they schal the more greuously be punysched. At begynnyng of matens they schal do as it zeyd in the xix chapter. Atte begynnyng of the brethres laudes, or thereaboutes, the mynyster of the sextry, withe helpe of hys brethren, schal make al autyrs redy to masse, with al thynges requisite ther to; and whilst they mynyster any thyng to the prestys at autyr, they schal leue ther bokes and bedes, and powre wyne in to the chalices with bothe handes. And they schal behaue them aboute the autyrs like angels, whose stedes they there occupy. At ende of Agnus Dei they schal knele with the pax besyde the preste tyl he haue kyssed it, excepte masses of requiem, whiche pax they schal bere no fether, but to them that be nye to the same autyr. Also they muste be ware of noyse aboute the autyr, be ratlyng of bedes or whisperyng, and that they gace not the preste in the face, fixyng ther cyn up on hym, namely, whilst he holdethe the sacrament ouer the chalice. Thes therfor be not receyued to this holy religion for to be ydel, but be ther contynual labours and seruise mekly to mynyster to the prestys and dekons al ther necessities in the chirche, at table, and al other conuentual places, astyr the hyddyng of ther souereyn. To make ther fyre, wasche ther clothes, schaue them, kepe ther gardyn, kleene, dygge, and delue, and sette and sowe ther in, to the comen profite, but not to take up any trees or herbes nece sustyr or brother with oute licence of ther age and tolle the bellys at dewe tymes, and to kepe alle places honeste and klene, withe al thynges per-teynnyng ther to, and to do any other thyng commaunded by the general confessour, after the rewle and ordynaunce of our holy fader pope Martyn the vte, in hys bulle articulo xxxvto.]

CHAPTER XLVIII.

Of the office of the sexteyne.

To the sextayne it belongethe to haue al the ornamentes of the chirche in kepyng, that be not occupied amonge the brethron, as chalices, cruettes, basens, and suche other, withe al the ropes, Jewelles, and reliques. And that sche hathe in her kepyng sche owethe to kepe it hole and sounde, fayre, clene, and honeste, and to repayre it, and chaunge it as ofte as nede requyreth. so that sche brynge up no newe thyng, nor do any grete unwonte thyng withe oute knowlage and licence of the abbes. Also sche owethe to se that the awter clothes, awbes, and towelles, and also sudaryes longyng to the awtres, be klene wasche, and take to the brethron as ofte as nede requyrethe.
Also, whan the sexteyn of the brether syde halbe wasche the corporas ones, sche withe help of her sustres schal wasche them, sterche them, drye them, folde them up, and delyuer them in agene to the seyd brother; so that no suster wasche nor touche and halowed corporas withe her bare handes, withe oute linnen gloues, therto ordeyned, nor sterche hem but withe sterche made of herbes only. If they do the contrary, they be straitly bounde to telle it to the seyd sextayn of the brether syde, that they may be newe wasche and halowed agene.

Also to her it longethe to haue the kepyng of waxe, lampes, oyle, and of al other thynges longyng to the chirche, and also to puruey for syngyng brede (and commenyng brede<sup>1</sup>), sudarys, waxe candelles, talow candelles, waxe rolles, tapers, torches, mattes, nattes, and roundlettes for the chirche, and for penuers, penues, ynke, ynkehornes, tables, and suche other as the abbess assygnethe her.

Also to open and schet the dores and wyndowes of the sustres quyer and comenyng places, and to lyghte and quenche the tapers and candles, and snuffe them, in suche wyse and in suche tyme that the sustres be not greued withe the sauour.

Whiche of the service shall thus be kept and observed in the church, be it great or small, is a thing concerning the church, is a distinction of duties and places, is bearing up and bearing down of duties, with and without, is bearing up of vestmentes, organs and smaller things. Also be schal knowe that the service is made with both the chorow, cantori-strumens and candles of waxe and tapers, for when the service waxe and waxes is in the church, and with them both. Also lay the same waxes and vestmentes up at the altar, and laye and uncover the hangings in the chancel and choir, take out the incense, water, tapers, and vestmentes, and the chalice whole, and set it up as these things be set and cover as they pass, and waxes and putte the golden crozier, hangings and hangings up in the wile of wile, and the candlesticks as they be set in, that they be set with waxes, and laye the chalice close above and behind from crozier waxes, candlesticks and also the chalice and provide, chapter, and story. Also be schal laye the chalice and waxes, and also the books with al things that longen to in them, rasing al pelys that be set up in the church. [Also be schal waxes the same of rasing the service pelys in the brethren matens and eynesong. While many other things expressed in the next chapter, and in many other chapters of this Additions. So yet that in waxes labours as power by power, other lay brethren maye be the waxes or al helps bym selflyng by office. Suche as wyl not schal be poynted in the chapter. Althir carrowe belle, be schal lokke the church and doctour does, and open them agene in the morning. At the smale antyrs schal be arayed, take down or changed and foldyd up in double festes by other lay brethren. Furthermore, every day in the yere before matens, eynesong, and complen, wylt they ryng allyn, and before matens with note, when the sustres be alle laste collecte, they schal lyght the ij tapers up on the grete candelstikkens; and before Magnificat and Benedictus, when the antyr is to be sensyd, the taperer of the leste syde schal list other ij tapers up on the antyr. / and houres schal neuer be taper lyght, nor at any m wote up on any antyr, but when ther is a subdecon it complen eche nyghte in the yere schal be lighth ij tapers only, and neuer no mo, up on the hyghe autyr. Neuertheles, in al double feates, at euensonge, matens, and masses, besyde the ij tapers brennyng up on the grete candelstyckes, schal bren other ij tapers up on the autyr al scruiſe tyme. Also in the feste of eche seynt that hathe an autyr ther schal bren oo taper at leste ther up on, or before it in scruiſe tyme, and be quenched whan other be. But on Cristmasday, Ester day, and Witsonday, eche autyr schal haue oo taper brennyng at leste, in reuerence and worship of the feste.]

CHAPTER XLIX.

Of ryngynge of the dortour belle.

Also to the sexteyn it belongethe to ryng the dortour belle, after the forme that sche is assygned by her souereyne. Other thynges longynge to her office schewe before in the sixteenth chapter, in the begynnyng therof, and in other dyuers places of the presente Addicions.

Before the fyrst pele to euensonge and matens the dortour belle schal be ronge oo Pater Noster and one Ave while, excepte before Ester iij days, and whan the brethren and sustres haue dirige that astyr none to gyder, and anon forthwith schal be ronge the first pele, and aboute halfe an houre astyr the secunde. The fyrst pele schal euer be one Miserere while, the secunde two, and astyr that the tolling with seven or eight strokes at moste; so that betwene the first and secunde pele to matens only, the grete belle schal be tollyd fyue strokes, excepte Ester day. To pryne and teers togyder, excepte Witsonday, it schal be ronge at ende of the laste psalme of the sustres laudes, one Miserere while, or els ij as ofte as masse of requiem is to be seyde in the brethres prime, and than eche day in lenton as ofte as the first pele to matens is atte ij of the klokke or before, the rynger schal knocke at eche dore sadly, wheras any brother lyethe that may come to chirche; which is also to be obserued at al other tymes, if it happe to be ronge to late to any scruiſe. To our Lady masse it schal be ronge at begynnyng of the houre of teers of the brethren al the yere, excepte Witsonday, ij Miserere while. In the middes of the laste psalme, of the whiche houre, or els after the laste kyryeleys, whan ferial preces he had, the minister of hyghe masse schal tolle the quyer belle to De profundis, oo Pater Noster while, and it is to be marked, that iij strokes alone of the seyde belle betokenethe that it is tyme to ryng to any seruise, ij strokes that prestys lakke helpe at autyrs, and oo stroke that ther is litel helpe in the quyer.

To the houre of sexte it schal be ronge oo Pater Noster and Aue while, aboute the ende of the last psalme of the sustres houre after our Lady masse; but on sondays, at begynnyng of Bonitatem, et cetera. To the seuen psalmes, peculiar processions, and disciplines, the chaptyr schal be tollyd as it is wonte to De profundis at graue. To hyghe masse it schal be ronge in conuenient tyme ij Miserere while, withe the same bellys that wer ronge for allyn to matens, outake certayn days in ther places expressyd after the procession of the brethren, but ys the sustres also haue procession. And after the gosbel of hyghe masse the grete belle schal be tollyd xiii strokes euery day excepte a fewe, and the same belle, or els another, schal be tollyd iij strokes at eche leuacion of the same masse, of whom that euer it be, but ys it any wher be excepte. After mete and suppyr, whilst the brethren go to chirche with grace, oo belle schal be ronge oo Pater Noster while and one Aue. (Nota<sup>1</sup>). And the same wyse the fyrste pele schal euer be ronge with the leste belle to collacion, and the pele to complen after the collacion. But the secunde pele to collacion schal be ij Miserere while at leste.

Curfewe belle schal euer be ronge withe the tyde belle, outake dowble festys, ij Miserere while, after the sustres haue fullyche endyd ther complen; so that betwene the tollynges before and after be the space of v Aues, ande than he schal schette the chirche and dortour dores, and go to bedde. Be fore Ester, whan the belles be not ronge, lyke sygnes schal be made withe the clappe. Whilst any sustyr or brother lyeth in passyng, the grete belle schal be tollyd continually, excepte certayn tymes, et cetera. And whan the soule is passyd it schal be ronge oute iij or v Miserere while, as the tyme zeneth. And it is to be knowen that whan it is majus duplex, and on Myddent Sonday, the fyrst pele to euensonge and matens schal be with iij the smallest bellys, the secunde withe al fyue; and the secunde pele to collacion and to complen, curfewe, prime, sexte, and grace after meles, schal be withe the grettest belle. If it be minus duplex, the first pele schal be with iij, the mydle belles, and the secunde with iij the grettest, and the pele to collacion, complen, curfew, prime, sexte, and graces, with the iij<sup>de</sup> belle.

If it be inferius duplex, the first pele schal be with the secunde and iij<sup>de</sup> belles, and the secunde with iij the mydle. And the longe pele to collacion, and peles to complen, curfewe, prime, sexte, and graces, with the iij<sup>de</sup> belle, outake Al Soule day as it schewith in the soure and fourty chapter. If it be numm lectiones, or de doctrina, or inuitatorium triplex, or of any commemoration, or de octavis, or de festo trium lectionum cum regimine chori, the first pele schal be with the secunde belle, and the secunde with the same and the iij belle. To collacion, complen, prime, sexte, and graces the leste belle, and for curfewe the iij<sup>de</sup> belle. In al other days schal be ronge ij the smallest bellys after the seyd forme, excepte certayn days in ther places expressed. As for the sustren they schal neuer, oute take in lente, haue but oo pele to ther scruiue, with the same belles and the same space that it is ronge to seruyse of the day. But to our Lady masse it schal euor be ronge with the secunde and iij<sup>de</sup> belles, outake dowble festes, et cetera. To ther euensonge it schal be ronge aboute the luste psalms of the brethren, or as the ryngers may come be tymes to sensaying of the autys. To ther matens nt luste response of matens of the day, and to our Lady masse, as it is seyd before.]<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The origin of bells is of remote antiquity. It appears they were used by the Greeks and Romans both for sacred and profane purposes. Mr. Whitaker (Cathedral History of Cornwall, vol. ii. p. 146) informs us, that bells were in frequent use among the Romans, and were, probably, introduced by them to the Britons during their sway over this island. Before that period, the early British Christians made use of wooden rattles (sacra signa) to call the congregation of the faithful together. According to Pancirollus (Rerum Memorabilium, lib. ii. p. 158), bells were first introduced into ecclesiastical service by Paulinus Bishop of Nola, about the year 400, whence they derive their Latin names Nola and Campana, Nola being in the Campagna of Rome. In the ancient monasteries we find six kinds of bells enumerated by Durand, Rational. lib. i. c. 4.), viz. equilla rung in the refectory, cymbalum in the cloister, nola in the choir, notula, or dupla, in the horologium (clock tower), campana in the belfry, and signum in the tower. Beletius (Divinor. Offic. c. 26) has much the same; only that for equilla, he puts tintinnabulum, and places the campana in the tower, and campanella in the cloister. Others place the tintinnabulum or timolium, in the refectory or dormitory; and add another bell called corrigiuncula, rung at the time of giving discipline, to call the monks to be flogged. The cymbalum is sometimes also said to have been rung in the cloister, to call the monks to meat. As to the sancta, sanctus, sauice, sans bell, it was

Aged austres and seke, and also yonge and hole that for labour, or for any other feyntnes or feblenes, or for any other reasonable cause, may not abyde fastyng tyl the covent goeth to mete, they may on the fastyng dayes, outake water dayes, take brede and drynke in the freytour after De profundis at graue, be licence of the abbes or presidente. On suppyng dayes they may take an egge or two, or any other thyng ordeyned for them by the officers after the tyme asketh. But none schal take any potage nor flesche mete but in the fermery or parlour, and thys withe special licence of the abbes: ffor in her power and moderacion it is whan the austres schal take any recreation in the parlour or fermery, as whan they be latte blode, or for any suche other cause. Neuertheles, the legister and seruitours, enery day before mete, fastyng dayes and other, whan they take not ther myxtom after De profundis, may take a messe of potage in the freytour, or any other thyng assygned by the abbes and ordeyned by the celeres, or by other officers, as it is seyde before, and thys in suche a sason as they may make an ende ther of by the secunde chyme. So yet that none take myxtom tywes a day, nor any mete or drynke, outake spyces, saue only in the freytour, parlour, or fermery, withe oute special licence of the abbes, but yf any sodeyne case falle of unwonte nede.

Moreouer, whan al seruyse is endyd, the celeres schal so that ther be no longe taryeng from mete, but as sone as the kokes be redy sche schal smyte the fyrst stroke up on the chyme, and warne the brethren to do the same on ther syde, and after the space of oo Miserere whyle the ebdomary shal smyte two strokes, and than the covent must drawe to the frey-

the priest's proper bell, and rung at all times when he wished to command the attention of the congregation. The bells (of which the ropes had brass and sometimes silver rings at the end for the hand) were anciently rung by the priests themselves, afterwards by the servants; and sometimes by those incapable of other duties, as persons who were blind. (Golden Legend, fol. cxxxviii<sup>b</sup>. Du . Speim. Gloss. v. Campana.)

tour; and after the space aȝene of another Miserere whyle the abbes or president schal smyte thre strokes for allyn, so that betwene eche stroke be the space of one Aue Maria. Neuertheles, the two fyrst smytynges before supper, and conuential drynkynges, schal be done by the ebdomary, but the thryd as it was before mete.

[Aftyr our Ladymasse the brethren be licence of the presidente may take brede and drynke, and fische day mete in the freytour, but no maner of flesche mete withe oute special licence of the general confessour, and that in the fermery. Neuertheles the logister and scruitours euery day before mete, but yf they take myxtom aftyr our Lady masse, may take a messe of potage, or any other thyng ordeyned be the keper of the wheyle in the freytour aftyr the assygnement of the souereyne, and thys bothe fastyng day and other, that they may the better do ther offices, and abide in to the secunde mete. The fyrst stroke of the chyme before mete schal be smyten by the keper of the wheile, and the secunde by the scruitour, and at the first chyme the butler schal sett forth the pottys fyllyd with fresche drynke up on eche table before the places of euery brother, whyche drynk schal be drawn at suche tyme that neyther ther be taryeng of the chyme, nor resonable complaynte of pallyd drynke. So that bytwene enery chyme ther be the space of Miserere mei Deus, for by the iijde chyme al owe to be in the freytour, the scruitours in ther rewle cotes, or in ther pylches under ther cowles, with fayre and honest naprons gyrde aboute hem, kepyng the same obseruaunce that the clerkes do. And it is forboden that none take any mete or drynk but in the freytour or fermery, with oute special licence of the souereyne, but yf the more soden case falle.]

Whylst, therfor, the president smytethe allyn, the conento schal stonde in the freytour in ther places, witheoute the tables, before ther setes toward the mageste. And whan sche cometh in to the freytour, they schal stonde face to face, hauyng ther handes in crosse wyse in ther cowl sleeves, and as sche passeth by them, by the myddes of the freytour, they schal turne aȝene to the mageste, but not enclyne but to the abbes, as sche passeth before them. Than the president, stondyng up on the gre of the freytour, schal ryng the belle one Aue whyle, enclynyng to the mageste bothe before and after, and than go and stonde about al, by nethe the gre, on her owen syde, and al enclynyn and stondyng to the mageste, the chauntres or subchauntres in her absence, withe oute any chaungyng of sydes evermore, schal begyn graces withe note, in a sober voyce, sayng thus Benedicite. The presidente schal answer with oute note Domiaus, and than the couente schal procede the graces with note as the chauntres began in thys wyse on fastyng dayes generally, Edent pauperes, et cetera. If it be a suppyng day they schul say thus Oculi omnium in te sperant, Domine; so procedyng al the graces under oo tune, whiche is to be observed evermore, bothe before mete and supper, and after and before alle conuential drynkynge, so that the chauntres sette the tune and rewle the mesure. At Gloria Patri, and whylst the say Pater noster and Aue Maria, they schal enclyne face to face, as they be wonte, and at Sicut erat to Kyrieleyson they schal ryse ayene, and stonde as they dyd before. But from Pater Noster in to the grace is alle ended, they schal stonde towards the mageste. Whan the ebdomary saythe Ei ne nos, the abbes or president schalle go to her place, and take her sete, and the ebdomary nt Benedic, Domine, nos et dona tua schal blysse ones before her withe her ryzt hande, hauyng the ryng of her profession up on her synger, not stretchyng oute her arme, nor beryng her hande aboute the freytour, nowe to oo syde, now to another, but, dressyng her mende to God, sche owethe to pray hym in her soule that he wylle be the seyd blyssyng blysse alle thyng sette, or to be sette before them for ther bodyly sustynance for that seson.

Of the legister.

In the mene whyle the legister schal go to the gre, and enclynyn in the myddes tofore the ymage of our Lady, say Jube, Domine, benedicere. To whom the president, syttinge att the table, schal answer thus on fastyng dayes generally, Cibo spiritualis alimonia reficiat nos, Rex eterna glorie. The couente schal answer thus, Amen. On suppyng days the president schal say thys benediction, Mensa celestis participes faciat nos Rex eterna glorie. The couente, Amen. And than al enclynynng religiously, eche schal go take ther setes as they be in order, but the legister schal go to the redyng place, and the seruitours to bryng in mete. And whan al be sette, anon the legister schal begyn to rede, distynctly and openly, that al may under-stonde it. And sche muste rede suche mater as the abbes or chauntres assignethe, to the edyfyng of sowles, so that none meddel with the correccion of the rede, nor make her turne aȝene whan any desyrethe be sygne to here any mater aȝene, save only the presidente and chauntres. Ones every wyke schal be redde the rewles of Seynt Sauyours and of Seynt Austyn, hoole, and also a parte of thes Addicions, after the forme sette in the laste endyng of this boke. At the laste ende of mete and soper, whan the presidente saythe Tu autem, anone with the oute any delay, the legister schal answer thus, Tu autem, Domine, miserere nostri. The couente schal answer in a sober voyce, the chauntres takynge the fyrste note att the leste Deo gracias, and than the presidente schal ryng the belle, and the couente schal ryse and stonde before the tables, lyke as they dyd before mete, enclynnyng reuerently to the mageste whan they take ther places, and whan the presidente is in her place, the chauntres schal say Memoriam fecit mirabilium suorum. Or els, yf it be a suppyng day, Confiteantur tibi, Domine, omnia opera tua. The couente schalle answer in this wyse, Et sancti tui benedicant tibi, kepyng the same tune under oo voyce in to the antem of our Lady. At Gloria Patri they schal enelyne face to face; and at Sicut erat rise and turne aȝene to the mageste. And whan the ebdomedary hathe seyde Agimus tibi gratias, and the couente hathe answerd Amen, the chauntres schal entune this psalme thus, Miserere mei, Deus. And than the couente, enclynnyng to the mageste, schal procede with the seyde psalme to the chirche, syde for syde processionally, the zongest before, al under oo tune, not descendyng to ny, the syde of the ebdomary sayng thus, Secundum magnam misericordiam tuam. That other syde schal answer thus, Et secundum multitudinem miserationum tuarum dele iniquitatem meam. And whan they come in to the quyer they schal enelyne as they be wonte at the deske in ther stalles, and at Gloria Patri, and after Kyryeleyson they schal knele down tyl grace is al ended, with a Pater noster after and Aue Maria. So that the antem of our lady, with the preces folowyng, and De profundis, be seyde wyth oute note. And whan the abbes or president makethe the sygne to ryse, amylyng with her hande as it is wonte, al schal ryse and enelyne to the este, and at the deske, and so go forthe processionally, the zongest before down towards the lautory. Save or they wasche ther handes the abbes or president schal say Benedicite, the couent, also, with the oute note, schal answer Dominus, the abbes Adjutorium nostrum in nomine Domini, the couente than enclynyng. Qui fecit celum et terram. After thys they schal wasche ther handes ordynatly, as many as mowe to gyder at the lauatory, begynnyng from the abbes or presidente and elder sustres to the youngest; which done, and oo stroke smyte up on the chyme, silence is lowsed and the sustres may departe, and not before withe oute special licence of the presidente. At supper, graces schal euer be, Edent pauperes, and the blyssyng up on the legister, Ad canam vitam eterne producat nos Rex glorie, Amen. After supper the chauntres schal bogyn Memoriam fecit, and the ebdomary Benedictus Deus in donis suis, and the same obseruaunces arn to be kepte in al poyntes, bothe before supper and after, in waschyng of handes and alle other thynges, as it is seyde before of mete. Forthermore, on fastyng days and water days, before conuenticualle drynkynge, the chauntres schal say withe note Benedicite, the presidente withe oute note Dominus, and the ebdomary blissing the drynke withe note, Rex angelorum benedicat potum ancillarum suarum. The couente schal answer withe note Amen. And than the legister saynge Jube, Domine, the president sytting in her place schal say thys blyssyng withe note, Sapientia Dei Patris nos celestibus instruat disciplinis. The couent schal answer Amen, and enelyne and go to ther places, and whan al be sette, the president schal make a sygne to the legister for to rede, and whan sche seethe that al haue dronke, sche shal smyte two strokes up on the belle, and than the legister schal cese, and the couent schalle say fyue Aues, and other fyue Aues whan sche smyteth agene. Thys done, the presidente schalle say withe oute note Benedicite. The couente schal answer Dominus. And than al schal ryse and enelyne, and go ther weys religiously. And the same wyse, saue withe oute note, graces schal be seyde in the fermerye and in the parlour.

CHAPTER LI.

Of late comers to graces in the freytour.

If any come late to graces in the freytour, or in any other place, yf sche come after Gloria Patri sche schal stonde laste and lowest of al, and say her graces tyl sche haue overtaken the couente. yf Gloria Patri be not ended, she schal go to her .
uertheles, the ebdomary schal euer go to her place, but yf sche come in after Et ne nos. If any come in whan graces is ended sche shal mekely go to the gre of the freytour by the myddes, and licence asked of the presidente, and graunted by sygnes for to any grace, sche schal say it altogyder enclynyng, in the myddes, that sche lette not the seruitours, and than aske leue agene to ete or drynke by sygnes, and so go to her place; and this is to be obserued of al, notwithstanding that any haue leue to be from grace. If any come in aboute myddes of mete or supper, or of conuentual drynkynges, or whan they begyn to take up, sche schal be licence of the presidente refresche withe the legister and seruytours; and yf sche be wonte ofte to come late, sche schal lese a parte of her prebende, and be corrected in the chapter.

In the freytour at eche ende, or els in the myddes of the hyghe table, schal hange a belle, and the abbes sete shal be in the myddes, honestly arayed, under the ymage of our lady, wher she shal sytte alone, so that none felyschop withe her in any place, nor at any tyme take her sete. Other sustres schal sytte at the syde tables in ther order as they be professyd, two and two togyder at oo messe; saue the pryores schal sytte in the leftte syde aboute alle, alone, at oo messe, but yf the abbes dispose other wyse. None, therfore, schal absente herselfe from grace as moche as sche may, nor none schal use to go from the couente tyl after the waschyng of handes. Also syttyng at the table al schal kepe hyghe sylence, and ther syghte from wanderyng aboute, and none schal stretche her handes to receyue any bodyly fode, tyl the soule be refresched with spiritual fode. Wherfor, whan they be sette they schal holde ther handes in crosse wyse in ther cowle sleues, and whan the legister hathe redde a clause, or any thyng edificatory to the soule, the space of oo Pater noster whyle, they schal tye up ther sleues aboute ther armes, and take ther bodyly sustynance, soberly and discretly, withe reuerent fere and thankynges to God. Ande thryes in mete whyle, and thryes at supper, and twyes at eche conuentual drynkyng, whan the president smytethe two strokes up on the belle, they schal cese of etyng, and at eche tyme joynyng ther handes togyder, and leyng them openly up on the table, and than eche besyde other in ther lappes, foldyng in the longers wylde her schal as with a reverence and inward devotion she use to worship & be truly souerayn of our lord Jesus Christ and of the crowne of our blessed Lady, his mother. None schal use to or other but wisdom, whiche they use, nor leave what a wille wylde other, but thanke God of that a wille wylde hem. Lett names they schal sette up on the table or wylde wylde hem, her eyes to the regular, and their hertes to God, and tharby to her own wylde. Also they schal sette up wylde, and not a wille wylde down, nor they schal wylde wylde nor be able, nor wylde her up on wylde their wylde or wylde, nor wylde their names under their channes or over their faces, nor stretche their names out understandably for a wille so it is a wille of agout or a moderate study. Therfor sette they a her names with names and transmutate, wylde they her wylde face, and use they their wylde honestly and religiously wylde they the wylde with the righte name than they wylde, and say it with the first finger of the righte name. Take they their name and drinke in their name, and put in wylde wylde, after the doctrine of Seynt Paul, of caritate and gracyng put away. No singularite of metes and drynkes he use in the treasour with oute special dispensacion of the abbess, but as they use wylde of sur-fettes, for ther is nothing more contrary to the herthe of the body, than is superfluite of metes and drynkes. Suche as haue abstinence themselves wylde for God, they schal haue a special rewarte in tyme to come, for amonge dayntes may be deserved a grete martyrdom with the wylde wylde. Nevertheless, none schal take any singular abstinence up on her with the wylde licence of the abbess, in wylde God take it for a veyne glory.

 In the power of the abbess it is, for to dyspense with the systers of reguler fastynges in tyme of nede, and for a reasonable and evident cause, but with the fastes of the churche none may dyspense but the general confessor. If any thyng sente from any persone be sette before any suster other than the comente herthe, none schal sette it to the presidente for to take therof, yf it be of any grete substance; if sche wyl not nor do not, sche schal be corrected for the note of singularite. Forthemore, when the president sendeth any thyng to any suster or systers, they schal not leue it untouched in any wyse of to, but they schal use it, for they schal never so muche to absteyne them,

nyng to her a lytle withe the body, but to the souereyne they schal ryse a lytle, and enclyue; and they may geue parte ther of to ther susteres that sytte nexte hem on euery syde, aboue or beneath, and no farther but seldom, for distraction of ther mendes from the redyng. Wherfor, yf any wyl sende any thyng ferther, or ouer to that other syde, thys shal not be done withe oute licence of the president, asked by one of the seruitors that schal bere it ouer. None schal make any notable sygne, or caste her syghte openly, or throwe any thyng withe her hande from that oo syde of the freytour to that other, or from table to table, nor yet to any that sytthe besyde her, but they schal conteyne themself from al tokens of unsadnes, and haue warnes that no troubles noyse be made that myghte disturbe the reder or herers, askyng be sygne that they wyl haue, and not by worde, so that al thyng in the freytour be in pece. And therfor the seruitors must haue warnes that they speke not whylst they mynyster, nor make any grete noyse in setting down or takyng up, or remouyng of dysches, plateres, pottes, trenchours, and suche other. Forthermore, whan they haue any notes, they schal not crakke them with her tethe, but they schal open them softly withe ther knyues or knypettes, and beware of sownde. Morrouer, they schal whype ther knyues and spones withe ther napkens, and kepe the bordeloties klene from al spottes and hurtes as moche as they may. They that wyl not or do not obserue the seyd ordynaunces, but make immoderate noyse, or be cause ther of, or els kytte ther fyngers or handes, or spylle any lycour up on the clothe or hurte it, al these shal be proclaimed and corrected in dewe tyme and place, and the clothe is to be made klene of her that defoylethe it, or of the buttler or seruytours of that wyke. Howe longe they schal syt at mete or supper, or at conuentual drynkynges, thys stonde the in the moderacion of the souereyn or president after the day and tyme requirethe. Also ther cuppes and spones they schal put in to ther coffynes, honeste and klene, and kepe them under the table, or in some other place ther to depute and ordeyned by the abbes ther souereyne.

[If any lay come late after grace is bygon, he schal stonde in the lowest place, and yf grace be fullyche endyd, he schal aske leue and say grace ther in the same place, and than go helpe his brethren to serue the freytour as it is wonte. They that use ofte to come late schal lakke a parte of ther prebende, and be correctyd in the chaptyr. Therfor none schal absente hym from grace, nor go from the couente tyl after waschyng of the handes, but yf the nede be the gretter. In the freytour al schal be ayence, and they schal sytte religiously, kytte and ete ther mete honestly and soberly, holdyng the cuppe with bothe handes whilst they drynke, hauyng ther handes up on the table, or goodly before them, ther ersys to the worde of God, and ther hertes upwarde to heuen. If they hurte the clothe, or defoyle it, they schal make it kleno astyr grace. But yf any preste or dekon happe to defoyle it with any likour, the buttler or seruitour of the same wyke schal make it kleno be the nexte mele. After the meles they schal put up ther cuppes and spones under the table. (Nota.<sup>1</sup>) Of warnes of noyse makynge, seeke in the next chapter, and of beryng ouer of thinges.]

CHAPTER LII.

Graces ended before mete and supper, and the inclynacion made to the mageste, the seruytours schal go oute and brynge in the seruyse as the tyme askethe. And fyrste the abbes or president schal be serued, than the pryores, and afterwarde the couente as they sytte in order, begynnynge at eldest after the pryores, so goyng down to the yongest, as it is accordyng to the rewle. And whan they serue the abbes or presydent of any thyng they schal euer enclyne at the gre of the freytour, begynnynge Aue Maria softly to the mageste or ymage of our Lady, and goyng forthe to the table, say it up or euer they sett any thyng downe before her, and than enclyne agene, and go ther weys. If it be the souereyne, they schal uncover it and couer it agene, that sche may se what it is, and than enclyne and go thens. To other susteres syttyng at the syde tables they schal not say Aue, nor enclyne in the begynnynge, but they schal serue them reuerently wylhe an inclynacion at ende only. To whom eche suster as they be serued, schalle enclyne agene, as ofte as they receyue any seruyse of them, so that none be serued couered what euer they be, outake the abbes and general confessor. Moreover, whan ther be two dyuers potages, eche of them schal in euery hande bere a messe of eche, that euery suster may chese that most pleasethe her; and the same wyse afterwarde, they schal brynge in the prebende honestly before ther breastes, two messe togyder and no mo, begynnynge withe the eldeste on euery syde, after the priores. These, therfor, schal serue ther sustres withe oute grudgyng, charitably, honestly, reuerently, cherefully, and indifferently, gladly, meryly, patiently, and mekly, withe oute chaungyng of messes for fauour of any person, rostying, sethyng, buttryng, and hetying ther necessaryes, so that none be compelled to ryse from the table, or to compleyne of uncharitable seruyse. If any thyng be asked of them by sygne, or by a styll word, yf ther be no sygne for it, anone they schal enclyne, and bryng that is asked, yf it may be gotten; if they may not gete it, they schal excuse them godely, by another softe and honeste sygne. Neuertheles, none owethe to be to importune, or ouer hasty in askyng of any thyng of any seruytour, namely, whilst they be in seruyng of other, nor to grudge withe oute a just cause. Also one of them schal euer be presente, and se diligently aboute, that the sustres lakke no thingge of ther dewte. And whan any go from oo syde to another they schal enclyne in the myddes to the mageste or ymage of our Lady, but yf they bere any thyngge that lettethe hem to enclyne in goyng ouer.

[Anone as grace is endyd, the seruitours and other lay brethren, inclynynge to the mageste, shal go to brynge in the seruise, first seruyng the presidente, than the prestes and dekons, from the eldest to the youngest, and after that themselfe, so that they brynge in two maner of potages yf ther be so many, honestly at ther brestys, and after that two messes of the prebendes, that the eldest haue the choyse of euery thyng. To the president they schal enclyne bothe before and after they sette any thyng before hym, sayng at the gree of the freytour one Aue Maria to the mageste in silence. To al other they schal inclyne after they haue sett any thyng before them only, withe oute Aue Maria. None schal be seruyd coueryd but the abbes and general confessor only. In setting down or remouyng of any thyng, they schal euer haue warnes that they make no combres noyse, and that they schouel not withe ther fete up on the pament, wherby the reder may the wers be herde. And they schal serue the brethren charitably, withe oute grudgyng, honestly, reuerently, cherefully, patiently, mekly, and indifferently, rostying, boylyng, buttryng, and hetying al ther necessaryes, waschyng ther cuppes and glasses whan nede is; so that none be compellyd to ryse from the table, or to compleyn of uncharitable seruise. If any thyng be askyd of them be sygne, or be a styll word yf ther be no sygne for it, anone they schal encline and fetch that is askyd. If they may not gete it, they schal excuse them godely be another softe and honeste sygne. One of them schal euer be present, and se diligently aboute that the brethren lakke nothyng, that is to say, eyther the seruitour of the same wyke, or els the keeper of the wheyle, whiche is euer one of the seruitours. If bothe be absente, the younger lay brother in the freytour schal haue an ey, and fulfil ther stede, and they schal euer stonde bare hede; but yf the presidente commaunde them or licence them other wyse. Whan any goethe from one syde to another, he schal incline in the myddes to the mageste, but yf he bere any mete ouer or drynke, askyng leue of the presydenste, yf any brother sende ouer any thyng to other.}

The pytaunce schal fyrst be broughte before the president, that sche may take therof fyrste. And than at her sygno the seruitour schal bere it rownde ahowte the freytour, that euery suster may take therof, begynnyng at eldest on euery syde. Ande whan they be alle serued, it schal be sette agene before the president, yf any leue; they that take to large therof schal be spoken to for to amende. What maner of mete the congregation schal be serued withie, it schal be expressed in the celeres office.

[The pytaunce schal fyrst be brought be fore the president, and than at hys sygne it schal be born rownde aboute the freytour, nowe at oo syde, nowe at other, begynnyng at eldeste, and than it schal be leste before the president, after tuxes beryng aboute. Neuertheles, yf it be a sermon day it schal be brought fyrst to the president, but the prechour schal fyrst take thereof, oute take the confessor, and at laste it schal be leste before the prechour.]

count
side

ude of meles and conuentual drynkyngs the e al thyng fro them, towards the utter efore them, swepyng togyder with the napkens the crommes, that the seruytours may the more sonner take up and bere away, after the doctryne of oure lord Ihesu, sayng to hys seruytours at ende of hys feste, Colligite fragmenta ne pereant, " Gadretbe togyder the broken metes, that they be not loste." So that whan the president makethe a sygne to take up, they schal do as they be commaunded, and bere the metes to the seruyng howse, or to another place ther to assygned, begynnyng from the youngest to the eldest. After thys they schal take up the remnaunte, that is to say, fyrst, drynke, than the garnapes that they sette on ther pottes or cruses, after thys, brede, hole, kytte, cantelles, ande crommes, and laste of alle salte, endyng evermore with the abbes or president, and enclynyng to eche suster as they take them up, and they agene to them, as it is seyde before, so that releues be delte to the poer peple by outwarde seruauntes, after the tenour of the rewle. Neuertheles, on suppyng dayes the salte schal stonde upon the tables tyl after supper.

[Atte ende of meles, whoon oo stroke is smyten up on the freytour belle, the lay brethren schal ryse and take up the playtrs and bere hem to the wheyle begynnyng at neder endes, and aftyr thys one schal take up the pottes, another the garnapes, another the bréde, another the salte but yf it be suppyng day, and the seruitour the crommes endyng with the president and enclynyng to every brother as he takethe hem away; whiche al togyder schal be sette in to the sustres and go to the poer, after the rewle.]

Whan the couente goethe forthr with the graces to the chirche, the legister and seruytours schal enclyne to them religiously there, or els wher euer they mete hem. And whan they be passed, they schal sytte down and take ther bodyly sustynance as the couent dyd, kepyng ther silence and the same obseruance, excepte the redyng; saue they schal be serued of the sustres that kepe the seruyng howse; and after ther mete and supper say ther graces with the oute note, goyng to the chirelie proces-sion wyse, like the couent, the youngest before, stondyng and knelyng with oute the quyer before the stalles; and whan they haue wasche ther handes at the comen launour, than they may speke, and no erste. Forthermore, the first pele ronge to euenyng, the butler schal ordeyne for drynke, and than suche as haue nede may drynke every day in the jere, outake on watyr days, on cuppe of water is inough for al the freytour. When the presidente makethe a sygne, the seruitour schal haue away the crommes, as it is seyde before. And it is to be markyd that the seruitour eche wyke schal swepe the freytour klene al aboute under fete and ouer hede, that no webbes growe in no place. And the nexte wyke folowyng he schal kepe the kychen, wher in dayly before euery mele he schal make fyre, dresse potage, kepe the ladels, spones, and garnapes clene, and helpe to take up the latter meles, and to folde up the borde clothes. Also he schal auoyde al unklennra oute of the kychen, and aboute the laste ende of hys wyke wasche the lauatory, swepe the weys to chirche, brynge in coles sufficient for the nexte wyke folowyng, and so leue hys office klene to another brother on saturday at nyght.]

CHAPTER LIII.

In the dortour none schal beholde other, nor make sygne to other with oute a resonable cause, but alle schal there kepe hyghe silence. There also none shal enclyne to other, thof it be the abbes that passethe by them, but al schal go forthe mekly withe ther veyles down ouer ther syn. There none schal jutte up on other wyllfully, nor spyt up on the stayres, goyng up or down, nor in none other place repleunably, but yf they trede it out forthwythe. Nor any schal make any noyse there of unreste aboute makyng of ther beddes or schakyng of clothes or remouyng of strawe, or of any other thyng, from curfewe belle in to ther pryme, neyther from mete in to it be thre of the clokke after none. And thei for to suche as gretly rowte or make any unrestful noyse in ther sleppe, or at the leste to suche as may not suffer suche unquyetnes, schal be purneyd a nother place, wher they may slepe with oute unrestyng of other. Ther beddes schal be made of bordes faste nayled to gyder, and stuffed with strawe, and they schal haue as many clothes up on them as nede requyrethe after the discrecion of the souereyne, whiche owethe to so that none haue more than nedethe, nor lasse, and that two lye not togyder in on bedde. Ther lyenge schal be in ther stamens gyrdle aboute hem withe a lyste, and in ther hosen, and up on ther hedes they may haue a nyght kerchyl and a nyght cappe. If any

The mynyster of the sextry eche nyght before son goynge downe, or as ofte as nede is, schal lyght the lampes in the sconces, but he schal not quenche them tyl the brethren may clerly se with oute candel lyghte in ther celles. If any falle seke in dortour, another brother may go in to hya celle and comforte hym in to the morne with drynke, yf nede be, and softe speche, or els haue hym down in to the fermery.<sup>1</sup> Every fryday, or at leste ones in the wyke, what day the confessour assaygueth, the brethren schal be schaue rownde almoste to the upermoste part of bothe eres. But preates and dekons schal haue crownes brode and rownde, with cercles of an ynche of brede.]

In the cloyster also al muste kepe sylence, and behaue them religiously, sadly, and soberly, and not go to faste, nor dissolutly. And whan they mete togyder there, or in any other place oute of the dortour, eche schal encline to other a lytel bowynge ther bedes, the zonger, namely, to the elder, eche bowynge other in reuerence, whiche also is to be obserued whan they zeue or receyue any thyng, or any scruyse of other, thynkyng veryly, that al suche obsequy is done to God. But to the abbes, wher euer they mete her, or passe by her, or ache by them, excepte the dortour, as it is seyde before, or reredortour, they schal turne to her, and mekly encline withe al the body, sfor loue with oute reuerence is but a chyldesche loue. Also none schalle jutte up on other whan they wasche ther handes conuentually, or other wyse, nor spytte in the lautory or aboute it, but yf they anone forthwith do it onte. Nor any schal presume to go with the onte her veyle and crown up on her hede, nor to be seen bare hede, openly amonge the couente. Butt in ther celles, waschyng hows, and in suche other places, they may do us nede and honeste requyrethe. Also not ferre from the chirche they schall haue a fyre howse, or chawfying hows, wher they may warme them in wynter, and there in that howse, they schal euer kepe sylence, excepte christemas tyme, or els speke passyng softe, hauyng warnes euermore that they falle not oute in to wordes of stryfe.

CHAPTER LIIII.

Of silence and taciturnite, and how the sustres schal behaue them in euery place, bothe inwarde and outwarde, in ther speche, chere, countynaunce, stondyng, syttyng, goyng, and suche other, this is sufficiently expressed in the fourtenthe chapter of thes Addicions, whiche begynneth thus, "In the chirche, quyer, freytour, et cætera."

CHAPTER LV.

Of the prioress office and of the serches.

Whan the office of the prioress is voyde, the abbes, by the counselle of the general confessour, and by the auyse of some of the elder or sadder sustres, hauyng the drede of God, schal ordeyne for another. Whiche al, condescendyng and consentyng in to one suster professed, able, wyse, discreete, and of gode name and fame, the abbes schal sette her on her lefte syde in the chapter howse, at ende of the same benche she is wonte to sytte on herselfe. And than to alle the couent syttyng, the abbes schal say thus, "Loo sustres, se and take hede that in our absence ye alle obey to our suster here, whom I have ordeyned to be prioress of our monastery And I wylle that ye obey to her in alle thynges longyng to the keepyng of the order like as ye wolde do to me yf I wer presente." To the whiche wordes alle schal enclyne in token of consente. And after this, yf it be chapter day, the chapter ended, with the preces folowyng, the couent schal go up streghte in to ther quyer processionally, the zongest before, and the abbes behynde, ledyng the prioress on her lifte syde, and al stondyng in ther stalles, quyer to quyer, the abbes schalle take another suster to her, and stalle the prioress, setting her down in the fyrst stalle of the lefte syde of the quyer, and than go to her own stalle. And than alle the couent, outake the prioress, schal knele down quyer to quyer, and say a Pater Noster deuoutly and an Ave Maria, whiche ended, and a sygne made by the abbes, alle schal ryse and enclyne to the este, and soberly go ther weyes, doyng what the wylle. Ande it is to be marked, that the prioress, in the quyer, chapter, and freytour, and in alle other places, schal kepe the lefte syde, stondyng and syttyng aboute alle other sustres, thof sche be zongeste of al in the order, goyng in processions withe the eldeste suster of the ryghte syde, or els behynde alle, whan the number is odde, in absense of the abbes, as it schewethe before of the rghte chapter. Forthermore, as longe as sche standethe prioress, sche schal not be kalled by her proper name, but by the name of her office, that is to say, "Suster prioress." Ande yf sche be founde vicious or prowde in her office, or a despiser of the holy rewles or statutes of the monastery, the abbes, after certayn preuy warnynges, schal warne her openly before the general confessour thryes, in the presence of alle, or of two or thre of the elder or sadder sustres. And yf sche wyl not amende by thys mene, sche schal put her oute of her office, and disciplyne and correcte her after the gretnes of her trespas, and after thys sche schal nytte in her order as other sustres do, and be called by her proper name, neuer to receyue office of worchyp after but yf sche chaunge and veryly amende her olde conditions and euil maners effectually; moreover, in the absense of the abbes, the prioress schal fulfyll al her spiritual offices, outake thynges that concerne the ebdomaryes office. So that in al hyghe principal festes sche schal rede the secunde lesson atte matens. Forthermore, in the presence of the abbes sche schal nothyng do aboute correccions of defautes, but at commaundement or sufferance.<sup>1</sup>

Also it is to be noted that among the sostres schal foure serches at leste, of the whiche the prioress schal chefe by her office, and sche schal neuer chaunge withe oute a grete resonable cause, as it is seyde be same chapter. But al other offices may be chaunged or more oftener, as the abbes seethe it expedyent, & of the more sadder party of her sustres, after the pressed before, in the thryttenthe chapter of thes. And thes, therefore, schal be and owe to be kalled to them principally, and namely to the prioress, it to haue a gode eye aboute, and to serche diligently, tres behaue them religiously in euery place, and in and seasons, and how regular obseruaunces, the silence is keppe, and to proclame suche in the chap fynde culpable of any defaute. Wherfor the abbes sette euery suster in thys office generally, chesynge by order, but sche schal chese oute such as be of good and conditions, of gode lyfe and gode ensamples longe haue stonde in regular obseruaunce, and kan teche other, suche as haue a zeale to kepe justise charite, suche as wyl for no drede, hate, nor loue, trowthe, but be busy in al that they kan and may, commaundementes of God, and preceptes of ther and suche as sche may suerly truste to ley part of up on them, be they of the yongest, or of the eldeste. Of the whiche serches, one atte leste, depute by schal euery nyghte serche and so, sone after com they schal ryse erly on the morne, or aboute eghte at at nymeste, whan ther is none erly rysynge, yf the ather celles, and wheyther they be alone, and how they pyed, or yf any be oute of ther celles at the houre at the abbes, and what is the cause, and whether ther quenched; but no serche schal serche any sustres oute place of office, withe oute special commaundement of thes therfor owe to be as veray myrroures of gode and religious behauyng to other, proclamyng ther on muste mekly and moste obediently take ther correct ying for certayn that they stonde in more perelle than other yf they negligently falle and trespas azenst the rewles or statutes, whyle the abbes puttethe her synguler trust in them, to so that gode rewle be kepte in her absence. Wherfor they owe to be herde reuerently in ther admonicions and proclamacions of other, ffor to stryue ungodely withe them, or azenste hem, it is taken for a more greuous defeaute; and for to labour of enuy, or of rankour or malyce, for to depryue any of them of ther office, it is taken for a mooste greuous defeaute, as it schewith before in the fourthe and fyfte chaptres of this boke. Neuertheles, thes be neuer wonte to be disciplyned for ther defeautes whyle they stonde in the office of serches, but the abbes may discharge any suster of that office, and commaunde her to take a disciplyne, and afterwarde charge her withe the same office azone, or with another, as sche seethe it expedient.

CHAPTER LVI.

Under the keepyng of the Tresoures, and of her felawe, al the minymentes of the monastery and temporal godes, in golde and syluer, and other zestes. And yf it happe the abbes, for any cause resonable, that sche may not be aboute direccion of outwarde matyrs of the monastery, than thes two in her stede and in her name schal be atte suche matyrs for to here and answer, intende and entromet, or meddel of suche matyrs, like as the abbes schold do it herselfe, outake in tyme of vacacion, as it is seyde in the xiite chapter. In the treasury hows schal be a grete cheste, with two dyuers lokkes and keyes, the tresoures keepyng that one, and her felawe that other, so that none of hem may open it, nor owethe to open it, nor brynge in or take oute, zeue or receyue any thyng, with oute knowlage of that other, for the more trowe wyttenes to be had, and for to put away al affection of couetyse, and al occasion of suspicion of euelle. Ande as ofte as any prouctour or receyuer, or any fermier or other, brynge homie any golde or syluer, thes in the presence of the Ande as for the sustres and brethren sche shal euery day for the more parte ordeyn for two maner of potages, or els at leste for one gode, and that is best of alle. If ther be two, that one may be sewe of flesche or of fysche, after the day is; and that other of wortes or herbes, or of any other thing that groweth of the gerthe, holson to the body, as whete, ryse, otemele, peson, and suche other. Also sche schal ordeyne for two sundry metes, of flesche and of fysche, one fresche, another powdred, boyled, or rosted, or other wyse dyghte, after her discrecion, and after the day, tyme, and uide requyreth, as the market and purse wylle stretch. Ande thys schal stonde for the prebende, which is a pounce of brede, welle weyed, with a potel of ale, and a messe of mete. Also besyde al thys, sche schal ordeyne for a pytaunce, and take gode hede that alle be holson and welle sesoned, tender and goode, and that it be honestly serued forth, al hote and otherwyse, as the mete requyreth, in dewe mesure, bothe in qualite and in quantite. If the prebende be symple, it is to be restored with the pytaunce; if it be goode and sufficiente to go rownde aboute, than no fors what the pytaunce be. On fysche dayes sche schal ordeyn for whyte metes, yf any may be hadde after the rewle, be ayde fysche metes, as it is before seyde. Also, ones a wyke at the leste, sche schal ordeyn that the sustres and brethren be serued with the newe brede, namely, on water dayes, but neuer with newe ale, nor palled or ouer sowre, as moche as sche may. For supper sche schal ordeyn for some lytel sowpyng, and for fysche and whyte mete, or for any other thyng suffred by the rewle, lyghte of dygestyon, equyualente, and as gode to the bodyly helthe, after the discrecion of the souereynes, that the seruauntes of God may strongly contynewe in hys seruyse. On water dayes sche schal ordeyne for bonnes or newe brede, water grewel, albreys, and for two maner of froytes at leste yf it may be, that is to say, apples, peres, or nuttes, plummex, churyes, benes, peson, or any suche other, and thys in compe-

CHAPTER I

The first thing I noticed when I stepped out of the car was the smell of the sea. It was a salty, bracing scent that seemed to fill the air. I took a deep breath, feeling the cool breeze on my face. The sun was shining brightly, and the water was a deep, shimmering blue. I felt a sense of peace and freedom that I had never experienced before.

THE FIRST DAY

I had heard so much about the beauty of the coast, but nothing could prepare me for what I was seeing. The cliffs were high and rugged, with small villages perched precariously on the edges. The sea was a mix of deep blues and greens, with white foam from the waves crashing against the rocks. I walked along the shore, feeling the sand under my feet and the salt on my skin. The air was filled with the sound of waves and the distant call of seagulls. I felt like I had found a hidden gem, a place where time stood still and the world was perfect.

As I walked further along the coast, I noticed more and more people. They were all looking at the sea with the same sense of wonder and awe that I felt. Some were taking pictures, while others were simply standing and looking out at the horizon. I felt a sense of connection to everyone around me, as if we were all part of something bigger than ourselves. The sun was lower in the sky now, and the light was softer. The colors of the sea and the cliffs were more vibrant, and the sound of the waves was more soothing. I felt like I was in a dream, a place where everything was just as it should be. I took another deep breath, feeling the salt and the sun on my face. I knew that this was a special moment, one that I would never forget. I smiled and looked out at the sea, feeling a sense of peace and contentment that I had never known before.

of euery suche office, as ofte and as longe as sche seethe it expedient. Also sche that schal schet the garden gate schal knokke myghtly ther up on or sche schet it, that no suster lye in the garden at nyghte.

CHAPTER LVII.

Sethe our Lord Ihesu Criste takethe that is done to the seke, as yf it were done to hymselfe, the abbes owethe to haue grette tendernes ouer them, that they be not forslowed of ther keepers. Wherfor, like us ther be dyuers infirmitees, so ther owen to be dyuers howses to kepe hem in. One for al maner sekenees, as is the comen fermery; another for them that be in recoverynge, as in the comen parlour; another for them that be distracte of ther mendes; another for lepres, stondyng fer from al other, so get that the sustres may come to them and comforte hem. If any suster be so seke that sche may not be couered with the oute medycyne, sche schal be brought to the crates to the phisician; so that the phisician come not in to the monastery in any wyse, but for a very necessary cause. To kepyng of the seke in the fermery, schal be depute suche a suster by the abbes that dredethe God, hauyng a diligence aboute hem for hys loue, and kan skylle for to do seruyse to them, stronge and myghty to leste them up, and lede them from place to place whan nede is, to the chirche or fermery chapel, and kan exhorte, styrre, and comforte them to be confessed, and receyve the sacramentes of holy chirche. Ofte chaunge ther beddes and clothes, geue them medycynes, ley to ther plastres, and mynyster to them mete and drynke, fyre and water, and al other necessaries, nyghte and day, as nede requyrethe, after counsel of the phisicians, and precepte of the souereyne, not squaymes to wasche them, and wype them, or auoyde them, not angry nor hasty, or unpacient thof one haue the vomet, another the fluxe, another the frensy, whiche nowe syngethe, nowe cryethe, nowe lawghethe, nowe wepethe, nowe chydethe, nowe frygh-toethe, nowe is wrothe, now wel apayde, for ther be some sekeneesses vexyng the seke so gretly and prouokynge them to ire, that the mater drawn up to the brayne alyenthe the mendes. And therfor they owe to haue moche pacience with a fayre borde clothe, and not up on a totrynge stole. They that be anelyd schal aske forgiuenes of the abbes and of al the sustres in conueniente tyme, of al eucl ensamples by them schewed; and from that they be aneled in to they departe, or els recouer, they shal haue two sustres at leste, depute by the abbes, to tende up on them day and nyghte.

And nyne dayes togyder, after any suster or brother is aneled, yf they lyue so longe, the sustres schal say conueniently, knelyng in ther quyer, syde for syde, withe oute note, this preces folowyng, Miserere mei Deus, withe Gloria Patri. Kyrieleyson. Christeleyson. Pater Noster. Ave Maria. Et æ nos. Ostende nobis, et cætera. Oremus Omnipotens Sancte Deus, salus eterna. If they schal passe, than say thys collecte, Omnipotens Sancte Deus, conseruator animarum. Neuertheles, suche sustres as kan not say the seyde preces schal eche day say in stede therof nyen Pater Nosters, and nyen Aues, and a Crede, as it scheweth in the seven and fourtyeth chapter before.

Whan any suster or brother lyghethe in passynge, the grete belle schal be tollyd on the brether syde. And than the couente schal come togyder, and say the letany and suffrages that longen ther to, knelynge besyde the body, or els in the chirche, yf it be a brother. And after thys, yf the sowle be passed, they schal say De profundis withe Deus cui proprium the lasse, and Fidelium Deus, and than they schal take a disciplyne in thier chapter, what day or tyme it be in the yere. Neuertheles, yf any passe whyle the couente is in dyuynе seruyse, the abbes schalle commaunde certayn sustres to say the seyde suffrages, and afterwarde other sustres that haue not seyde it schal say it alone, or with a felawe, or in the couente, for thys is an obseruance that al be bounde to be attle to ther power. Of the suffrages to be seyde withe in thyrtyty days for euery suster and brother after the tyme of ther passage, thys schewethe before in the nyenth chapter, and in the seven and fourtyeth chapter of these Addicions.<sup>1</sup>

pesyble, dreders of God, and hym euere haunynge before ther eyes, lounge none more than another, but suche as they fynde better in gode dedes and meke obedience; and yet they schal not suffer them to be more cheryshed than other, but yf sekenes or age, or els very nede requyre it. And, for the confessour is conservatour of the order, he schal attende wysely, that the rewle be kepte in al poyntes, as wel among the sustres as amonge the brethren, ande feythfully assiste the abbes in the same as for her party, in conservacion of the gode state and godes of the monastery. Ande, for the abbes is hede and lady of the monastery, and is to be counseled of the disposicion of the godes therof, sche schal haue grete warnes, that sche use not to take ouer moche counsel of seculers withoute the counsel and knowlage of the general confessour, for many religious haue suffred many tribulacions, by cause they haue reueled the secrecies of ther monasteries to outwarde seculers. If, therfor, any harde case begyn to growe to the monastery, comen prayers schal fyrst be had, ande than before suche matys go outwarde, the abbes and confessaour schal trete togyder withe some of the moste discrete sustres and brethren, or withe the holer and sadder parte of the congregacion ther to called and requyred, yf it be expedient, or els with alle the hole congregacion for to eschewe the murmur and grudgyng of alle. Neuertheles, thei schal haue warnes that they meddle not withe seculer iurisdiction, that concernethe the kynges or any bishops lawes, nor of the bondes or prisons of any seculers, otherwyse than they be premunyte by special pryuyleges, and that ther be no thyng seled with the comen seel, nor withe any other seel or synett, otherwyse than the pope hathe ordeyned. Also they schal haue grete warenes that they mysuse not ther fre power, nor delyte hem in the synne of properte, nor to appere more notable than other in ther habite, nor do more delicate metes and drynkes to be made for them than the comente hathe, but yf any special sekenes or feblenes, or any other resonable cause requyre it, for the hygher they stonde aboue other in prelacy, the more thei be bounde to obserue the preceptes of the rewle. Of the seke they owe to haue grete cure, that of ther keepers they be not serued neglygently, and they schal not forgyte to dispense amonge with the hole to ther comfort and recreacion, after the forme expressed in the fyftyethe and one and fyftyethe chapters of this boke. But they schal suffer no dogges, nor bestes, bryddes, nor fowles to be knowyng wel that they haue take an harde thyng up on them for to rewle sowles, and conforme them to the maners of many. Thynke they therfor what grete charge they haue take up on them, and to whom they muste zelde a rekenyng, and that it bylonethe to se how they may profite, more than to stonde in souereynthe, exaltynge mercy in al ther jugementes, as they may gete the mercy of God to themselves. Hate they vices, and loue they ther sugettes, werkynge prudently aboute hem in correction of defaultes. Haue they euermore ther own freylte suspecte, and thynke that the brosed rede is not to be broken. Neuertheles they schal suffer no vice to sprynge, but prudently and with the charyte kytte it of, studyeng more to be loued than to be dredde.

Moreover, in thes cases, the buschop visitour may correcte or depryue the abbes or general confessour of ther offices.

1. Fyrste, yf the abbes selle, aleyne, or ley to wedde, or els leue or chaun (change) the godes of the monastery, ryghtwysly gotten, for goodes of the whiche it is dowteful wheyther they be ryghtwysly gotten or no, sche is depryued in the same dede, do sche it with the consente, or with oute the consente of suxtres and brethern.

2. Also, yf the abbes or confessour, or any suster or brother, or any other persone of the monastery by any maner colour, geue any thyng to the buschop, excepte mete and drynke, for any visitacion, or for any ordynary office, by hym to be done in the monasterye, ffor the whiche, heasyde prynacion of ther offices, they schal be sette in pryson viiith dayes and ones disciplyned, et cetera.

3. Also, yf the abbes, or any suster occupyeng her stede, after thryes warnyng, puruey not for necessaryes to sustres and brethern, they ar depryued in the self dede, neuer to be promoted to any office after.

4. Also, yf the abbes or confessour, or any suster or brother, purchas or attempte to purchas any thyng agenste the rewle, in the self dede they be depryued of alle maner offices, and be unable to the office of the abbes, pryores, general confessour, and herynge of confessions, inwarde and outwarde, for euermore.

5. Also, yf the abbes or confessour dissymyle for to correcte defaulte or trespas in them selfe or other, wherby infamy growethe to the monastery, they schal be dewly corrected by the buschop.

6. Also, yf they be so aged that they may not perfectly or or sufficiently performe ther office, or els be laboured with incurable sekenea, or be impotente, or els haue more ycle to ther carnalle frendes than to God and to sowles, in to the hurte of the rewle, or els be despyers of the holy rewle and of the helthe of ther sustres and brethren.

7. Also, yf that they be dissipatours of the godes of the monastery, or yf they be negligente or repreuable in ther offices, and by no monycyon wylle amende them.

For the whiche and other lyke cases expressed in party to fore in the tenth chapter, yf it be the abbes, she schal be warned secretly twyes or thryes by the confessour and elder or sadder sustres and brethren, with charite and dewe reuerence. If it be the confessour, by the abbes and austres and brethren in lyke wyse. Letter from Thomas Bedyll to Secretary Cromwell, concerning his visit to Syon Monastery, where he had the Abbess and Sisters, with the Father Confessor and one Curson, favorable to the King's title as Supreme Head of the Church.

After my moost due thankes and hertie commendacions vnto you, I do you to understand that, as it was agreed bytwixt you and me at your departing, I haue deliuered al maister Fysshers bookes, late bisshope of Rochester, deuised by him in the defense of the Kinges grace first vnlawful marriage, and against his second lawful marriage, to my lord of Cauntrebury, to be seene and weyed by him, and suche as gyve attendance on him at this tyme, for thaunswere to be made to Coolens bokes, and others, trusting that my said lord and the said other lorned men wol make so substantiall aunswere to the said Maister Fysshers bookes, and the said others, that not only the peple of this tyme, but also suche as shal rede the said aunswers at al tymes hereafter, shall wel perceyue thereby that al the Kinges proceedings in thoes maters haue bene grownded upon good reasons and auctorities founded in the law of God, whiche his grace was bounden in conscience to folow, not withstanding any other affection or intelligence.

I haue also bene at Syon sith your departing with my lord of London, where we haue found the Lady Abbas and Sisters as conformable in euery thing as myght be deuiaed. And as towching the Father Confessor and Father Curson (whiche be the saddest men there, and best learned) they shewed thaimselfes like honest men, and I think the Confessor wol now on Sonday next in his sermon make due mension of the Kinges title of supreme hede according as he is commaunded. What towardnes or untowardnes we haue seen in some other of the brethren there I wel informe you at your retorne to London, and omitte it now bicause I haue some hope that by the wisdom of the Father Confessor and Father Curson the residue shal shortly be brought to good conformite, and if not, there be two of the bretherne must be weded out, whiche be somewhat sediciose, and haue labored busily to infect thaire felowes with obstinacy against the Kings said title.

nication concernyng certon letters of the said Maister Fissher, of whiche Father Rainold made mentione in his examination, which the said Fissher promised the Kinges grace that he never shewed to any other man, nouthor wolde. The said Confessor hathe confessed to me that the said Fissher sent to him to the said Rainold, and to one other brother of theirs deceased, whoes name I remember not, the copy of his said letters directed to the Kinges grace, and the copie of the Kinges aunswere also, but he hathe sworene to me upon his fidelite that the said copies tarried not with thaim but one nyghte, and that none of his bretherne saw thoes same, but thoes thre affore named.

He hathe knowledged to me also that the said Fissher sent vnto thaim with the said copies a boke of his made in the defense of the Kinges grace first marriage, whiche he confessed himself to haue in his keping, and whiche he hathe willingly deliuerd vnto me, and also Abels booke, and one other booke made by themporour his ambassitor (as I suppose).

My lord of Londone declared reasons for the confirmation of the Kinges title of supreme hede, and for the information and extinction of the Bisshope of Rome iurisdiction and power within this realme, in such manere and fasshione as was excellent and singuler. And maister Mor hathe vsed him self like a feithful true man to his prince, and I wol ye wold write him some commendatiouns or thankes to recomfort him.

Finally, maister Almaner and I wold know your mynd and pleasure concernyng the boke whiche we drewo out of my lord of Yorke his bothe deuises, whereof we withdrew many thinges, and likewise added. And where ye willed vs to adde thereto suche substancial mater for the purpose as we shuld thinke conuenient that it myght be set furth to printe, albeit we haue gathered suche mater as part shal pence you when ye se it, yet we wol not be so bolde as to put it to printe tyl ye se it and allowe it.

I have kept Londone at this yere, and haue had litel passc-tyme abrode. If it myghte pence you to help me to a warrant or two in Kent, at Ledys or elawhere, or nyghe London, it wolde be muche to my comfort, whiche am alwayes at your commaundement. From Londone the xxviijth day of July.

By your owne, THOMAS BEDYLLK.

Copy of a Letter sent by Father Fewterer, General Confessor of Saint Monastery, and other discreet brethren there, to the brethren of the Charter house of London.

[Cott. Ms. Coop. E. vi. fol. 179.]

The grace and peace of Ihesu Christe be with you. Amen.

Good fathers and deuoute brethren, wourye we be that ye be in the troublelouse estate we here of. And for the charitie that ys in vs towardys youe, and charitable request made vnto vs for youe, we thus doe interprete to send letters vnto youe, praying youe of charytee to charytably reserue them, and applie your selues wthbe charyte to charytably folowe that is charytably ment and purposed vnto youe: ye haue harde, as we do perceyue, that we haue ben in suche opynyon as ye yete be, and been in trouble dyspleasure and daunger therfore, as ye nowe bee. Alacke, lerne at summe personnes to resolve your coneyens, and beleue that we, and many other of more perfeccion and verten then we be, and of more depe lernyng, reason, and discrecion then we or ye be, haue with charytye, true saythe, and perfyte vnitie of Christes church, resolved our coneyens from the opynyon that ye yete rest in, and conformed our selues to vnitie and vni forme decree and ordre of this Realme in the cause. Judge not youe that either fere of bodely payn, penurye, or bodely deathe, dyd cause vs to suche resolution of coneyens, nor that feare of wordlye shame, or dyspleasure, dyd cause it, nor yete that wordly fryndshyp, fauor, honor, laude, or preferment dyd cause it. For yf ye so iuge, trewley the Juge of our and your harttes knowithe that ye then iudge vnustely. But iudge that veray deuotie, informed and ordred charitie, dyd alone worke suche resolution in vs; by whyche charitie we were desirous to lerne and knowe yf we might by any meane escape synne, yf we shoulde depose our coneyens, and so, by that we see and herde, by good and catholyke lernyng we founde that well ynough and of deuolye we aughte to depose and resolve our coneyens, and thus vpon grounde of good lernyng soo wee dyde, and wee mater to absolue alle doubtes and scruple of coneyens. Loo, good fathers, thus as in general wise we open our selues vnto youe, trusting that ye willinge ys well in our so doing, and by vs, yea by the great multitude of the holy fathers and good people that be as beforesayd in al verteu and lernyng moche beyonde vs, thincke youe that suche resolucions and disposicion of consciens with applicacion of your selves to our Princys pleasure, and his lawes, ordre, and ordinance of the Realme, to conforme your selves to the holy cumpanye of lerned and vlnerned, and see for Chrystes love that no suche be amonge youe that wold be oute of Religion, and so by ypo-crysye rest in the opynions, and set other in hart so to reate, that he so as in glorye goo furth and bring other with hym to endles miserie. Marke therfor amonges youe yf eny wilfull person be that wilnot obey the preour that God hathe set to be obeyed, his prince I meane, nor his prelate. And marke what ye can saye to defende hys opynyon; yf he haue lernyng, cause hem to shewe it, and yf he will lerne he may be satisfied with lernyng; yf he wille not lerne beware of hym, as Paule bydde; and yf he allege hys conscience, then must he shewe upon what sciens is conceyence is grounded, and thereby most he lerne in what hounde he is by such conceyence, that yf his conceyence be grounded vpon a precepte of God, that he may not depose the conscience yf yt be grounded vpon a counsayl of scripiture, then he is no more bounde to his conscience, but as he ys to the obseruyng of suche counsail, nor leue nor to followe suche conscience, is no more aynne then not observe and kepe the counsayll of Scripture. And with those let him lerne that obedience to his prince and prelate doo bynde hym to doo theyr commaundement, yf it be not expresly againste the lawe of God, as doctors and canons doo teche. And nowe what the lawe of God wille in the cause, for bothe parties, for the autoryte of our prince vpon the church of England, and for thautorytie of the bisshope of Rome vpon the same, we haue moche labored, and founde by the word and will of God, bothe in the olde and newe testament, great trowthes for our prince, and for the busshope of Rome nothing at all. Of whiche our labors I dyd as for your comforte delyuer to the reuerend Father of Shene certan and dyuers papers, with matier of Scripture, counsailes, canons, and doctors, to open vnto youe the clernes in thies matiers in both respectes, that ys to say, touchyng bothe thautoryte of our prince and of the bisshope of Rome. And nowe, by this bringer, my brother, of his greate zeale and charitie vnto youe and your house, doo sende vnto youe a booke of suche matiers, rehersyng the doubtles that brought many in scruple. And ther absolyng the same, wiche wille satisfye alle them that will here lerning, and what doubte or scruple elles be among youe, yf we haue yt sent vnto vs we will diligently, in all charytie, send our mynde and lerning in hit. And forbycause that nowe ye haue sent a question or two ye shalle receyve answer to them herin. And for the furst, concerning our Prince to be Supreme Hede of the Church of Englande, next and immediatly undre God, know youe for truthe, yf England be a church, or yf eny church be in Englande, his grace is supreme as aforesayd of yt. Saint Paule dothe bed all the church to be obedient to his grace quia superior potestas (as to the hiest power and auctorytie). Saint Petre dothe bed al the church to be subiecte to his grace as the most precellent personne amonge them. And loke youe now whether the hole church of this Realme, and the partyulare church, and the partyulare bedys of them, yey your hede, oure bisshope, with al the particular prelates, and alle other, do not so take hym, so vse and confesse hym. Be not ye therfor to styffe in the contrarye. And though yt seme to youe that his grace dothe in the spirituelle that other princes dyd not before, yete the trouth ys that in this doing he dothe not breke the lawe of God. For docters do graunte that the bysshop of Rome may dyspence and lycence a lay man to be iuge in a spiritual cause, which yf he maye, then yt ys not againt the lawe of God that our prince so dothe as iudge directe spiritual causes. For yf yt were agaynst the lawe of God, the bysshop of Rome might not dispencc in it: this knowen unto youe I thinke wil ease your consciences moche; but to fortesye this the Scripture of tholde testament dothe shew of Daryd, Josyas, Josaphat, Ezechias, that were of the most perfect Kynges, what ordres and ordynances that set amonge the prestes and the levytes. And Cryste in the newe testament dyd nothyng imbrige the autorite, nor deprese, nor myayshe the power of Kynges. But warned his apostles that they shuld not looke for suche domynon nor auctorite (vos autem non sic), but to be ministers and servantes to all personnes. And Anthonye dothe graunte Kinges to be vicarii Christi, and, namely, Saull and David; and the Scripture grauntithe Saull the hede of the peple and church of God. Many thynges hereof I have to shew youe, whiche, with all my herte, I will doo yf ye nede or requyre. But I praye youe in tendre howelles of our lord Jhesus let it not nede, but obey your prince and your prelate. Stande not in this disobedience to the perseuerance of perillous state of your sowles, be not so uncharitable to alle Christes church as ye make yt lose the prayer that may be in your deuoute house unto the wordels ende, depose not ye the laude and praise that is instute (sic) to be geuen to God by thaim that shulbe in your deuoute house, let not the people lose the good ensample of lyfe, that is ordeyned to be ledde in your deuoute house. For the love of God make conscience of this, and in the other feare not to do with vs after the pleasures of our Prynce and lawe of hys Realme. But nowe, as touchyng the wordys of the counsaile of Basylle, ye take thaim wronge, for they were wryten but for that one man Felice, and yete were not so receyved for him but of certain people, and not of alle people. And agayn, Adryanus, the bysshope of Rome, last of that name, dothe not allegate that counsaile but as suspecte to be of auctoryte: de auctoritate illius plures dubitant. Et communiter ei pondus auctoritatis non tribuitur. So that the wordys of that counsaile be not materielle agaynst vs; looke the xxxv chapter of the canons of the Apostles, looke the counsayl of Nicene, looke the vith of Carthage, looke the 89 dist. of the decrees, looko Crysostom, Jerome, Ambrose, Augustyne, Gregorie; and ye shall see that from the begynnynge whas no suche pontificalytie geuen to the bysshop of Rome, and so ye shall welleserne that it growythe not of lawe and Scripture of God that suche prolaeie belongithe vnto hym, nor yet of no antique counsaill, nor counsaill receyved as a counsaill. Therfor dye not for the cause, salve your selves and your house, lyve long and lyve welles to the honor of God, welles by your prayer and edyfying by your lyf to the people. Submitte your selves to your noble prynce, gette his gracyous favor by your dewtey doying to his grace, and so brynge your selves oute of troble and ruine to the quyet of your selves, and prouffyt of soules, and godly pease to be in the Realme: hoc facite et vincitis, in Christo Ihesu domino nostro. Pray for vs as we doo, have doon, and wyl doo, for youe to oure lord Jheau, who blesse vs alle. Amen.

Your bedmen, JOHN COPYNGER, R. LACHE.

Good brethren, yf I ware in good helthe I wolde wryte my full mynde vnto youe, but nowe I beseche youe to be contented wythe the charytable wrytyng of my lerned and deuoute brother, which ye may suerly folowe with god conscience. Per me JOHANNEM FKWTRER, Confessorem Generalem.

Jesu, dirige ad te tuorum corda suorum.

To the Father Confessor of Syon.

Righte Worshipfulle Father, we twoo your childrene and sonnes unworthy, recommend vs to you in our most louing manner. We haue hard by our worshipfulle Father Prior parte of the greute paynes whiche (of a syncere loue and pure charite that ye haue to God and our religion) ye take with our ij brotherne, now beyng with you, for whome we thanke you as for our own selves. We can not but thynk Saynt Pauls wordes to be verified in you, viz. Charitas non querit que sua sunt, sed que lesu Christi et aliorum in Christo. We haue not yet forgotten the paynes, patience, and longanymyte that ye had with us when we were with you, and howe hard it was (and in maner ympossible) to vs to folow your counsell, but in processe of tyme we did folowe your counsell, thanks be to Iesus. This we write, for we suppose it be thus with our brotherne; and if it be thus, we instantly desire you to continew your patience to them, et fidelialiter age quod opis, et erit Deus merces tua magna nimis. Gladde wolde we be to heare that thei wolde surrender their wittes and consciences to you, that they myght comme home, and as bright lanterns shew the light of religious conuersation among us, as they can right well, to God be the glorye. If it chauce otherwise, as God forbid, we wolde thei had neuer come to you. We can not be fully mery till we heare some goode tydynges from you of them, but we depende all in hoopes, and it is written, Qui spe aluntur pendunt non viuunt. Valeas in Christo pater nobis amantissime, precamurque ut nostro salutes nomine filios tuos Syonenses et fratres nostros Cartusienso. Script. in domo nostra Cartus. London. in presenti die Mart. valde diluculo per gemellos tuos.

Letter from Thomas Bedyll to Secretary Cromwell, dated at Oxford 28 Aug. 1534, respecting the state of opinion as to the King's right to be Supreme Head of the Church.

[From Cromwell's Correspondence in the Chapter-house, Bundle B. See also State Papers, temp. Hen. VIII. vol. I. pt. ii. p. 422.]

As I am greatly bounden to youe, so I commende me hertly to you. I am right sory to se the folishshenes and obstinacy of diverse religious men, so addict to the Bissshop of Rome, and his usurped power, that they contemne al counsell, and likewise the jeopardie of thair bodies and soules, and the suppression of thair houses, as careles men, and willing to die. If it were not for the opinion whiche men had, and som yet have, in thair apparent holynesse, which is, and was, for the most part, covert hypocrysy, it made no greate mater what became of thaim, so their soules were saved; and as for my part, I wold that al suche obstinat persons of thaim, whiche be willing to die for the avauncement of the Bissshop of Rome his auctoritie, were ded in dede, by Goddes hand, that no man shuld run wrongfully into obloqui for thair just punisshement. For the avoiding whorof, and for the charite that I owe to thair bodies and soules, I have taken som paynes to reduce thaim from thair errors; and wol take more, if I be commaunded specially; to thentent that my soveraine Lord, the Kinges Grace, shuld not be troubled or inquietted with thair extreme madnes and folie. I meane this, not only by diverse of the Charter-houses, and chesely at London, but also by others, as by diverse of the Frirys at Sion, whiche be mynded to offer thaim self in sacrifice to the greate idole of Rome; and in thair so mynding, they be cursed of God, as all other bee whiche put thair trust and confidence in any man concernyng everlasting life. And in caas they had not suche confidence in the Bissshop of Rome, they would never be so redy to lose thair temporall life for him, and for his sake, whiche is the greate impostor and disceyver of the worlde.

Yesterday, Maister Mores, surveyour of the landes of Sion, being a right honest man, and a feithful to his Prince, as far as I coulde ever perceyve, came to me to Otford to declare to me the state of the house of Sion concernyng the Kinges grace title of the Supreme Hed of the Church of England, as he had

tion, as touching the attachement, or putting in prison, of any of thaim, it shuld be best bestowed, in myne opinion, upon Frire Whitford, and upon Lache, whiche bee the vaunter-<sup>1</sup>lers, and hoddess of thair faction, as I evidently perceyved whan I was there meself; yet, upon trust of reformation of thaim to be gotten by the persuasions of the Confessor (whiche promised to do the best that he myght therein), I forbor hitherto to shewe any thing of thair lewde behavior, shewed in open audience when I was at Sion. But now, understanding that the Confessor can do no good with thaim, and that the obstinat persons be not in fere of him, but he in greate fere and dainger of his life, by reason of thair malice, whiche grudge sore against him, for that he hath consented to the Kinges said title, and hath preached the same, I can do no lesse but certify you thereof, seing I am in muche dispaire of thair reformation by any gentyl and favorable maner. Item, it shuld not be ill doen, in myne opinion, if som of the Kinges Grace servantes, inhabited thereabought, were commaunded to be present at thair sermons, and in caas any of thaim sayled to declare the Kinges said title, according to the commaundement gyven to thaim in that behalf, or wold wilfully depart from the sermon of thaim which wold do thair duetie in declaring the said title, that the Kinges Grace said servant, or servantes, shuld attache the said misdoers, and bring thaim to prison, to the terrible example of thair adherentes, and to the discharging of the house of Syon of suche corrupt and malicious persons. The Confessor there, and som other of the wisest of his brethern, the Abbas, and al her religious susters, like good, wise, and feythful ladyes to our soveraine Lord, be wel contented with the Kinges Grace said title, and wolbe redy to declare thair consentes to the same, when so ever they shalbe required; as I am now informed, and as I also perceyved meself, when I was at Sion. It is doubted that sum of the Frires of Sion wol attempt to escape out of thair cloyster; and if they so did, so men shuld never here tidings of thaim, nouthur know where they became, it were no greate lost.

The Brethern of the Charter-house of London have caused a frend of thairs to write a letter to me, desiring that I wolbe meane to my Lord of London to come thither againe, ons affore your coming to London, and to come with him; affirmyng that there is good liklyhood, that than they wolbe brought to good conformite, according to thair ducty. Whiche I wolbe the more redy to accomplishe, if I may have sum commandement so to do; and without that I wolbe lothe to medle with thaim any more; seing I labored so much alredy in rayne to bring thaim from thair inveterat error to the very deuty of a feithfull subject to his naturall Prince.

I am long in thes my letters, and yet I write not al whiche is nede to be writen, reserveyng the same to your commyng to London, where I wolbe sone, upon the knowlege of your commyng thether, by the grace of God, who preserve youe in long helthe and welthe to his and your pleasure. And I pray you to remember me as one of your owne. From Otford, the 28th day of August.

By your owne,

An order of Visitors to Father Coppinger, Confessor General of Syon Monastery, to remove the scruples of two monks of the Charter-house of Beauvale, 31 Aug. 1537.

[Cott. MSS. Cleop. E. iv. fol. 247.]

Father Confessour, in our Savyour Jesu be your salutacion. We have send to yowe our bretheren, Foxe and Chauncye,* to whome we beseeche yowe to shewe your charitie as yowe have done to dyverse other of our bretheren, befor this. They be verye scrupulouse in the mater concernyng the bishop of Rome; but they be nat obstinate. We truste yow shall fynde them reasonable and tractable, for they be myche desirouse to haue your counsell, and to speke with yowe facie ad faciem. Yche of them hathe a boke, wherin be such autorites as they do leane unto. We praye yowe here all that they will propose, and therto make suche answares as your learnyng and wisdome shall move yowe. We were purposyd to haue resonyd with them in euerye poynte contenyd in ther boke; but ther desyre was so myche to speke with yowe, and to be removyd frome the house wher they were, that we thocht it goode to condescende to thier request, and nat to spend so long tyme with them, for we had myche busynes with certen other, as they can tell yowe. Therfor, good father, for the love that yowe haue to Goddes honor and the Kynges, to the welth of ther sowles and to the honestye of our religion, helpe to remove ther scruples, as our trust is that yowe will. We pray you recommend us to our goode mother Ladye Abbess, desyryng her goode will and fortherance herein, and we shall se that suche costes as they shal put your house to shalbe recompensyd, by the grace of Jeau, who augment hys grace in yowe. Indenture of Agreement between Roger Lupton and others, executors to the will of Hugh Denys, Esquire; Agnes Jordan, Abbess of Syon Monastery; and John Joborne, Prior of the Carthusian Monastery of Sheen; relative to certain lands and tenements bequeathed by the same Hugh Denys to the last-mentioned Priory, subject to certain payments, for the purpose of augmenting the Chapel of All Angels near Syon.

[Harl. MS. N° 4640. in Brit. Mus.]

This Indenture tripartite, made the tenth day of Marche, the xxiijth yere of the raigne of King Henry the viijth, betwext Roger Lupton, clerke, executor of the testament of Hugh Denys, Esquier, deceased, and Gyles Capell, Knyght, and Mary his wyf, executrix, withe the seid Roger, of the testament of the seid Hugh Denys, of the ton parte; and Agnes, Abbes of the Monastery of Sent Sauour, and of the Seyntes Marye the Virgyn and Byrgitt of Syon, of the order of Seynt Austen, Sent Savour called, and the couent of the same place, of the second parte; and John Joborne, Prior of the Howse of Jhesu of Bethelem, of Shene, of the Order of Cartusien, and the Couent of the same, of the third parte; Witneseth, that it is couenaunted, accorded, and agreed betwexte the seid partes in manere and forme folowing, that is to say, where the seid Hugh Denys, by his testament and last wylle, amonge other willed and declared that alle such persons, and ther heris, as then were enfeoffed or seased to his vse of and yn his maneris of Osterlee, Wyke, Portpole called Greys Inne, his landis and tenementis in the county of Midd. and of and in alle his other landis and tenementis, whiche he late purchased of Robert Chesman yn the seid county of Midd. schold stond still seased therof to the vse of hym and his heris and assignees to performe therewith his last wille for finding of too honest secular prestis in the chapell of alle Aungellis, by West Braynford brige, yn the seid county of Midd. And also for synding of .vii. poer men in certeigne mancions ther in suche manner as yn the seide wille more at large apperith. And more ouer by the seide will amonge other gaue fulle auctorite and power to his executours, that yf enny article, clause, or ony thing comprisid in his seide wille, were not welle and sufficiently made, declared, and ordined, according to the lawe of Holy Cherche or the lawe of the londe, then he wolde that that thinge so being amyse in ony poynte scholde be reformed and mended by aduise of counsell, bothe sperituall and temporall, of his executours, so that they scholde note chaunge the trewe entent and meaning of his seide wille and testament. And by the same testament made the seide Mary, then his wife, Roger Lupton, and John Heron, his executours, and died. After whose dethe the seide executours, by auctorite of the seide wille, called to them Rychard Broke, then seriant att the lawe, John Batemanson, Docter of lawe, and John Grene, Gentillman, lerned yn the lawe, to be of ther consell lernid, to haue ther aduise for the playner and clere declaracion therof. The seid Rychard Broke, John Batemanson, and John Grene, amonge other, gaue ther aduise concerning the seide manneris of Osterlee, Wyke, and Portpole, and the other londis and tenementis yn the seide county of Midd., beforerehersid, yn manner and forme following, that is to say, that the seid wille and testament of the seide Hugh Denis as towching the seide manours, landis, and tenementis beforerehersid. And as yn finding of the seide prestes and poore men was and schold be of suche effecte as yf the seide Hugh Denys, had made his seide wille by thes wordes that ensue, that ys to say, I wille that alle suche personis that be and shalbe tenauntis of the manours of Osterlee, Wyke, Portpoole otherwise called Greis Inne, and of alle other londis and tenements, withe ther appurtenaunces, in the county of Midd., which I the seide Hugh lately purcharyd of Robert Chesman, in the seide county of Midd., ther heris and assignis, schalbe of them still seased, to the vse and entent to find the seide too prestis and seven poore men, untill such tyme as the prior and couent of Shen beforeseid schalle opteygne and gett of the Kingis grace, his heyris or successoris, sufficient licence of admortisement of the same manours, landis, and tenementis to hym and to his successoris, and also lycence of the lordis therof, mediate and immediate, the chargis of the whiche licence schalbe sustenid and borne at the chargis of myn executours. And that after suche licence by them so obtenide, gottone, and hade, that then, and fromthensforthe alle the seide personis, ther heyres and assignes, tenauntes therof, shall stond and be of the seide manours, londis, and tenementes, seaid, to the vse of the seid priour and couent and ther successoris for euer. And therof they the seid personis, ther heyres and assingnes, shall make a sufficient grunte and estate to the same priour and couent. To haue and hold to them and to ther successoris the seid manours, londis, and tenementis foreuer more, to thentent that the same priour and couent for the time being schalle yerely, wekely, and dayly foreuer, as longe as the worlde shall endure, synde or cause to be fownde too honest seculer prestes yn the chapell of All Angelles, beside Braynesforde brigge aforsaide. And that they shall haue ther mancyons by the seide chapell made alle redy for them. Whiche prestis shall singe ther and sey masses dayly if they be disposid in the seid chapell, and specially pray for the soll of King Henry the VIIth, and for the prosperous estate of ower souereigne lord King Henry the VIIIth, and for the sowle of Master John Somersett, the sowlis of me the seid Hugh Denys and Mary my wyf, there kynsfolkes and auncestours sowles of the seid Hugh Denys and Mary, and alle cristen sowles. The seid priour and couent payeng yerely to euery of the seid prestes at Shene beforseid for ther salarye ix markes of good and lawfull money of Englonde, and also shall fynde ther seven poore men, and they to haue mancions att the same chapell, ther redy made to pray for the sowles abouesaid. And suche evidences and writinges as concerne and belong as well to the londes and tenementes appoynted or remaynyng to the seid priour and couent of Shene, as also to the other manours and landis pertoyning or appoynted to the seid abbes of Syon, and to her successours, by these indenturis, to be orderede for the suertie of the seid abbes and priour, and ther successoris, as shalbe thought resonable by Rycharde Lyster, chef baron of the Kingis eschequer, and Antony Fitzharbert, knight, oone of the Kingis justes of the commen place, or by the counsell lerned of the seid abbes and of the seid priour. And, moreouere, the seid abbes and couent of Syon couensaunte and graunte unto the seid priour and his successours that they byfore the fest of the Nativite of owre lord next comyng after the date of these presence, by ther dede sufficiente in the lawe, seled with ther couent sealle, shall graunte for them and ther successours to the seid priour and couent of Shene, and to their successours, an annuyte or annuell rent of xx<sup>li</sup> rely, yeto be perseyund at the seid house of Syon the viiith day of Aprell and the xiiii day of October, bytwixt oon of the klok at after none andfoure of the klok at after none of the same days by evyn porcions. And, moreouer, to be conteynid in the seid dede, that if the seid annuyte or annuell rent of twenty powndes, or eny part therof, be behinde unpaid by the space of xiiii days after enny of the seid days in the which it ought to be payde if it be lausfully asked, that then the seid abbes and couent of Syon and ther successours shall forfett and pay to the seid priour and couent of Shene, and ther successours, in the name of a payne, as ofte as the seid annuyte or annuell rent, or enny parte thereof, shalbe behind unpaid after ony of the seid xiiii days before appoynted, tene shillingis. And it is agreede that the seid abbes and couent of Syon, and ther successours, shall haue the namyng, admytting, and puttyng yn of the seid prestis and poore men frome tyme to tyme foreuer. And the seid abbes, and her successours, before the seid fest of Seynt Andrewe, shall appoynt sufficient howses and loggynges for the seid prestis and poore men asyngh admyng to the seid chapell as they conueniently may, with such gardeyns as shalbe conuenient for the same. And shall suffer the seid prestis and poore men that now be, or enny tyme hereafter shalbe admytted to the seid romes, to haue and to inhabite the same foreuer. And also shall at all tymes kepe the reparacions, and also maynten, uphold, and repayre the seid chapell of All Aungelles, and the steeple of the same, and howses and lodgingis, and all thingis perteynyng therto. And where the seid executours haue leste and gyren unto the seid abbes a chalice, a pyx, bookys, vestments, and other ornamentis, and two chestys to remayn in the seid chapell, the seid abbes by this presentis couenauntith and grauntith for her and her successours that they fromhensforth, from tyme to tyme, when it shalbe requisite, shall repayre the same, and fynde sufficient ornamentis for the same chapell, and two sufficient cofers for the sure kepyng of the ornamentis that shall apperteyne to the seid chapell foreuer. Also the seid abbes and couent couenaunte and graunte unto the seid priour and his successours, that all every auoydence or decease of eny of the seid two prestis or pore men that now be admytted to the seid romes, the seid abbes and her successours shall within the space of one moneth after eny suche auoydaunce putt yn a nother for hym so auoyded or deceased, to fulfill the seid number of the seid two prestis and seven poore men, and so to contynewe for euer. And it is agreed bytwexte the seid parties, and they orden and establyshe by these presentes, that the seid chapell and houses appoynted for the seid prestis and poore men shall hereafter be called the chapell of All Aungelles nygh Syon, and Allmeshouse of Hugh Denys, Esquier. And that the seid prestis shall not be beneficed, nor in no other seruyce, nor haue eny chauntery. And that they shalbe ther continually abyding att bedd and borde, and nott to be absent without a reasonable cause, and that with lycence of the seid abbes and her successours. And the seid prestis not to be absent ouer one moneth in a yere, and that monethe to be appoynted after the discrecion of the seid abbes, or her successours. And the seid prestes shall say masse at the seid chapell euery day, yf they be disposed, and pray for the sowles of King Henry the Seuenth and for the prosperous estate of King Henry the Eight, while he lyuyth, and for his soulle when he is deceased. And for the soule of Maister John Somersett, and for the soules of the seid Hugh Denys and Mary, ther frendes and benefactours, and for all the soules of all other benefactours therof, and for all cristen soules. Also yt is ordeyned and established that the seid poore men which now be and hereafter shalbe admytted to the seid allmeshowse shall be resident and abyding at bedd and bord at the seid allmeshouse, and shall not be absent as is aforesaid, and also shalbe at dyuine seruice said in the seid chapell by the seid two prestes, and shall pray for the soules afore rehersed. And that one of the seid prestes ther to be assigned by the seid abbes of Syon, or her successours, shall haue the ouersight and rule of the seid poore men at the will and assignement of the seid abbes, or of her successours. And the seid abbes, or her successours, shall haue hereafter from tyme to tyme full auctorite and power to make suche newe ordynaunce for the goode order of the prestes and poore men, and of the seid chapell and allmeshowse, as they shall thinke conuenient, not chaunging the daies of payment, nor the effecte of the wyll of the seid Hugh Denys, nor the effecte of this present indenture. And if enny of the seid prestes or poore men breke enny ordynaunce of this present indenture, or eny such ordynaunce as shall hereafter be made by the seid abbas of Syon, or her successours, concerning the goode order of the seid chapell, allmeshowse, prestes, and poore men, as is afore-

and, or be out of honest and of good rule, as they ought to be, then the provisor and correction thereof from tyme to tyme shall fully pertain to the said abbes of Syon, and here successors forever. And the said abbes and her successors shall have full auctorite and power to amone and putt owte any of the prestes and poore men so offending when they shall see cause, and to putt yn other in their places, in soche manner as before appereth, without lett or interruption of the said priour or his successors forever. Provided alway that the said prestes and poore men, be any of them, shall not be put owte for any syknes or any impotency, but to have and enjoye their salarie and drabe during their lyves, yf other defaute be not in them wherfore they ought to be put owte. Also the said priour and couent of Shene couenaunt and graunt that after the said fest of Seynt Andrewe next commyng the said priour and his successors shall yerely and quarterly content and pay the wages and salary of the said two prestes at Shene aforesaid. And also shall pay for the salary of the said seven poore men their mony to them appoynted by the said wyll in manner and forme folloing, that is to say, the said abbes of Syon and her successors continually, from tyme to tyme, shall name and assigne one of the said two prestes, or one other sufficient person, at her pleasure, to receyue of the said priour or his successors at Shene aforesaid the said mony for the said poore men, and shall geve notice of every such naming and assignment to the said priour, or his successors, or to the proctor ther for the tyme beyng. And the said priour and couent of Shene couenaunt and graunt unto the said abbes, and to her successors, that after the said fest of Seynt Andrewe, and after such assignment of the said prest or other personn upon notyee therof gyuen as is aforesaid to the said priour, or his successors or assignes, the said priour and his successors shall pay unto the said prest or other person that shalbe assigned to receyue the mony of the said priour or his successors at Shene aforesaid, as muche mony as shall serue the said poore men after the rate of the said wyll for a monethe folloing, and so at every monethes end the said priour or his successors to pay att Shene aforesaid the said salary of the said poore men to the prest or other person therunto assigned, as is aforesaid, for ever. And the said prest or person so assigned from tyme to tyme to make a bylle to the said priour or his successours of the rescite therof, and that bille and payment to be a sufficient discharge therof to the seid priour and his successours att all tymes. And then the seid abbes and couent of Syon, and their successours, to stond charged with the seid mony, and to see that the prest or person so assigned make the payment therof to the seide poore men wokely accordyng to the wyll of the seid Hugh Denys and the couenauntes of this indenture. And if defaute be in the seid prest or persons assigned, so that he make nott the payment ouere to the seid pooremen, then the seid abbes and her successours to make the the payment therof to the seid poore men for that tyme, and to take their remedy agenat the seid preat or other person so assigned, and he to stond charged therfore to the seid abbas and here successours foreuer. And yf enny of the seide poore men happen to dye after the seyd payment, or to be away frome the seid almeshowse after the seid payment, and within the seid monethe, otherwise then is appoynted by this indenture, so that the seid number of the seid poore men be nott full, then it is agreed that the seid priour, or his successours, from tyme to tyme, shalbe repayd by the bandes of the seid prest or other person, or by the seid howse of Syon, of asmuche mony as shuld haue ben longed to hym or them so dede or beyng a wey, yf he or they had ben continually abydyng in the seid almeshowse. And also the seid priour and his successours to be charged to the payment of the seid prestes after the rate of their beyng ther, and for suche poore men as shalbe ther abiding accordyng to this indenture, and nott otherwise. And to the entent that the seid priour or his successours shall haue knowlege whether any of the seid prestes or poore men be lakkyng of the seid number, it is agreed, and the seid abbas and couent of Syon graunt vnto the seid priour, and to his successours, that it shalbe lawfull to the seid priour of Shene, and to his successours, and to his and their deputie, to entre into the seid chapell and almeshowse att their libertie, from tyme to tyme, to se and enquire whether enny of the seid prestes or poore men lake or be absent otherwise then accordyng to this indenture. And the seid priour and couent of Shene couenaunt and graunte that yf the seid priour or his successours do nott pay the wages and salary to the seid prestes according to this indentur, or yf the seid priour or his successours do nott pay the seid mony for the seid poore men euery monethe att Shene aforeseid to the seid preste, or one person so assigned by the seid abbas or her successours to resceyne the same in manner and fourme as before apperith, and then the seid mony within fourteen daes after hitt shuld haue ben payd be asked at Shene aforeseid of the seid priour or his successours, or of the procter ther for the tyme beyng, by one of the seid prestes or other person therto assigned, as is byfore rehersed; and then, if the seid mony so behinde and asked be not payd accordyngly att Shene aforeseid ymmediatly after the seid askyng, then the seid priour and couent of Shene and their successours, for euery suche defaute shall forfeit and paye to the abbas and couent of Syon and their successours, in the name of a payne, asmuche mony as then shalbe behinde to the seid prestes and poore men, ouere and besidis the seid mony so being behind. And ytt is thentente of the seid partes that the prestes seruyng att the seid chapell, or on person that shalbe assigned as is aforeseid, shalbe bound to resceyne the seid mony for the seide poore men, and pay it to theym according to the seid will, and according to the covenantia of this indenture. And that the seid abbas and her successours, att their libertie, may discharge and chaunge enny of the seid prestes or one person so assigned of that resceite, and assigne the other prest, or enny other person, to be resceyuer and payor, and so to chaunge as ofte as she or they shall thinke expedient foreuer. And the seid priour and his successours, after sufficient notyces shalbe geuen after the seid new assignement as is aforeseid, frome tyme to tyme, shall pay the seid mony for the seid poore men to the preste or one person so newe assigned, and by that payment to be discharged as byfore apperith. And also the seid priour and couent of Shene shall gyve to euery of the seid poore men fore euery yere that they shalbe att the seid allmeahouse, att the feate of All Sayntis yerely, a gowne, the price foure shillingia. And, morouer, wher the seid priour and couent of Shene by the seid first rehersed indenture, bering date the seid third day of July, the viiite yere of the reigne of Kyng Henry the Eight, haue graunted and bounde theym selve to pay the seid monye to the seid prestes and poore men wekely, as in the seid indenture apperith, and also by the same first indenture to geve to euery of the seid poore men yerely a gowne, price foure shillingia, and to delyuer to euery of the seid prestes and poore men one quarter woode, to be delyuered att the mansions of the seid prester and poore men, the seid executours and the seid abbas and couent of Syon by theise presentes, in consideration that the seid priour and couent shall nott be doble charged, discharge the seid priour and couent of Shene and their successors of the couenauntes of the seid wylle, and of the seid first indenture, and of euery thing therin conteyned, and are further agreed by thies presentes, and graunte, that the seid priour and couent of Shene, and their successors, from henceforth, shall stond charged with the articles in theise present indenture only. And the seid abbas and couent of Syon, and their successors foreuer, shall hereafter geve yerely to euery of the seid prestes and poore men att their mancionis assigned a quarter of wodd according to the will of the seid Hugh Denys, that is to say, xxv fagottis, which is a quarter of one hundreth, as hath ben contynually accustomed to euery such prest and poore man as hath ben ther afore this tyme. And ytt is further agreed betwixt the seid parties, and the seid priour and couent couenaunt and graunt to the seid abbas and couent of Syon, and to their successors, that yf it happen hereafter enny of the seid manners, londes, and tenementes of free hold, which by this indenture be appointed with other londes, late holdene by copy of the seid abbas and couent of Syon, and to their successors, for recompence of the seid annuytie of xx<sup>li</sup>, to be lawfully recovered or euicted uppon good just tytle from the seid abbas and couent of Syon, or their successors, without covyn, which londes and tenementes so euicted and recovered shalbe of the yerely value of vi<sup>s</sup>. viij<sup>d</sup>. or aboue. That then the seid abbas and couent, or their successors, from tyme to tyme, shalbe allowed and discharged ayenst the seid priour and his successors of so moch of the seid annuyty of xx<sup>li</sup>, as the yerely value of the londes and tenementis so recovered or euicted from theym shall amount vnto ouer and aboue the yerely value of vi<sup>s</sup>. viij<sup>d</sup>, as is afore rehersed. The seid value, allowaunce, and discharge to be determyned and appointed by the chief iustices of the Kingis bench, and of the comen place, and the chief baron of the eschequer for the tyme beyng, or by two of theym, if they will so do by their writyng indented under their seales, to be deliuered to the abbas and priour of the seid houses for the tyme being. Except the abbas and priour, and their couentis ther for the tyme being, cane agree other wyse betwene them selfis. And either of the seid abbas and priour, and ther successours, to be bounden by the seid appointment of the said too chief justices and chief baron, or by two of theym, for euer. And then fromthensforth the seid abbas and couent, and their successours yerely, to content and pay oonly that that shall remayne of the seid annuyte of xxli. ouer and besidis the seid deduccion, att the seid days, place and howris before lyneted for the seide hole annuite of xxli. by even poreions, under the same penaltie of ten shillingis, as byfore apperith, for the hole annuytie. And so the seid too chief justices and chief baron for the tyme beyng, or too of theym, frome tyme to tyme as often as eny such recouery or eviccion shall happen as is aforesaid, to haue lyke power to order the parties for the tyme being, yf the parties agree nott, as before apperith. And allwey such some as shall remayne of the seid annuyte of xxli. beside the seid deduccion or deduccions, continually to be paid, in such maner and under such penaltie as is byfore expressed. And, morouere, the seid abbes and couent covenant and graunt unto the seid priour and couent and their successours, that the seid abbes and her successours, from tyme to tyme, shall defend the title of the seid maners, londes, and tenementis, to them byfore appoynted by this indenture, and euery parcell therof, as fere as the lawe and conscience will suffere, without coven in that behalf. And it is in lykewyse agreed betwixt the seid parties to thies indenturia, that yf it happen hereafter eny such deduccion or deduccions to be had of the seid annuite of xxli. ouer and aboue the some of forty shillingis by yere, then the seid priour and his successours, from tyme to tyme, shall haue deducted somoche of the seid charges for the seid prestes and poore men as shalbe deducted and abated of the seid annuyte of xxli. ouer and aboue the seid some of forty shillingis yerly. And yf it happen somoch of the seid annuytie to be deducted, or somuch of the londes and tenementis, which in this indenture ben appoynted to remainn to the seid priour and couent, or ellis of such londes as shall hereafter happen to be purchased to the seid priour and couent, or to their successours, to the seid vse, to be recovered or euicted lawfully uppon iuste title frome the possession of the seid priour, or his successours, without covyn, so that ther shall nott remayne clerely to the seid priour or his successours viiih. yerely of the seid annuyte and londes to theym appoynted ouer the charges towardis the paymentis of the seid prestes and poore men, that then the seid priour, or his successours, fro tyme to tyme, shall haue deducted and abated somuche of the seid charges for the seid prestes and poore men as they shall haue therby to theym, and to their successours, yerely viiii. ouer all maner chargis in that be half. The seid deduccion or deduccions in lykewise to be had and made fro tyme to tyme in such manner as shalbe be appoynted by the discrecions of the too chief justices and chief baron for the tyme beyng, or by too of theym, onles the parties, or the counsell of the seid parties, by their assent, can agree bytwene theym self as is aforesaid. The same appoyntment of the seid too justices and chief baron, or of too of them, to be also delyuered in writyng to the abbes and the priour of the seid howses for the tyme beyng, and then they and their successours to be bounde therby foreuer, as ofte as enny such deduccion shall happen to be made. Provided allway that the salary and wages of oon of the seid prestis be deducted rather than the wages of enny of the seid poore men, yf enny such deduccion shall happen. And more ouer the seid priour and couent couenaunt and graunte to the seid abbas and couent, and to their successours, that the seid priour and his successours, after the seid deduccion, shall contynually pay and bere the residue of the seid charges to the seid prestes and poore men, in like manner, with lyke penaltie, and lyke daies of payment, as is afore appoynted of the hole charge. And also the seid priour and couent, and their successours, from tyme to tyme, shall defend the tittle of the seid maner of Portepolle, with thappurtenaunces, foure meases, foure gardens, eight acres of land, and x. rent, with thappurtenaunces, in the parish of Seynt Andrewes Thappostell, in Holborne, without the Barres of the Old Temple of London, the aduowson of the chauntrye to the seid maner belongyng, and of all the seid londes called Allcottys and Russfeld, and of other landes that shalbe herafter purchased to the seid priour and couent, and their successours, to the seid use, as fare as the lawe and conscience will suffer, with out covyng, in that behalf. And yt is further agreed that eyther of the seid abbes and priour shall delyner to the other trewe copys of all evydences, escreptes, and mynymentes concernyng the landes and tenementys before appoynted to the fyndyng of the seid prestis and poore men, when they shalbe therunto requyred. HISTORY

THE CHAPELRY OF HOUNSLOW.

THE Chapelry of Hounslow (formerly a market town), partly in the parish of Isleworth, and partly in that of Heston (the chapel and site of the manor being in the latter parish), is situated on the principal road to the West of England, and consists of one wide street extending from east to west, somewhat irregularly paved, but lighted with gas.

The name of this place occurs in the Norman Survey as having given name to the hundred of Honeslawe, which it may be presumed was identical with the present Hundred of Isleworth, comprising the parishes of Isleworth, Heston, and Twickenham. It has been mentioned in a former place,<sup>1</sup> that Isleworth and Heston were divided into separate parishes by Richard Earl of Cornwall; and it is also on record<sup>2</sup> that Twickenham was anciently a hamlet of Isleworth: it may therefore be concluded that the whole of the present hundred was comprised within the Domesday manor of Gis-telesworde. The adjoining manor of Hamntone, the only other in Middlesex belonging to Walter de St. Valeri,<sup>3</sup> is now considered to be in the hundred of Spelthorne.

It is difficult to determine the etymology of Hounslow. In ancient records and old leases it is written Honeslawe, Hundeslawe, and Hunslow. We have before stated that the district whereon Isleworth and other towns adjacent now stand was the forest or warren of Staines. It is therefore very probable that at this place was an establishment for the purpose of keeping hounds to hunt with in the forest, Hundes in the Saxon language signifying Hounds, whence the spot was called Hundeslow, the Hounds' place, and which in process of time was corrupted to Hounslow.<sup>1</sup>

In the Parliamentary Survey<sup>2</sup> taken in the year 1650, it is said that the town of Hounslow contained 120 houses, most of them inns and ale houses, the chief dependance of the place being on the immense tide of road-traffic. In 1795 the population had considerably increased, there being then a greater number of houses belonging to the parish of Heston alone.

The population of Hounslow Chapelry is at present calculated to be 3000 persons, of whom 1800 reside in Heston parish, and 1200 in Isleworth parish; and assuming on an average there are six persons to each house, there would be, according to the above calculation, 300 houses in Heston, and 200 in Isleworth.

The quantity of land within the Chapelry of Hounslow is 851 acres, viz. in Isleworth parish 676 acres, and in Heston parish 175 acres.

HOSPITAL OF HOUNSLOW.

At an early period a Hospital was founded here for Friars of the Order of the Holy Trinity.<sup>3</sup> The Trinitarians, Maturines, or Friars of the Holy Trinity, whose peculiar office it was to solicit alms for the ransom of Christians taken captive by the Infidels, were instituted in France by SS. Jean de Matha and Felix de Valois, in the year 1198. John de Matha was born of noble parents in Provence, and took his degree of Doctor in the University of Paris. Felix de Valois, so called from the country of Valois, lived as a hermit in a wood, in the diocese of Meaux. Matha having had a vision of an angel presenting two captives to him, and thereupon resolving to devote himself to a religious life, joined himself with Felix de Valois; and having obtained permission from Pope Innocent III. to found a new order, they formed a Monastery, which was endowed by Margaret Countess of Burgundy, for twenty religious. This was no sooner done than Matha sent two Englishmen to Morocco to treat with Miramolín for the redemption of poor Christian captives, and in the year 1200 they redeemed 186 slaves. The same year they had a convent given them in the territory of Honscott, in Flanders, and another at Arles, in Provence. Afterwards John de Matha took a journey into Spain, where he prevailed upon the kings and princes of that country to make several settlements for the redemption of Christian captives. Their rule was confirmed by Pope Honorius III. and, after having been corrected and mitigated by the Bishop of Paris, and the abbats of St. Victor and St. Genevieve, commissioners appointed for the purpose by Pope Urban IV., was approved by his successor Clement IV. in the year 1267.<sup>1</sup>

According to the rule they were to have white woollen vestments, and a pilch and breeches each, which they were not to put off in bed. They were not to have feather beds, only pillows. In the Specimen Monachologiæ the costume is a hemispherical tonsure, a filibeg, white woollen tunick tied with a black thong, a loose white hood with a short round pectoral hanging before, a longer pointed dorsal behind. A close scapulary shorter than the tunic. The scapulary and left side of the mantle marked with a red and blue cross, and a shirt and woollen vest. All their possessions were to be divided into three parts, one for their support and maintenance, another to relieve the poor, and a third to redeem such Christians as should be taken captive by the Pagans.<sup>2</sup> They were called Trinitarians, because all these churches were dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and Martinus began paying their first income in Paris near St. Martin's chapel. There were about twelve houses of this order in England and Wales.

It is not exactly known when or by whom the hospital at Hounslow was founded,<sup>1</sup> but there is every reason to suppose that it was the first of the order founded in England, as we find that within three years after its institution the Minister and Brethren of "The Hospital of Houndeslowe" had letters of simple protection granted them by King John.<sup>2</sup>

In 1226 Edward I. granted to the Minister and Brethren of the Holy Trinity of Hounslow a weekly market at that place on Tuesday, and an annual fair for eight days on the eve, the feast, and the morrow of the Holy Trinity, and the five following days.<sup>3</sup>

In 1313 Edward II. by letters patent, confirmed the grant made by John de Neville to the Minister and Brethren of Hounslow, of the manor of Bedfont, with the advowson of the church there,<sup>4</sup> and in the following year also confirmed the grant which Richard formerly King of the Romans had made to them of a certain place called Babworth, with the appurtenances, excepting the warren and fishery there, in free and perpetual alms for ever. Amongst the witnesses to this charter were John de St. Valeri, John de Esterlee (Osterley), and Gilbert de Wyk.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> It is erroneously supposed to have been founded by some of the Windsor family, from the circumstance of that ancient and opulent family residing in the neighbourhood at Bearwell, and choosing though not till the sixteenth century the chapel belonging to the hospital as their place of burial.—Newcourt's Report, vol. I. p. 456. Weaver's Funeral Mon. pp. 429, 389.

The market has been discontinued for many years, but fairs are now held on Trinity Monday and Tuesday; the fair for the sale of horses, cattle, &c. takes place on Trinity Monday. The proprietor of the "Hounslow" receives a toll for all horses, cattle, &c. sold in the fair: every horse, mare or gelding 4d., for every score of sheep or lam 7d., for every cow, heifer or calf 2d., for every hog, sow, or pig 1d.; and for every barrel of liquor, and all shops, stalls, &c. which are not toll-free at this fair. In 1315 the Minister and Brethren of Hounslow made fine to the King of ten marks for licence to appropriate the above-mentioned church of Bedfont to their own use.<sup>1</sup> This fine, however, probably on account of their poverty, was pardoned them by the King in the same year.<sup>2</sup>

In 1338 William de Odiham gave to this Hospital an estate situated in Bedfont, consisting of about 100 acres of land, with certain quit-rents, &c.<sup>4</sup>

During the reign of Edward III. several licences were granted by that monarch to the Brethren of Hounslow to acquire in mortmain divers lands and tenements situated in Staines, Stanwell, East Bedfont, co. Middlesex, and Kingston-upon-Thames, in co. Surrey, &c.<sup>5</sup>

In 1355 the Minister and Brethren of Hounslow owed 40s. for one knight's fee in Bedfont, as their aid towards making the King's eldest son a knight.<sup>6</sup>

In 1369 the King granted them licence to hold one messuage and three cottages, situated in the parish of St. Botolph, London, which John de Gloucester, late parson of the church of Harlington, had bequeathed to them by his last will, on condition that one of the brethren should celebrate divine service for the souls of Richard de Gloucester and Christina his wife, and for the soul of the said John, and all the faithful deceased for ever.<sup>7</sup>

Amongst the eleemosynary payments made by Edward III. to various religious houses, we find that the Minister and Brethren received ten marks to pray for the soul of Philippa, late Queen of England.

In 1372 the Minister and Brethren received a gift of the advowson of the rectory of Liddetun, in the county of Middlesex, from Sir Guy de Bryan.<sup>1</sup>

In 1375 Edward III. granted to the Minister and Brethren of the House of St. Robert,<sup>2</sup> of Hounslow, during his life, certain houses, buildings, and inclosures upon their ground, at a place called Hutton Grange, near Hounslow, for his sojourn in case of his going there, and at his death to their own proper use, with power to dispose of them as they pleased: and in the same year licence was granted for a chapel in that manor-house.<sup>3</sup>

In 1417 John Maisey was minister of the hospital.<sup>4</sup>

In 1442 the minister and convent of the House of Hounslow were appointed collectors, in the archdeaconry of Middlesex, of the second moiety of a tenth granted to the King by the clergy in 1440.<sup>5</sup>

One of the certificates of admission to the privileges of this fraternity is preserved in the British Museum.<sup>6</sup> It was granted in the year 1446 by Brother John Woolhale, then minister, and the name of the party who received it is written upon an erasure - Jacobus Gyrys Capellanus.<sup>7</sup> From this document we learn that the following were the privileges which had been confirmed by the apostolic see to all who were admitted to the confraternity of this order.

"To all the truly penitent and confessed, or desirous of confessing, who have assisted towards the maintenance of the said order, as often as they shall have given alms shall be released a third part of the punishment of the penance of crimes confessed, and of six years and eighty days of their enjoined penance, and have our benediction to all eternity. Also we grant that all the brothers and sisters of the said order who shall have given a certain quantity of their goods, and annually bestowed their beneficia to the brethren or messengers of the same order, and left or assigned to it any goods at their decease, may be able annually to elect for themselves a fit priest as confessor, who shall have power to grant them plenary absolution of all their sins, of which they are truly contrite and confessed. And each brother shall have a writing from the said fraternity, and shall not be denied ecclesiastical sepulture of whatsoever death he may happen to die, unless excommunicated by name. The priests and clerks, and other secular priests and religious men and women, of whatsoever religion and habit, if they shall have offered from their goods to the said house, and shall have omitted the observance of divine and canonical hours through impotence, negligence, forgetfulness, or bodily infirmity, shall have free remission of penance. If any benefactor should die within the year truly contrite and confessed of all his sins, he, by our especial grace, is absolved, the chapter concerning abuses notwithstanding."

This certificate was to be presented in the chapter of the convent after the death of the party, who would then be included in the commendation made for the deceased brothers. A portion of the seal of the fraternity is still attached, representing the Trinity, as noticed in p. 493.<sup>1</sup>

In 1452, 31 Hen. VI., Geoffrey Goodlocke, by his will<sup>1</sup> dated 12th of October, bequeathed 6s. 8d. to the church of the Holy Trinity at Hounslow.

Some time during the reign of Edward III. that King, by letters patent, granted to the Minister and brethren of Hounslow 20*l.* sterling, to be received yearly at the Exchequer, at the feasts of Easter and Michaelmas by equal portions. These letters were cancelled by Hen. IV. who granted them in lieu 10*l.* yearly out of the fee-farm of the town of Kingston-upon-Thames, to be received by the hands of the bailiffs there for the time being, at the same feasts. Upon the accession of Edward IV. to the throne the grant made to them by Henry IV. not being deemed sufficient in law was annulled, and in 1462 the King, by letters patent, restored to them a pension of 20*l.* out of the fee-farm of the town of Kingston-upon-Thames.<sup>2</sup> This royal bounty, however, was in turn voided by an Act of Parliament made in the third year of his reign;<sup>3</sup> and in 1468 they were contented to accept again the pension of 10*l.*, to be received at the exchequer; the King of his greater favour pardoning them those payments, which, under his letters patent, they had received of the larger annuity.<sup>4</sup> The Minister at this date was named Richard.

In the Bishop's registry at Winchester are letters dated 1507 and 1511 to the clergy of that diocese, exhorting them to make collections for "the Hospital at Houndeslowe, of the order of the Holy Trinity, for the redemption of captives."<sup>5</sup>

There is no surrender in the Augmentation Office.

In 1553 there remained in charge 1*l*. 13*s*. 4*d*. paid to Thomas Clerke, late brother there.<sup>2</sup>

The place of custos or warden of the hospital of St. Lawrence at Crediton, in Devonshire, was generally given to a member of the hospital at Hounslow. One of the brethren was also generally appointed to serve the chapel of the Holy Ghost and of St. Katharine, at Warlord,<sup>3</sup> near Totness, erected in 1270. The collation to it was, however, absolutely vested in the bishops of Exeter. The chapel was afterwards annexed by Bishop Oldam to the Vicars' College in Exeter.<sup>1</sup>

The first of the seals here engraved (from a charter in the Augmentation Office) is that of the Provincial of the Holy Trinity, or principal of the order in England.

On this seal the Godhead is represented as a single person, and below his feet is a shield charged with what has been termed the Trinitarian cross. Its legend, read at length, is, Sigillum provincialis ordinis sancti Trinitatis.

The seal of the hospital of Hounslow is engraved from an (imperfect) impression attached to the charter in the British Museum, noticed in p. 486. Its deficiencies have been supplied from another copy, engraved in the Gentleman's Magazine for Dec. 1785; the matrix, which had been found at Oare, near Faversham, in Kent, being then in the cabinet of Mr. Jacob, the historian of that town. The device appears to have been intended for the usual representation of the Holy Trinity,<sup>2</sup> which was figured as an aged person, holding before him Christ fixed on his Cross, whilst the Spirit proceeds from his mouth in the form of a Dove: but in the present case the Dove is omitted. The legend is S. trinitatis domus de Hunselow.

moved from the locality of the hospital, that is, "about 100 yards above the bridge of the river Peterill, at the foot of Harroby Hill in Cumberland, about a mile from Carlisle." It is somewhat later in date, as may be supposed from the manner in which the name of Hounslow is spelt in its legend, H. sc̄ar̄nirans do. de Hounslow. On each side of the figure of the Trinity is placed a shield bearing a cross as in the Provincial's seal above; but in other respects it resembles the earlier seal here represented, as will be found by reference to an engraving in the Gentleman's Magazine for Dec. 1784.

The circumstance of these matrices having both been lost so far from home may be accounted for by the well-known practice of the pardoners, who traversed the whole country like pedlars, hawking their spiritual wares; and for the use of these parties, the hospital may possibly have multiplied the matrices of its seal.

The manor of Hounslow and site of the hospital having been annexed by Henry the Eighth to the honor of Hampton Court, were leased in 1539 to Richard Awnsham, Esq. for twenty-one years; and by Edward the Sixth, in 1553, to William Parr, Marquess of Northampton, for the same term, commencing after the expiration of Awnsham's lease.<sup>1</sup> In 1557 (27 Oct.) the reversion of the said premises, consisting of the Friars' house, 117 acres of land, with appurtenances, together with the fair, market, court-leet, &c. was sold for the sum of 905*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* to William Lord Windsor,<sup>2</sup> whose son Edward Lord Windsor<sup>3</sup> in 1571 sold the hospital and all its appurtenances, with the demesne lands, to Anthony Roan,

It was sold by the Povey family<sup>4</sup> in 1671 to James Smith and Henry Meuse, Esquires, who conveyed it the ensuing year to Henry Sayer, Esq. in whose family it remained until the year 1705, when it was purchased of his son and heir John Sayer, of Bedderton, in the county of Bucks, Esq. by Whitelocke Bulstrode, Esq. From him it descended to his grandson Richard Bulstrode, Esq. whose widow the late Mrs. Sophia Bulstrode, daughter of Charles Tryon, Esq. of Bullwick, in the county of Northampton, by Lady Mary Shirley, daughter of Robert Earl Ferrera, was lady of the manor. After her death it went to George Gardner Bulstrode, Esq. a distant relation, and a solicitor of Worcester, a bachelor.<sup>5</sup> This gentleman, who died 4th Jan. 1822, bequeathed it in trust to be sold, the proceeds to be laid out in stock, and the interest to be paid to his sister Elizabeth Bulstrode during her natural life, and afterwards in trust to pay certain legacies amounting to between 9,000*l.* and 10,000*l.* (including 1000*l.* to the British and

When the mansion at Hounslow, as well as the manor with its immunities, were sold, Mrs. Newsham's sons-in-law, viz. James Minns, Esq. of Harrow, James Eades, Esq. of Sevenoaks, John Willisford, Esq. of Chelsea, John Nichols, Esq. of the same place, and George Edwards, Esq. of Birmingham, purchased the latter as tenants in common, and still retain it, receiving the tolls at the fair.

There are no vestiges of the manor house, which was an ancient brick structure, and stood at the western extremity of the town adjoining the heath. The present chapel grounds occupy its site entirely.

The only remaining part of the hospital when Mr. Lysons wrote in 1795 was the chapel, which exhibited evident traces of the architecture that prevailed in the early part of the thirteenth century, particularly in the stone stalls, three of which were to be seen in the south wall of the chancel, and a double piscina, with narrow pointed arches, divided by a column. This chapel, which, since the Reformation, had been used as a place of worship for the inhabitants of Hounslow, was situated on the margin of the road, but within the grounds appertaining to the manorial residence. The interior comprised a chancel, nave, and south aisle. The principal monument was attached to the north wall of the chancel, and was erected to the memory of Whitelocke Bulstrode, Esq. who died in 1724, having the following inscription:—

In the nave of the chapel was a small monument with the effigies of a man in armour, and his wife, in kneeling attitudes. It is now placed at the east end of the south aisle under the gallery.

On the floor was a brass plate, to the memory of Thomas Lupton, who died in 1512, and his wife Alice. Weever<sup>1</sup> mentions a tomb at Hounslow to the memory of William Jacob, who gave a close called Bushiheme to find a lamp. He died in 1478. In the windows of the south aisle was a figure of St. Katharine, and some other ancient painted glass.

There were no vestiges of any monuments of the Windsor family remaining in 1795, unless, as Mr. Lysons observes, that on the south wall of the nave was one. Andrews Lord Windsor, by his will, bearing date March 26th, 1543,

George Windsor, mentioned above, married Ursula, daughter of Sir George Vere, Kt., and sister and coheir of John Vere, the fourteenth Earl of Oxford, but died in vitâ patris, without leaving issue by her.<sup>4</sup> Of his monument there are no remains; but Weever,<sup>5</sup> in 1630, took this fragment of the inscription:—

Arm. 13. f. 39*a*.) and was admitted into that house on the 1st of December following as Baron Windsor, of Bradenham, in Bucks. On the outside of Hounslow chapel, towards the road, was an escutcheon, with the arms (a Saltier between twelve cross-crosslets) and quarterings of Windsor, much mutilated and worn; this escutcheon is now placed in the south wall of the new chapel. Over the door was the following inscription: DOMVS DEI ORNATA A. D. 1710, now placed in the vestry of the new chapel.

Anthony Roan, Esq. auditor to Queen Elizabeth, gave 40*s.* per ann. to the minister of the chapel, upon condition that the inhabitants should contribute further towards his support. The net income of the curate, returned in 1831, was 125*l.*

A great part of the chapel was destroyed by fire in the early part of the seventeenth century, and was rebuilt with the assistance of a brief. It is said also to have been repaired by Whitelocke Bulstrode, Esq. soon after his purchase of the manor in 1705.

The Registers of the Chapelry of Hounslow are as follow :—

Nos. I. and II. (very irregularly kept) Bap. 1706—1751, 1753—1757, 1772—1812; Bur. 1721—1812; Marr. 1708—1753.

The number of baptisms from 1708 to Nov. 1812 were 977; the number of marriages from 1708 to 1753 were 36; and the number of burials from 1721 to 1816 were 12. The only burials during the last century were of the Bulstrode family. There were no baptisms at Hounslow from 1812 until Dec. 1829, when the new chapel was opened. From the time that Mr. Chapeau was minister the registers were kept at Heston until the period last mentioned. The register books belonging to the old chapel were given by the late Mrs. Bulstrode to the present minister.

“ July 2, 1658, Frances Fenne, wife of Sir Richard Fenne, Knight, of Kensington, buried in Hounslow chapel.” She was daughter of Sir Thomas Crompton.

“ Mar. 9, 1663, matrimonio juncti Jacobus Howard, Thoma Howard armigero patre, avo prænobili Suffolciæ Comite; et Charlotta Boyle, patre Francisco Vicecomite Shannon, in capellâ de Hounslow.” The Peerages call Charlotte Boyle, a natural daughter of Charles II. by Lady Shannon. Her only child by Mr. Howard was named Stuarta.

In 1731, 4th of June, was tried before the Lord Chief Baron Reynolds, a cause between the Rev. Mr. Wood, Vicar of Heston, plaintiff, and Richard Bulstrode, Esq. defendant the plaintiff claiming tithes for a farm which ever since King Henry VIII. was exempted, being one of those belonging to the dissolved hospital of the Holy Trinity of Hounslow. A verdict passed for the defendant.'

The ancient chapel above mentioned, which for many years had belonged to the Bulstrode family, and had been given by the late George Gardner Bulstrode, Esq. of Worcester, to Mr. Cane, having been sold by that gentleman to the Rev. H. S. Trimmer, Vicar of Heston (by whom it was presented to the Church Society), was taken down in the spring of 1828, it being proposed to erect a chapel on the same spot. In the same year his Majesty's Commissioners under the act for building additional churches and chapels agreed that, if the neighbourhood would raise 2000*l.* towards defraying the expence of building a new chapel, they would defray the remainder. A sale of the old materials (the galleries, pews, &c.) thereupon took place on Wednesday the 4th June in the above year, and as the line of foundation for the new building would pass immediately through the vaults of Whitelocke Bulstrode and the Blathwayt family, it was found necessary to open the former vault and deposit its contents in another. On this being opened, five coffins were found, three large and two small ones, together with a box containing a quantity of human bones. The coffins were those of Whitelocke Bulstrode (his name was alone intelligible on the plate),—"Elizabeth Bulstrode, died January 9th, 1738, aged 83,"—"Richard Bulstrode, died May 21st,

<sup>2</sup> William Winter Blathwayt, Esq. Lieutenant-General of his Majesty's forces, and Colonel of the 27th Light Dragoons, died at his sister's house in Golden-square 18th March, 1801.—Mrs. Theodosia Blathwayt, his youngest sister, died suddenly in Golden-square 28th April, 1797.—Mrs. Sophia Thomasine Blathwayt, another sister, died 20th March, 1806. A third sister is said to have been buried in the same chapel, but we have not been able to ascertain her name.

1770, aged 76,"—"Mrs. Elizabeth Blathwayt, died May 23, 1723," and another of an infant, but, the plate being entirely decayed, the name could not be discovered. It may be observed that the coffin containing the remains of Mrs. Elizabeth Blathwayt was only three feet and one inch in length.

Into the vault containing the coffins of the late lord and lady of the manor, Richard and Elizabeth Bulstrode, were removed, from a recess immediately at the foot of the former, the coffin of Henrietta Townsend (sister to the above Richard), together with some other remains, much decayed. In the last-mentioned vault were also deposited the coffins of White-locke Bulstrode, Elizabeth Bulstrode (his wife), and Elizabeth Blathwayt, besides some human bones and decayed portions of other coffins. These vaults were subsequently closed and arched over with brick.

The committee, consisting of Colonel Clitherow, Messrs. H. Pownall, W. Day, J. Farnell, H. W. Smith, James Stanbrough, R. A. Frugley, C. H. Stanbrough, F. White, Thomas Palmer, R. How, &c. &c. met at the Rev. Dr. Benson's, and walked from thence in procession through the town, preceded by the band of the 15th Hussars and the charity children of Isleworth parish, and accompanied by a large concourse of persons. The members of the committee carried appropriate flags, &c. with emblematical devices, and after proceeding to the eastern extremity of Hounslow, returned to Dr. B. shortly afterwards the Duke of Northumberland, the Bishop of London (now the Archbishop of Canterbury), and several distinguished persons, arrived there, and partook of an elegant collation. The procession was then again formed, and the whole party proceeded to the appointed spot. A substantial platform, with raised seats for the accommodation of the spectators, had been erected there, and was graced by all the beauty and fashion of the vicinity. The ceremony commenced with the Old Hundredth Psalm, sung by the Isleworth charity children, under the direction of Mr. Wyrill; the bishop then delivered a solemn address, &c. at the conclusion of which, the Duke of Northumberland, after the various coins, &c. had been deposited, laid the first stone in the usual manner. His Grace used a handsome silver trowel, which, at the termination of the ceremony, was presented to him by Colonel Clitherow, in the name of the committee. The noble Duke expressed, in eloquent terms, the pleasure he experienced in assisting on so interesting an occasion, and declared that "he should deposit the trowel among the archives of his family as a lasting memorial of the event." It is worthy of remark that the performance of this ceremonial was the last public act of Bishop Howley, prior to his translation to the See of Canterbury. At the conclusion of the ceremony upwards of 200 of the most respectable inhabitants of the neighbourhood were most hospitably entertained by the Rev. Dr. Benson, who, it is but justice to add, was the sole originator of the laudable undertaking, and who had been most indefatigable in accomplishing this object. Amongst the clergy present were the Very Rev. Archdeacon Cambridge, the Rev. H. Glossop, the Rev. W. H. Parker, the Rev. E. Moore, the Rev. J. Trimmer, the Rev. — Lewis, &c. &c. The chapel was opened in July 1829.

In 1836 it was thought expedient by his Majesty's Commissioners to unite and consolidate the said contiguous parts of the parishes of Isleworth and Heston into a separate and distinct district, to be assigned to the said chapel for all ecclesiastical purposes, and to constitute such district a consolidated chapelry, under the sixth section of an act passed in the fifty-ninth year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Third, "for the purpose of affording accommodation for attending divine service to the persons residing in the said district, and for enabling the spiritual person serving such chapel to perform all ecclesiastical duties within the said district attached to such chapel, and for the due ecclesiastical superintendence of such district, and the preservation and improvement of the moral habits of the persons residing therein; and that such district should be named the Consolidated Chapelry of Hounslow." The boundary assigned to this chapelry is as follows:—

In the parish of Isleworth the boundary commences on the right hand or south side of the turnpike road, leading from Staines to London, at Baber's Bridge, the western extremity of the parish of Isleworth, and then follows the boundary of Feltham parish, south-east, until it meets the boundary of Twickenham parish; then follows the same eastward, as far as the road leading from Hanworth to Hounslow, pursuing that road towards Hounslow as far as the northern extremity of the grounds belonging to George Gosling, Esq.; from this point, giving a frontage or depth of thirty-five yards east of the centre of the road, as far as the first road leading towards Whitton, following this road, and giving a frontage or depth of thirty-five yards from the centre, southwards, till it meets the road leading from Hounslow to Whitton; turns northward up this road as far as Heath Lane, then, turning down Heath Lane, takes the first lane to the left, leading to Market Row; follows this lane, giving a frontage or depth of thirty-five yards on the east side, from the centre of the road, as far as Market Row (including Market Row), and, turning down the foot path leading from thence to the road leading from Worton Lane to the Great Western Road, giving a frontage or depth of thirty-five                    ith of the path, as far as the road last

On the part in the parish of Heston the boundary commences as aforesaid at Baber's Bridge, and gives all the land to the south, and a frontage or depth of sixty-six yards north of the centre of the road leading from Staines to London, as far as the corner of the road leading north towards the south-west corner of the barracks called Barrack Lane; follows this road as far as the connecting lane, called the Sixth Private Road, or Green Lane, between the last-named road and the road leading to Heston workhouse; follows this connecting line eastward, giving all the land on the south thereof only as far as the road leading north to the workhouse; then turns north, up the centre of this road, ceding all the land on the east side only, until it meets the Great Bath Road, opposite the road leading through Sutton to Heston; then turning eastward, follows the Bath Road towards Hounslow, giving all the land on the south, and a frontage or depth of seventy-three yards north from the centre of the same road, as far as the public drain; follows this drain eastward until the point at which it turns to the north, and for sixty yards northward; then turns to the east, down a private road leading from Hounslow to Lampton, giving all the land to the south, and crossing the Lampton Road, to the west end of an ancient watercourse two hundred and ten yards north of the centre of the Bath Road; follows this watercourse eastward, in the direction of the south-west corner of the Leets meadows, at the back of the Lion Inn at Hounslow, two hundred and thirteen yards north of the centre of the high road; follows the south boundary of the Leets meadows as far as the south-eastern boundary of the same; and thence, in a straight line, eastward to the south corner of Gay's Cottages, in King's Arms Lane, which point is eighty-three yards north of the centre of the high road, giving all the land to the south from Lampton Lane to this point; proceeds across

King's Arms Lane eastward to the road leading from Smallbury Green to Lampton, giving along the whole of this line a frontage or depth of eighty-three yards north from the centre of the high road, and all the land to the south thereof; turns north up the road from Smallbury Green to Lampton, at the angle of which it turns to the west; follows the foot-path north towards Scrutage, as far as the northern extremity of the grounds of Henry Pownall, Esq.; then turning eastward includes all the lands to the south as far as the dividing line of the two parishes of Isleworth and Heston.

The chapel was consecrated by the present Bishop of London on the 20th April, 1836, who preached an excellent and appropriate sermon on the occasion. His lordship afterwards endowed the new chapel with 60*l.* per annum, and likewise obtained for it a yearly grant of 20*l.* from the Governors of Queen Anne's Bounty in addition to the pew-rents.

The Chapel of Hounslow is erected at the extremity of, and situate in, the parish of Heston, where it adjoins the parish of Isleworth, and is distant upwards of one mile from the parish church of Heston, and upwards of two miles from the parish church of Isleworth, which are the places nearest to the said chapel appropriate to the celebration of divine service, according to the rites of the church of England.

It is a neat edifice, in the late style of Gothic architecture, with turrets and dwarf spires, and affords accommodation for 1035 persons, including 418 free seats appropriated to the use of the poor. The number of the sittings rented are 496. The architect's estimate, including incidental expenses and commission, was 5,310*l.* 10*s.*

The architect was Henry Mawley, Esq., and the builder Mr. John Taylor.

HOUNSLOW CHAPEL.

Besides the ancient monuments removed from the old chapel, and already described, the following recent memorials may be noticed.

Against the wall of the south aisle is a marble monument:

"To the memory of Mr. Thomas Palmer, of Sion Lane, in the parish of Isleworth, who died May the 9th, 1833, aged 79 years. He gave fifty pounds to the treasurer of the Hounslow Subscription School, and directed the interest thereof to be applied towards the support of the said School."

At the east end of the chapel under the gallery is a monument to the memory of—"John Albert, a loving and much beloved son of the Rev. Joseph Benson, born Sept. 23rd, 1819. Died February 16th, 1837."

" Sacred to the memory of Mrs. Sarah Bureau, relict of the late Daniel Bureau, Esq. of Walbrook, London, who departed this life the 8th August, 1834, aged 93 years."

" Sacred to the memory of Mrs. Eleanor Woodward, the beloved wife of Mr. John Woodward, of Hounslow, who died July 29th, 1837, aged 66 years."

" Sacred to the memory of Mary Rossiter, the beloved wife of Mr. William Rossiter, of Sonning Eye, Oxfordshire, and daughter of Mr. Samuel Long, of Hanworth, Middlesex, who died the 14th of May, 1837, aged 39 years."

" Also Mr. Samuel Long (father of Mrs. Mary Rossiter), who died the 25th October, 1838, aged 80 years."

" Sacred to the memory of Mrs. Mary Powell, who died May 3rd, 1836, aged 47 years."

" In memory of Zerubbabel Wyvill, who died May 14th, 1837, in the 75th year of his age."

" Sacred to the memory of Mr. Daniel Brent, who departed this life Dec. 15th, 1837, aged 84 years."

" Sacred to the memory of Mr. James May, of this parish, market gardener, who died February 1st, 1839, aged 73."

" Also, Frances Elizabeth Cozens, daughter of the above, and widow of the late Captain Cozens, of the honourable East India Service, who died Aug. 16th, 1838, aged 44 years.

" N. B. Richard Hodgson Cozens, aged 7 years, the only child of the above, on lamenting over his mother's grave, with ideas far beyond his age, expressed a wish that a monument should be placed over it to her memory, which his friends immediately enabled him to have done."

On the north side of the churchyard is a stone erected, having the initials of

M. M. S. 1838.

F. G. 1839.

The former initials of Margaret M. Skally, a daughter of Mr. Skally, who made an ineffectual attempt to carry on the school formerly under the superintendence of Dr. Benson; the others are the initials of Frederick Geach, a grandchild of Mr. Skally. The daughter died about the age of ten or eleven, the grandson when an infant.

Three Schools have lately been built in Hounslow, in which, on an average, 300 children are receiving instruction.

The two first were built on a piece of ground given by the late Mrs. Fish, of Spring Grove, by voluntary contributions amongst the inhabitants. They are supported in the same manner, Henry Pownall, Esq. being the largest contributor.

The other, an infant school, was built, and is supported entirely by Mrs. Pownall, of Spring Grove.

The chantry roll<sup>1</sup> made in the reign of Edw. VI. mentions an ancient hospital or alms-house at Hounslow, where divers poor and sick persons were maintained. It paid a quit-rent of 4*d.* to the lord of the manor. The site of this house was on the Isleworth side, and was given to that parish, anno 1610, by Mrs. Margaret Hemp. It was purchased in 1705 by Whitelocke Bulstrode, Esq.

In 1635, by inquisition taken at Guildhall, London, 4 Nov. 11 Car. Thomas Garrett held certain lands and tenements in Hounslow and Heston of the value of 5*l.*<sup>2</sup>

Henry Elsyng, Esq. Clerk of the House of Commons during the greater part of King Charles's reign, and author of some tracts relating to Parliaments, retired to his house at Hounslow in 1648. He died in the month of August 1654, and was buried in his private chapel at Hounslow.<sup>3</sup>

SPRING GROVE.

At the eastern extremity of the Chapelry of Hounslow is Spring-grove, the seat of Henry Pownall, Esq.

In 1615 Sir John Offley had a messuage at Smallbury-green, called Spring-grove, which, in 1754, was purchased of his representatives by Elisha Biscoe, Esq. who built the house.

It was many years the residence of the late Sir Joseph Banks,<sup>1</sup> the circumnavigator with Captain Cook, who, after having, in early life, rendered eminent services to his country in his physiological inquiries, here continued his scientific researches for the general benefit of mankind.<sup>2</sup>

The estate was subsequently purchased by the present proprietor, who has expended a considerable sum of money in enlarging and improving the house and grounds. The mansion is a fine square building of brick, which has lately been covered with Roman cement, and, from the great acquisition of frontage under the inclosure, is in its appearance picturesque and striking. The entrance to the house has been changed to the east, and a terrace formed along the south front, with walks leading to extensive lawns and pleasure grounds, beyond which are two kitchen gardens of considerable extent. In one is a fine range of glass forming graperies,<sup>3</sup> pineries, peach-houses, and a conservatory. The dairy, most magnificently fitted up by Sir Joseph Banks, is still kept with much care. Here is preserved a basket of flowers, made, by Sir Joseph Banks's mother, from shells he collected in his first voyage with Capt. Cook. Many of the rare plants and shrubs planted by the late owner have, we are sorry to say, disappeared since his death. Several, however, still remain, such as the tea-plant and the American cranberries. The magnolias are very large and splendid trees. The kalmias are past their prime, being some of the first plants introduced into the country. There is also a splendid specimen of the Clanbrassiliana, imported by the late owner with two other plants of the same description, one of which was presented to George III., and is in Kew Gardens, and the other is in the possession of the Duke of Portland. Some of the trees long noticed by travellers on the western road, trained over the wall, yet remain, and bear fruit, though the wall has been removed.

<sup>3</sup> The finest and best late grape cultivated in this country, called West's St. Peter's grape, is said to have been first planted at Spring Grove in the year 1818 by Mr. Isaac Oldacre, F.H.S. gardener to the Emperor of Russia.

The Centurion, by Ferdinand Bol.

A Head, by Rembrandt.

Sea Piece, by Wilson.

Portrait of Sir James Thornhill.

View at the back of the Isle of Wight, by Shayer.

Two Views at Tivoli, by Perugino.

There are also several good copies; amongst others the Spanish Peasant Boys of Murillo, and the celebrated Cattle Piece of Paul Potter. The entrance hall and vestibule contain marble busts of Nelson, Wellington, Pitt, Perceval, Baile's Eve, Dante, a fine Apollo by Rossa, and several others.

In the library is a beautiful illuminated initial letter, from the celebrated missal at Florence, painted by Andrea Verocchio (1520), which was stolen by the French in the revolution. It was brought to England by W. Y. Otteley, Esq.

HOUNSLOW HEATH.

Adjoining to the town on the west was formerly an extensive heath, one of the most noted scenes of highway robbery in the neighbourhood of London.

A survey made in the year 1546 describes the contents of Hounslow Heath as 4293 acres, lying and extending into several parishes; but, according to Rocque's Map of Middlesex, it contained in 1754 about 6658 acres of land. Vestiges of ancient encampments on Hounslow Heath are mentioned by several writers. Dr. Stukeley observes that a portion of a Roman road, "one quarter of a mile long, is still perfect to the east of the brook where the powder-mills are on Hounslow Heath, at which place the common road goes southward to pass it."<sup>1</sup> The same writer likewise informs us that Cæsar's camp, 60 paces square, was very perfect upon the heath, a plan of which is given in his work.<sup>2</sup> In Camden's Britannia, mention is made of a small Roman camp on the north-east towards King's Harbour, single-trenched, 90 paces by 132. Lord Winchelsea had some celts found on Hounslow Heath.<sup>3</sup> Glover, in his Survey of the Hundred of Isleworth, anno 1635, marks out two royal camps on the heath near Cranford, which he calls Shakesbury Hills. Leland, speaking of this Heath, says "There rennith a lande water through the Hethe of Hundeslaw as a drene to the hole hethe, that is of a great cunpace, and I passid by a bridge of tymbre over it."

History records it as having been the station of armies, and more than once the rendezvous of the principal military force of the kingdom. In 1215, immediately after the sealing of Magna Charta by King John, a tournament appointed by some of the barons to take place at Stamford, was adjourned to this heath.

We learn from Matthew Paris,<sup>1</sup> that shortly after the barons had forced the King to seal Magna Charta, several of them, supposing all danger was then over, appointed a tournament to be held at Stamford; whereupon Robert Fitzwalter, commander of the army of the barons, and other great men, who, still mistrusting the King, kept the Tower of London in their hands, wrote to William de Albini, the third baron of that name,<sup>2</sup> stating how expedient it was for them all to keep within the City of London, which was their chief dependence, and what disgrace it would be if by their negligence it should be lost; and therefore, by common advice, they deferred the tournament which was to take place at Stamford on the Monday after the feast of SS. Peter and Paul, to the Monday after the octaves of that feast; and that it should be holden upon the heath between Staines and Hounslow: which they did both for the security of themselves and the city. And therefore they sent to, and required their friends diligently to come provided with horse and arms, so that they might receive honour at the approaching tournament. The prize to be contended for was a bear, which a certain lady had promised to send them.

In 1217 a conference took place at Hounslow (probably on the heath) between the partizans of Henry the Third and those of the French Dauphin, who had invaded England; on which occasion that King, by letters patent, granted safe conduct to four peers and twenty knights, who came on the part of Louis.<sup>3</sup>

In 1267, the Earl of Gloucester, being at the head of the Londoners, then in a state of rebellion, assembled his forces upon the heath, and there threatened to give battle to King Henry; but, fearing that the contest would prove unequal, he retreated before the arrival of the royal power.<sup>4</sup>

In 1642 King Charles's army is said to have been intrenched upon Hounslow Heath immediately subsequent to the battle of Brentford. In the same year 23 Nov.<sup>1</sup> the Earl of Essex's army was mustered there;<sup>2</sup> and on the 3rd of August, 1647, the parliamentary forces under Sir Thomas Fairfax were assembled on Hounslow Heath to the number of 20,000 horse and foot, with a train of artillery, and all other provisions proportionable to such an army. Upon which occasion the Speakers of both Houses of Parliament appeared there with their maces, with several of the members.<sup>3</sup> The following is an account of that rendezvous as published in a journal of that period.<sup>4</sup> "There were present the Earls of Northumberland, Salisbury, and Kent; Lords Grey of Wark, Howard of Escrick, Wharton, Say and Sele, Mulgrave, and others; the Speaker of the House of Commons, and about 100 members. The whole army was drawn up in battalions, near a mile and a half in length. The General, accompanied with the said Lords and Commons, rode along through the army from regiment to regiment, and they were received with great acclamations. Having viewed the army, they took leave of the General, and some went to the Earl of Northumberland's at Syon, and others to the Lord Say and Sele's at Hanwell. Soon after the Palsgrave came into the field, who, with the General, and many gentlemen, viewed the army." After the review the army was quartered at Hounslow and the adjacent villages.<sup>5</sup>

In 1646 James the Second, who took great pains to view and discipline his army, which was raised for the purpose of over-awing the city of London and his Protestant subjects, and in which many noblemen of great name bore his commission, formed a sort of camp on Hounslow Heath, and by the great attention he had to their cloathing, arming, and discipline, rendered it a very complete body of men, which, though not very numerous (not exceeding thirteen or fourteen thousand), had the reputation of being the best paid, the best equipped, and the most sightly troops of any in Europe, and though they gave some umbrage at home, they raised the King and kingdom's credit to a great degree abroad.<sup>1</sup>

In the same year King James, by letters patent, granted to John Shales, his heirs and assigns, the right and privilege of holding a market upon Hounslow Heath, as long as the camp should continue there, and during any future encampment upon the heath, as also a weekly market on Thursdays for ever,<sup>2</sup> the latter of which has been discontinued several years, but was held within the memory of some of the present inhabitants. By other letters patent the same King further granted to the said John Shales the power of holding an annual fair at the market place upon Hounslow Heath to begin on the 1st of May, and continue twelve days.<sup>3</sup> The right of these patents were in 1791 vested in William Lowndes, Esq. of Chesham, Bucks. The fair has been discontinued.

In 1688 James II. collected a large body of troops on the heath, and when on a visit to the camp to review the soldiers, was alarmed by the loud acclamations of joy, on the arrival of the news of the acquittal of the "Seven Bishops," who had been tried for publishing a libel against the government. The Rev. Samuel Johnson was taken into custody, and severely punished for dispersing in the camp 1000 copies of a pamphlet written by himself, intituled "An

In 1793, barracks were erected on the heath by government, calculated to afford accommodation for more than 600 men. The buildings, situated at a short distance from the western road, consist of a centre forming the officers' apartments, and east and west wings, with some additional erections, within an inclosure of nearly four acres in extent. Near to the barracks is the ground for military exercise, containing 300 acres of land, of which 268 are in the parish of Isleworth.<sup>3</sup>

The only manufacture of importance at present is that of gunpowder, for making of which, about two miles to the south-west of Hounslow are the extensive mills of Messrs. Curtis and Harvey, which have been improved within the last few years, and where a curious pump, worked by wind-sails, raises from thirty to fifty tons of water in a minute. There are also other gunpowder-mills near Babor Bridge, and a mill formerly used for dressing flax, but now used as a snuff-mill.

The accidents which are inseparably connected with the manufacture of gunpowder, have not unfrequently occurred at Hounslow Heath: and have sometimes been attended with considerable loss of life. Some of the most important of these may here be noticed.

On the 11th March, 1758, the powder-mills belonging to Mr. Smith exploded, but happily no lives were lost. This accident, no doubt, gave rise to the following paragraph in the Reading Mercury:—"Reading, March 12, 1758. Last night, about nine o'clock, a slight shock of an earthquake was felt at Colebrook, Maidenhead, and other places between London and this town, but we do not hear of any damage it has done. It was also perceived here."

On the 29th Dec. following, about twelve o'clock at night, a stove of gunpowder at the mills belonging to Samuel Underhill, Esq., took fire. The quantity of powder then drying therein was great, consisting of 17 cwt., and the explosion was extremely violent and alarming, insomuch that Mr. Underhill's dwelling house was considerably damaged, though at near 300 yards distance from the works.

On the 27th Sept. 1770 a man was killed by the blowing up of two of the mills.

In 1772 (6th Jan.), about half-past nine in the morning, three powder-mills blew up. The shock was felt throughout the cities of London and Westminster, and it is said, at an almost incredible distance, viz. in Gloucestershire and the adjoining counties, more than 100 miles off.

In April 1774 two persons lost their lives by the blowing up of a mill. This happening on Sunday, during the time of divine service, the congregation in Isleworth church were so terrified, imagining the church was falling, that they hurried out with the greatest precipitation; however, happily no other mischief ensued.

On the 25th Sept. 1774 Mr. Taylor's powder-mills blew up, and one man perished by the explosion, whose head was found at the distance of more than a quarter of a mile from his body.

On the 14th Jan. 1796, between eight and nine o'clock, the powder-mills belonging to Mr. Hill, owing to the wheels of the mill not being properly supplied with oil, took fire, and blew up with a dreadful explosion; three men who were at work in the manufactory lost their lives, and the flames from the mill communicating to a punt in the mill river, in which were thirty barrels of gunpowder, set fire to the whole; the man who had the care of the vessel was shattered to pieces, and the boat blown out of the water. Not a vestige of the mill was left standing, and the heath was covered with bricks and tiles, and the mangled limbs of the unfortunate sufferers. The houses in Hounslow, Isleworth, and even Brentford, suffered considerably; the Crown Inn at Hounslow, and the King's Head at Brentford, had not a whole pane of glass in the windows; and the inhabitants near the spot were so terrified, that they not only forsook their dwellings, but a number of women, with their children, appeared half naked in the streets, expecting every moment that their houses would fall and bury them in the ruins. The loss on this occasion was estimated at near 20,000*l*. The shock was felt as far north of London as the extremities of Enfield parish, and south beyond Croydon.

On the 21st Aug. 1813, about twenty-five minutes past six in the morning, two mills blew up, and three persons, it was said, were killed.

In 1835 (Aug. 5) an explosion occurred at one of the mills belonging to Messrs. Curtis and Harvey. Fortunately the accident happened during the breakfast hour of the men, there being only two upon the works at the time, both of whom were killed. The effect of the shock was perceptible for many miles round the country.

Another dreadful explosion, attended with fatal consequences, occurred very recently (Wednesday 18 Dec. 1839) at the extensive gunpowder mills belonging to the same firm. By the force of the explosion one unfortunate man, named East (since dead) was blown directly through the doorway, and was found in a dreadfully mutilated state in the yard; another, named Jacobs, being afterwards found at the contrary end of the building. The building was used as a corning house, and the men were engaged in clearing it out. East, contrary to his instructions, did it in a manner never before attempted, using a wrong instrument.

The quality of the soil is extremely good; and the impolicy of suffering such an expanse of convertible land to lie waste was felt so early as the time of Hen. VIII., in the thirty-seventh year of whose reign a bill was framed for its inclosure, by which, power was given to the commissioners to assign allotments to the tenants and inhabitants of the parishes who had an interest in the waste, according to their respective claims; and it was enacted, "that such part and so much of the waste as was certified to belong to the King, should remain for ever copyhold land, and to be adjudged of the nature of copyhold lands, to all intents, constructions, and purposes."† This project, however, was not carried into effect.

In 1795 the inhabitants of Isleworth came to a resolution to petition parliament to enable them to inclose Hounslow Heath into small farms; and several of the surrounding parishes determined to follow their example. Notwithstanding this proposition was highly approved of by the late Duke of Northumberland, the lord of the manor, it was not carried into effect until the 53rd of Geo. III. when, by

Within a few years past numerous handsome houses have been erected, and plantations made, through which the appearance of this formerly desolate tract of country is materially changed.

A question has lately been brought before the magistrates at the Brentford petty sessions respecting the manorial right of free warren on Hounslow Heath within the manor of Isleworth-Syon. It was alleged that this right was vested in the Queen Dowager, under letters patent, granted by her late consort, King William IV., by which her Majesty and her deputies were entitled to shoot, and to follow game over any part of the said manor, as well on the heath as on other men's lands. It was also asserted by the solicitor, on the part of the Queen Dowager, that the manorial right above mentioned was still retained by her Majesty. On the other side, through the medium of Sir Frederick Pollock, on whose grounds (at Hatton) the trespass had been committed, it was contended that, to give the Queen Dowager the privileges claimed by her solicitor, it was necessary that the letters patent granted to her by her royal husband, should, on his demise, have been renewed by her present Majesty, Queen Victoria, which not being the case, the right had lapsed into the Crown. He then recited various other grants of Charles I. &c. by which Hanworth Park and Kempton Park (both included in the letters patent), with the right of free warren over them, had been granted to different individuals. In the course of the investigation it was understood that the Duke of Northumberland claimed the right of free warren over the manor of Isleworth-Syon and the grant made to the ninth Duke of Northumberland by King James I. was produced, from which it appeared that the right of free warren for the manor of Isleworth-Syon was vested in the Duke of Northumberland unconditionally, and which grant had in no-wise been re-called. The manor of Isleworth-Syon formed part of the extent of ground named in the letters patent produced, and it was contended, on the part of his Grace, that his late Majesty had no power to insert in them the right of free warren over that manor, which had been disposed of by one of his royal predecessors. It may be right to observe that one part of Hounslow Heath formerly extended to the very pales of Bushy Park, in the manor of Hampton, and until the inclosures it would have been difficult to have drawn a line of demarcation between the two manors of Isleworth-Syon and Hampton, but such line must have been defined by the commissioners under the inclosures, and the Queen Dowager's right of free warren could only be given even by letters patent over that part of the heath now within the manor of Hampton.

This discussion took place on the 12th Oct. 1839. The question, however, has been withdrawn, it not being the intention of the Queen Dowager, nor of the Crown, to press the claim.

In the Bodleian Library at Oxford is a MS. (MS. Bodl. F. 2. 12. 2351, N. 565. p. 122) which formerly belonged to the library at Syon; probably a production of their own Scriptorium, and one of the most curious in the catalogue. It is a folio volume, on vellum, of the latter half of the fifteenth century, closely written, and appears to be the results of the travels of William Wey, B. D. Fellow of the Royal College of St. Mary and St. Nicholas at Eton, near Windsor, who died in 1474. He had been twice to the sepulchre, and had once visited the shrine of St. James of Compostella in Spain. The following is a detailed list of its contents:—

1. Goods given by William Wey to the Church of Jerusalem, fol. 1, ro.
2. Changes of money from England to Rome and Venice, fol. 3, ro.

In this discourse the nature of Pardons and Indulgences in general is largely treated of, but more particularly of those procured at the court of Rome for Syon Monastery, by Father Thomas Fishbourne, confessor-general, circa 1420.

— Sir John Crosby (founder of Crosby Hall in Bishopsgate-street, and Sheriff of London 1470), by his will, dated March 2, 1471, proved Feb. 6, 1475, bequeathed "to the abbes and the father, brethren and sisters, of the Monastery of Syon, towards the supportacion of the charge of the same house, to the intent that they, as soon as they may goodly after my decease, do placebo, dirge, and mass of requiem, by them to be sung by note, for my soul, and for the soul of Anneys late my wife, and for the souls of all my children passed to God, and for all Christian souls, in their convent church of the said house, and also that they otherwise have my soul specially recommended unto our Lord God among their devout prayers, xl." He also bequeathed "to the abbess of the same monasterie, to pray specially for my soul, &c. and to the father of the same . . . terie, under like form, &c." (See Gough's Sepulchral

— It appears from the Parliamentary Rolls (Rot. Parl. 19 Hen. VII. m. 5 & 6. n. 7.) that the advowson of Olney, with an acre of land there, the chapel of Weston, and the portion of Emerton, in the county of Bucks, were granted to Syon Monastery in 1503 in exchange for " all those lands and tenements which by the King were and yet are inclosed of new with a pale, and within the same pale containing by estimation in circuit by the said pale 9642 feet, and also 20 feet of land without the same pale, next adjoining to the same pale, the same 20 feet of land only to commence from the gate entering into the said inclosure on the west part, and so going towards the south, and then turning to a river called the Thames towards the east, for a necessary and common highway from the said gate to the passage of the said river of Thames, within the parishes of Isleworth and Twickenham in the county of Middlesex."

Page 81. In 1513, Sir Richard Sutton, one of the Founders of Brazenose College, Oxford, was steward of Syon Monastery, and had chambers there, where he often resided towards the close of his life. By his will, dated 16 March, 15 Hen. VIII., of which the following is an extract, he bequeathed certain estates in the town of Brentford to the monastery, for the maintenance of a priest to pray for his soul, &c. as also a legacy of 20*l.* to the Lady Abbess.

“ Item, I will that my Lady Abbessse of the Monastery of Syon have xx<sup>i</sup> to pray for me, as I intend their weall, most lowley beseeching theym of their great charitie to do the same to my poor soule, and to forgive me. Item, I the said Richard will that all suche persons and their heires that stand and be possessed and seized of my houses and tenements in Braynforth, which I late purchased of Jane Wolmer, widdowe, and of a house that I have on the north side of the Kyngs highe waye there, shall stande, be possessed, and seased thereof, to th’use of me the said Richard and myn heires, and to perfourme my last wille, to the intent that with the profits of the same, as farre as they will extende, they shall go towards the fynding of an honest preest to pray for my soule, and all the soules that God and I would have praid for. And that the seid preest shall have all the profits of the same towards his wages, to teche all those women that intend to be professed and admytted unto the house of Syon; and my Lady Abbessse, yf it please her, to give the said preest mete and drink, and logging, and the said preest to say grase dailey, and to geve attendance upon the steward of the said house of Syon at dinner and supper, and to do divine service afore him. Also I will that my sayde feoffees shall stande and be seized of the premises in Braynforth ende to the entent aforesaid, unto suche time my said Lady Abbessse, or her successors, may obtain and gett of the Kings grace, his heirs or successors, licence of the mortyfying (amortizing) of the premises to the said Abbessse and her successors, and also licence of the lords mediat and immediat, and after such licence by them obteyned and had of the premises, then my said feoffees shall stande and be seased of the premises to th’use of my seid lady abbessse and her successors for ever; and that my feoffees shall make a sufficient estate and feofment to my said Lady Abbessse and her successors of the premyssees for ever, to the intent aforesaid, so that the sayde licence be obteyned and gotten within the space of twenty yeres next after my decease.

“ Item, I ordeyn and make my said lady abbas of Syon, and Maister John Fwterer, general confessor of the seid monastery, and Maister Alexander Bell, my goostly fader, overseers of this my present will and testament, moost humbly beseeching them to forgive me that I have offended theym in worde, worke, or thou their charitie that it may please theym to pray for the houle convent, as I trust I shall pray for them in heryn." He likewise bequeathed to his nephew John Sutton, of Sutton, his "beddyng and householde stuffe," which he had at Syon; and to "Richard Sutton, yeoman of the chambre, with the Queen's grace," certain lands which Lawrence Ledham held to farm in Isleworth of the yearly value of 5*l.* and more.

Sir Richard Sutton's will was proved in St. Paul's Cathedral Nov. 7, 1521, by two of the executors, John Sutton and Roger Leigh, and he is supposed, by his biographer, the late Archdeacon Churton, to have been buried in this monastery.<sup>1</sup>

According to the pedigree of Danvers, from Aske's Collections, printed in the Collectanea Topog. et Genealogica, vol. i. p. 326, Constantia Browne, abbess of Syon Monastery, was the daughter of Robert Browne, of Halton by Oxford, by the daughter of William Bessells, of Bessells; and granddaughter of Annes Baldington, of Aldebury, in Oxfordshire, sister to John Danvers, a descendant of John Danvers, of Cotherop by Banbury. Her cousin, Ralph Tracy, was prior of the Carthusian Monastery of Sheen, by Syon, and was there slain by Godwyn, a monk of that house.

— Amongst the miscellaneous letters printed in the fifth volume of the State Papers, p. 62, is the following, bearing date 6 Nov. A. D. 1536, from Agnes Jordan, abbess of Syon Monastery, to Lord Cromwell, wherein she agrees to receive the Lady Margaret Douglas, daughter of Margaret, Queen of Scotland (by her second husband, Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus), and niece to Henry the Eighth.

Lady Margaret Douglas, the subject of the foregoing letter, was affianced to Lord Thomas Howard (half-brother to the Duke of Norfolk) without the King's consent, which so irritated that monarch, that both parties were committed to the Tower. Lord Thomas dying there shortly after, the Lady Margaret was set at liberty, and, from the tenor of the above letter, appears to have been placed at Syon Monastery. This last circumstance, however, we do not find noticed by either contemporaneous or modern writers. Lady Margaret subsequently married Matthew Earl of Lenox, and by him had issue Henry Lord Darnley, husband of the unfortunate Mary Queen of Scots. She died at Hackney in 1577, and was buried in Westminster Abbey.

Page 87. Richard Whitford was the nephew of Richard Whitford, a person of considerable substance, and of an ancient family in Flintshire, in North Wales, having also large possessions at Farnworth and Widdows, in Lancashire; who was first a clergyman, but afterwards, forsaking the world, entered the Monastery of Syon, where he died in the year 1511.

Richard Whitford, the author, noticed in the page referred to, was educated in Oxford and afterwards became Chaplain to Richard Fox, Bishop of Winchester; during which time he maintained a correspondence with Sir Thomas More, Erasmus, and other learned men of the age. At last, being weary of the world, he also entered Syon Monastery, where he remained till the dissolution of that house. He was afterwards entertained by William Blount, Lord Montjoy, who made it his study to assist all that were in distress in those troublesome times. Whitford was alive in 1541; but the time of his death is not recorded. (Dodd's Church Hist. vol. i. p. 245.)

I. pt. ii. p. 691.) from the Council to Archbishop Cranmer, Mr. Controullour, and others, &c. dated at Westminster, 11 Nov. 1541, confirms Holinshed's and Hall's Statements respecting Queen Katharine Howard's removal from Hampton Court to Syon, together with her establishment there.

"First, the King's pleasure is, that the Queen, with convenient diligence, remove to the house of Syon, there to remain, till the matter be further ordred, in the state of a Queen, furnished moderately, as her life and conditions hath deserved; that is to say, with the furniture of three chambers, hauged with mean stuff, without any cloth of astate; of which three, one shall serve for Mr. Baynton and thothers to dine in, and thother two to serve for her use; and with a mean numbere of servants, according to a booke which wee send unto you herewith; the proportion whereof to be augmented or diminished the King's Highnes reserveth to your discretions, who, his Majesty thinketh, will not excede a necessary furniture.

"The King's Highnes pleasure is, that the Queen have, at her election, four gentlewomen and two chamberers; foreseeing alwayes that my lady Baynton bee one, whose husband, the King's pleasure is, should attend uppon the Queen, to have the rule and government of the whole house; and with him the Almoner (Nicholas Heath, Bishop of Rochester) to be also associate. Besides which three personages by name, that is to say, Mr. Baynton, his wife, and the Almoner, the King's Highnes appointeth none specially to remaine with her; and the number of the rest, before specified, besides those that bee at her choice, to be appointed by your discretions, such only to remain at Hampton Court, to abide the Queen's removing, as, after the ordre before specified, shall bee attendant at Syon; doing you, Mr. Controullour, to understand, that Mr. Weldon, Master of the Houshold, hath been here spoken unto, which he also doth, to make provision of wine, beer, and other necessaries at Syon for that purpose."

— The following account of the progress of the funeral of King Henry the Eighth from Whitehall to Syon Monastery is extracted from Sandford's Genealogical History of the Kings of England, p. 493.

" With an exceeding great train of four miles in length, the body was conducted to Syon, where it was received at the church door by the Bishops of London, Bristol, and Gloucester, who performed dirige that night and next morning: the corps, being brought into the church, was placed in a hearse like that at Whitehall, but the effigies was conveyed into the vestry. The next morning, about six of the clock, after the third sound of the trumpets, the whole company, the Marquis Dorset being chief mourner, proceeded for Windsor."

P. 96. The following entries relative to Syon Monastery occur among the Privy Purse Expenses of Queen Mary, edited by Sir Frederick Madden, pp. xxx. 48, 57.

" In June 1522, Queen Mary visited the Convent of Brigitines at Syon, where she offered the sum of 12*d*."

" In December 1537 (29 Hen. 8.) she received a present (what it was is not mentioned) from the abbess of Syon (Agnes Jordan), and to the person who brought it she gave 3*s*. 9*d*."

Another entry states that " in January 1537-38 she gave to a servant of the same abbess for bringing puddings, viij*d*."

— In the British Museum<sup>1</sup> is a copy of Queen Mary's will, from the original in Mr. Hale's hands, at Alderley, in Gloucestershire, which Sir F. Madden (who has printed it in the Appendix to his Memoir of that Queen) observes has been most unaccountably passed over without notice by every writer from that time to the present. This document bears date 30th April, 1558, and is signed not only at the beginning and end, but at the top and bottom of every page, and authenticated by her privy signet. Amongst the various sums bequeathed in it, and which are inserted by Mary herself, are the following,—to the two religious houses of Syon and Sheen.

" And whereas the Howses of Shene and Sion, the which were erected by my most noble progenitor K. Henry the Fyfte

<sup>3</sup> See Mr. Bolton Corney's "Curiosities of Literature Illustrated;" in which the following summary of Hariot's Biography is given: "Thomas Hariot was by birth and education an Oxonian. He became mathematical tutor to Sir Walter Raleigh; made a voyage in his service to Virginia with Sir Richard Grenville in 1585; returned with Sir Francis Drake in 1586; and published an account of the colony, in the success of which Sir Walter was deeply interested, in 1588. We afterwards lose sight of him for some years—which, it is probable, were passed in studious retirement. Sir Walter was committed to the Tower on the 19th July, 1603; and in 1605 Hariot appears as one of the six persons who had obtained leave to repair to him at convenient time. Sir Walter had previously introduced him to the Earl of Northumberland (the favourer of all good learning), who generously conferred on him an annual pension of £120—which enabled him to devote his whole time to philosophical pursuits. In 1607 he observed the Halleian comet; in 1609 he introduced the use of the new cyphers, and in 1610 he commenced his observations on the Satellites of Jupiter, and on the Solar Spots at Syon House—where, by the munificence of his noble patron, he was allowed to reside. Camden, Hakluyt, Captain Smith, and other worthies of those times, have borne unequivocal testimony to his merit. He died in 1621; and the results of his algebraic researches were published in 1631. Other remarkable proofs of his attachment to science remain in MS."

Wilmot's Fruit Garden, Isleworth.—The extensive horticultural establishment consists of upwards of sixty acres, in different gardens attached and detached and surrounded for the most part by good walls. The grounds are wholly occupied by fruit-trees, fruit shrubs, and strawberries, for with the exception of tart cherries, which Mr. Wilmot was the first to bring extensively to market about the year 1836, no culinary vegetables are cultivated. There are an almost countless number of hot-houses and pits in these gardens, occupied in forcing strawberries, peaches, and grapes, and with pine apples. The principal strawberry forced here, and also at Spring Grove, is Keen's seedling; the Gros-à-potée scarlet for an early crop, and the Bostwick for the second crop; all the three are great bearers. Mr. W. embraces every opportunity of introducing the best new sorts of tree-fruits, by grafting them on the old sorts, both trained and standards.

Keen's Fruit Garden, Isleworth.—The extent of these grounds is about the same as those of Mr. Wilmot, and like them they are almost entirely devoted to the culture of fruits: there are here, however, very few walls or hot-houses, and no pines or peaches are grown. China roses are forced to a great extent in vinerys, and the pots, when in flower, sent to market. Sea-cale and rhubarb are also forced in pits. Instead of being surrounded and intersected by walls, the grounds here are sheltered by hedges, chiefly of common laurel, but also in some places of yew and hawthorn, the whole planted by Mr. Keen himself. They are planted on raised banks, kept very narrow and high, the crest of the hedge being left irregular as to height. At the base on the steep bank of earth there is a row of strawberries, and a row of early peas. The latter vegetable, rhubarb, and sea cale, are the only culinary plants grown by Mr. Keen for the market. The greater part of the garden is covered with Keen's seedling strawberry and Keen's seedling gooseberry, two of the best hardy fruits of their kinds ever raised: being large, of good flavour, hardy, and great bearers. In the latter respects Keen's strawberry is not surpassed by any variety, which, considering the size of the fruit, is a most valuable property. The treatment of strawberries here is the same as at Mr. Wilmot's. The sort of rhubarb grown in both gardens, and also in Spring Grove, is the early variety, commonly called the Siberian. There are a number of large walnut trees here, which Mr. K. raised from the nut above forty years ago. Mr.

Keen, who died at Isleworth the 21st August, 1835, aged 73, was the proprietor of the greater part of his garden, which very considerable property he attained chiefly by industry, and a judicious marriage, frankly avowing that he began the world without a shilling of capital. Mr. Warren, son-in-law of the late Michael Keen, is the present proprietor of the land.

A voluntary commutation of the tithes of the parish of Isleworth has lately been completed, giving the vicar a yearly income of 800*l*, and the proprietors of the great tithes 150*l*. per annum. In the provisional agreement the lands in the parish are very accurately classed under four Schedules, the particulars of which are already given in p. 127.

The rectorial glebe lands of the parish, which, if not in the hands of the owner or owners, would be subject to tithes, amount to 64a. 1r. 16p., of which glebe 41a. 2r. 6p. belong to the Messrs. Stanbrough, 20a. 0r. 23p. belong to the Marquess of Ailsa, and 2a. 2r. 27p. to the Dowager Lady Cooper, exclusive of the Rectory House and Garden containing 1a. 0r. 17p., now belonging to Mr. James Stanbrough, for the whole of which a stipend of 20*l*. a year is paid to the Vicar.

The following is the amount of the water in the parish, for which no regular tithe composition has ever been paid :—

Page 159. On a blue slab on the floor near the altar rails in Isleworth Church. Arms, a double impalement; the female coat in the centre, viz. Quarterly, 1 and 4, Two bars charged with three martlets on each; 2 and 3, an eagle displayed (Temple); Dexter impalement, in a bend three escallops (Bernard); sinister impalement, on a chief three estoiles (Laws). Inscription: "In the name of God, Amen. Here resteth the body of Susanna, late wife of Nicholas Laws, Esq. She was the 5th daughter of Thomas Temple, of Franckton, in the county of Warwick, Esq. She was first married to Samuel Bernard, to whom she left one son, Thomas Bernard, now of the Inner Temple, Esq. To the said Nicholas Laws two sons, James and Temple, whom God preserve. She departed this life for a better the 20th day of Aprill, in the year of the Lord 1707, in the 47th year of her age."

The father of this lady was son of John Temple, of Franckton, a younger brother of Sir Thomas Temple, of Stowe, Bart. Her first husband, to whom she was married in 1684, was the son of an ejected Doctor of Divinity, and therefore, in all probability, son of Dr. Samuel Barnard, who died in 1657, having been dispossessed of the living of Croydon in Surrey. Mr. Barnard was the Chief Justice of Jamaica, and held, besides, a dormant Lieut.-Governor's Commission. He died in 1695, and she was married to Colonel Laws (afterwards Sir Nicholas Laws, and Governor of Jamaica) in 1696. Of her two sons, the eldest, James (whose widow remarried William the eighth Earl of Home), died without issue; and the issue of Temple, the younger son, who died in 1754, is presumed to be extinct.

— About the middle of the seventeenth century the neighbourhood of Isleworth and Brentford was visited very severely with the plague. At Isleworth a cottage was set apart as a pest-house, on the site of which now stands the New Union Workhouse, and it is more than probable that the land adjoining it was appropriated as a burial-ground. There are no public or private records to show that this cottage was used as a pest-house since the end of the seventeenth century; but it is a singular instance that the same piece of ground, so long since dedicated to the afflicted, should be chosen as a proper situation for a building in which the houseless will find a home, and the widow and the fatherless protection. At some distance from Brentford another pest-house was appointed, adjoining or near to a piece of land still known by the name of Dead Man's Grave.

—— In 1377, Walter Sprot, bailiff of the manor of Isleworth, and Walter Baker, keeper of Isleworth-park, received 5*l.* from Sir John Ipre, knight, for repairing and improving certain decayed inclosures in the above park, in places where it was necessary.<sup>2</sup>

—— In 1399 (13 Oct.) Henry the Fourth granted the manor of Isleworth to Master Henry Bowet, at the yearly rent of 100 marks, payable at the Exchequer. Previously to this grant Richard Colle, John atte Wyke, and Thomas atte Felde, were bailiffs of the manor.<sup>3</sup>

Page 486. Robert de Hounslow, who flourished A. D. 1430, was a native of the place from which he derived his name, and received his education at Trinity College, Oxford. He afterwards became a friar of the hospital of Hounslow; and, being a man of ability, was chosen the provincial of the order for England, Scotland, and, Ireland, and through his zeal in collecting alms, the liberty of many Christian captives was effectually procured. His writings are stated to be a book of Sermones Synodales, and another of Epistolæ. (Pitts, A. Wood, and Tanner.)

Clement Maydestone, another learned brother of this house, was the author of an account of the Martyrdom of Archbishop Scrope,<sup>2</sup> and of several religious treatises attached to the edition of the Sarum Ordinale which was printed by Caxton.<sup>3</sup> In the preface to the latter work he mentions his father Thomas Maydestone, esq.; as he does again in a passage which will be presently quoted. Tanner<sup>1</sup> has extracted the following record concerning him from the register of Richard Clifford, Bishop of London: "Frater Clemens Maydeston, confrater domus de Houndeslowe, ordinem Subdiaconi 20 Sept. MCCCCX, Diaconi 20 Dec. MCCCCX. Presbyteri 19 Sept. MCCCCXII. suscepit." Tanner also states that it appears from the preface of the Directorium Sacerdotum, that he was of the order of St. Bridget; which seems to show that he was received into the Monastery of Syon. A strange anecdote respecting the body of King Henry IV. that it was thrown into the Thames between Barking and Gravesend, and not conveyed to Canterbury for interment (but which has been disproved by the recent opening of that monarch's tomb at Canterbury,<sup>2</sup>) has been handed down on the authority of Clement Maydestone, who, in his life of Archbishop Scrope, says, that it was related to his father in the friary of Hounslow. The manner of its introduction may be quoted, as illustrative of the custom of receiving the wayfarer to the hospitalities of the friars' board. "About thirty days after the death of Henry IV. there came a certain man of his household to the house of the Holy Trinity at Hounslow for refreshment. And while they were conversing at dinner about the righteousness of that King's manners, the said man answered to a certain Squire, Thomas Maydestone, sitting at the same table, that," &c.

<sup>1</sup> Glover's Survey of Isleworth in 1653 describes two houses nearly adjoining, one of which is called Sir Francis Darcy's, the other Sir Richard Wynne's. Mrs. Gotobed's house was for several years the property of the late General Warde, and successively in the occupation of Sir Nathaniel Duckenfield, Bart., the Earl of Glasgow, and General Morrison.

Ames, vol. i. p. 323. There were other editions of this Directorium, printed by Pynson in 1498, 1503, and 1508, but, under the superintendence of other editors. Dr. Dibdin has described the copy of Caxton's, which is preserved in the Bodleian Library; there is one wanting the preface in the Royal Library at the British Museum.

THIS Work, which has been compiled upon a diligent comparison of the ancient Historians, and other Works relating to the Civil and Ecclesiastical History of London, with the addition of much original information derived from heraldic and genealogical manuscripts, will comprise—

A Description of the Church, Monuments, &c.

Extracts from the Parish Registers;

Copies of all the Epitaphs recently existing in the Church;

A complete List of all Benefactions;

A Catalogue of the Rectors.

The whole copiously illustrated with genealogical and biographical notes.

It will be printed in octavo, with a Frontispiece representing the Churches of St. Bartholomew and St. Benit Fink, as they lately appeared after the demolition of the Royal Exchange.

Price Six Shillings.

The Names of Subscribers will be received by Messrs. Nichols and Son, 25, Parliament-street; Mr. Moon, Threadneedle-street; or by the Author, 9, Grafton-street, Fitzroy-square.
